Services Held Sunday For Victor Hueneman, Farmer

SERVICES HELD AT PEACE REFORMED CHURCH

Mr. Hueneman Died Thursday At Home North Of Klemme

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 2:15 o'clock at the Peace Reformed Church 3 miles north of Klemme for Mr. Victor Calvin Hueneman, 57, who died at his farm home near the church on Thursday.

The funeral sermon was by the Rev. John DeVries of Allison, Iowa, who spoke from the Text: Acts 24-15: "There shall be a resurrection of the dead." A double quartette composed of Celia Bredlow, Shirley Greiman, Sheryl Goll, Bethel Haberkamp, Robert Streyle, Donald Woiwood, Lyle Katter and Calvin Bredlow sang "My Faith Looks Up To Thee," and "Abide With Me." Marie Streyle was the accompanist at the organ.

The arrangements were in charge of the Wellemeyer Funeral Service of Klemme, and interment was in the Peace Reformed Church cemetery, near his father and grandparents. Mr. Hueneman was carried to his final resting place by Elmer Hueneman, Paul Hueneman, Gideon Wittenburg, Ben V. Greiman, Ben Katter and Arthur Katter.

The obiturary appears elsewhere in this isse of The Times.

HELLO FOLKS

Mr. and Mrs. Dana Fuller of Red Oak, Iowa, are the parents of a baby boy, born December 29th. Mrs. Fuller will be remembered as the former Miss Barbara Johnson of Klemme, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. W. "Happy" Johnson, now of Dakota City.

A baby daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Merle Etchen at the Mercy haspital of December 22. Theis is the first child and she will be named Cheryl.

AGRICULTURAL LAND CREDIT DELAYED—

In regard to the 1952 agricultural land credit allowed each land owner a credit on 40 acres or more (except the 40 acres on which the owner is receiving a homestead credit) when the general fund of the school budget is in excess of 15 mills.

The legislature appropriated $5,000,000.00 yearly to farm acreage in school districts having a millage in excess of 15 mills. The credit is determined by the total valuation in the 99 counties.

This credit was supposed to be sent to the County Auditor in time for him to put it on the Tax lists as a credit on your tax. This has not been done for 1951 and it will be necessary to pay your tax in the regular way and then the County Treasurer will issue a Land Credit check for the amount due.

Taxes will be ready for payment January 1st. Receipts are all written so that we will be able to issue a statement or collect the tax after that date.

We do show an increase in most districts. This is due to the added costs that they have to pay.

—Roy L. McMillin,
County Treasurer.

IOWA MILESTONES IN 1951

Iowa farms are the most mechanized in the world; Iowa farmers more than doubled their amount of power machinery between 1940 and 1950. There are 1.1 tractors for every farm in the state.

Iowa is the nation's second largest processor of soy beans: As well as being the United States' second largest grower of soy beans, Iowa is second in their processing. The state's 33 processing plants can turn out a million pounds of soy bean oil meal daily.

More Iowa farm families use electricity than there are farms in the state: There are 201,527 rural power customers in Iowa and only 200, 679 farms.

Iowa boasts the nation's largest nursery business. Southwest Iowa is the greatest single nursery center in North America.

There is more meat raised and slaughtered in Iowa than in any other state: Iowa leads the nation in the number of meat animals on farms, the number sent to market, the number slaughtered and the number of pounds of meats handled by packers.

Iowa is one of six states with less farm mortgage debt than it had five years ago: While farm mortgage debt throughout the nation were increasing 24.5 percent, Iowa's farm mortgage debt decreased nearly 10 percent.

Iowa leads the nation in timothy seed production: Iowa's production of 440,000 bushels of timothy seed is one-third of the U. S. crop.

In 15 years Iowa has climbed from 34 to fourth among turkey producing states: Iowa's '51 turkey crop amounted to 3,290,000 birds.

During the first ten months of 1951 Iowa again led the nation in cash farm income: Preliminary estimates of Iowa's farm income from January through October show a total of $1,943,139,000.

Nearly 20 percent of Iowa's manufacturing plants have been founded since World War II: All but one of Iowa's 99 counties has one new industry founded since 1945.

Iowa has the world's only manufacturer of tiling spades, the world's largest producer of feather dusters and the only glove knitting mill west of the Mississippi river.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT TO KLEMME YOUNG MAN

Mr. and Mrs. John Schroeder of Garner announce the engagement of Mrs. Schroeder's sister, Betty Lou Griffen, to Harlan E. Carolus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Carolus of Klemme.

All of this money was sent to the State Conservation Commission office in Des Moines.

About Chattel Mortgages

Mrs. Sonquist, Recorder, invites the people of Hancock County to come in to her office and check up on themselves to see if there are chattel mortgages filed against them. Many chattel mortgages are filed and the person giving them does not know that they have been filed and therefore are never released.

The following, House File 421, Section 4 enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Iowa went into effect May 11, 1951:

"Release of Mortgages. When the amount due on any chattel mortgage, conditional sales contract, or pledge of personal property is paid, the mortgagee, conditional vendor, pledgee or his personal representative or assignee, or those legally acting for him shall release of reord such instrument evidencing the security, at his own expense, by filing with the original instrument a duly executed satisfaction piece or release, or by indorsing a satisfaction on the index book under the heading of "remarks" in the same manner as mortgages are released by marginal satisfaction, and when so released on index book, the Recorder shall enter a memorandum thereof on the original instrument or on the record thereof, if recorded.

"Any person who fails to comply with the provisions of this section within thirty days after being requested in writing shall forfeit to the mortagor, conditional vendee or the pledgor the sum of $25.00.

Respectfully,
—Edith Sonquist,
County Recorder.

The Liberty Woman's Society will meet today, Wednesday at 1:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. H. Barkema. Mrs. Carol Brager and Mrs. Frank. Bredlow will be the assisting hostesses. Worship Leader will be Mrs. Howard Spitler, and the Lesson Leader is Mrs. Ronald Gibbs.

How does cancer spread through the body?

The spread of a cancer depends upon the type of cancer and the organ originally involved. The three methods of spread are, 1. by direct extension, that is, the tumor grows through the structure in which it originated to involve neighboring tissues or organs, 2. by the lymphatic channels into the lymph nodes into which they drain, and then into the next chain of nodes or into a distant organ, and 3. by the blood stream when the tumor grows into a blood vessel, usually a vein, so that tiny pieces may be broken off and transplanted to the lungs, which act as a filter.

How rapidly does cancer grow?

Each malignant tumor has its own rate of growth depending upon its nature and upon its ability to find nourishment for development. Generally, cancers grow more slowly in the aged where they find greater difficulty in securing the materials for growth, and more rapidly in the young. Moreover, some cancers, as for example, a certain type of skin cancer on the face, usually grows so slowly that it may be present for years without causing significant trouble. This latter type rarely kills its host who usually dies from something else before the tumor involves vital organs. This whole problem of the factors which influence the rate of growth of malignant tumors is now under intensive study by many scientists who hope to find some harmless substance which will block the essential nutritive factors from the cancer cells and make them die of malnutrition.

By Paul Henderson,
County Extension Director

Most of the people who buy and use the milk, meat and other farm products produced on Iowa farms work at industrial and commerical jobs. The amount of money they earn largely sets the amount they spend for farm products. And in turn, the amount they spend influences the price of the things Iowa farmers sell.

That's why forward-looking farmers always keep an eye on prospective business conditions. Lowell A. Kutish, extension economist at Iowa State College, reports that most business observers are expecting business to remain near present rates or to increase.

The year 1951 is ending with most lines of business moving at a rapid clip. Everyone who can work and who really wants to work has a job. Government figures for recent months show fewer than 2 million people unemployed. That's only about two-thirds as many as were out of work a year ago.

Business is humming fastest in those industries producing heavy industrial equipment. They are turning out record amounts of such things as railroad cars and locomotives, steam boilers, turbines, electric generators and machine tools. (Machine tools are machines for making parts that are used in making other machines.)

Many of these industries have enough orders on hand to keep them busy through most or all of 1952. Orders are especially large for railroad cars and locomotives, refinery and chemical equipment, factory equipment, office machines and machine tools.

While business is its own best customer, Kutish points out that customers are not buying frantically—although by most standards, sales are not bad. We don't have the wild buying splurge that was characteristic of this time last year. Many families and individuals bought all they wanted or could afford in the last half of 1950 or the first half of 1951. Now they are making those "easy payments" or are saving their money.

Sales of household appliances, automobiles, furniture, rugs and TV and radio sets are lagging. The soft goods industries are in a slump, too. Soft goods are clothing, textiles, shoes and the like. Consumers, retailers wholesalers and manufacturers stocked up heavily after Korea. Now they are using up what they bought.

These industries usually follow a pattern of several months of good business, followed by a like period of poor business, Kutish says. Now they are in a period of poor business.

Offsetting this is the strong business in the heavy industrial lines. This is sparked by the rapidly rising output of military equipment and supplies; Kutish looks for military output to continue to rise throughout all of 1952.

Week Of Prayer

The week of January 6th will be observed as the "Universal Week of Prayer." Many congregations will have special services. All Christians can join in private devotions.

Martha Circle Met

The Martha Circle met at the home of Mrs. Claude White on December 27. Mrs. Siebert Shoop was assistant hostess.

Mrs. Evertt Guth had devotions, after which a social time was enjoyed. Mrs. Gordon Schubert was in charge of the games. Eleven members and 8 children were present. Home made ice cream and cake were served for lunch.

Christmas Holidays Time Chosen For Weddings

MISS ESTHER KLINGE BRIDE OF MERLE BERTILSON DOWS FARMER

Peace Reformed Church Was Setting For Candle Light Ceremony December 26

Miss Esther Klinge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Klinge of Klemme, became the bride of Merle Bertilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Bertilson of Dows, in a candle light, double-ring ceremony at the Peace Reformed Church north of Klemme at 8:00 o'clock Wednesday evening, December 26, 1951. The Rev. A. J. Tolo of Dows and the Henry Huenemann, oficiated.

Baskets of white pompoms and lighted candles decorated the altar.

Before and during the ceremony Rev. A. J. Tolo sang "I Love You Truly" and "The Wedding Prayer." Mrs. Ernest Gerardi accompanied at the organ.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white bridal satin gown with a fitted bodice, long sleeves which tapered to a point over the hand. The gathered skirt fell into a short train. The finger-tip veil was of bridal illusion, held by a white head band. She carried a bouquet of yellow rose buds on a white Bible, which was a gift from the groom.

Miss LeMae Ingebritson, a college classmate of the bride, was maid of honor . She wore an orchid satin gown and carried a colonial style bouquet of yellow roses and white pompoms. Miss Lois Stille, friend of the bride, was bridesmaid. She wore a purple satin gown identical to the maid of honor, and also carried a colonial style bouquet.

Adrian Bertilson, brother of the bridegroom, and Merle Klinge, brother of the bride, served as bestmen. Maynard Bertilson and Wayne Klinge served as ushers and candle lighters.

The bride's mother wore a wine suit with white accessories and a corsage of white gardenias. The bridegroom's mothther wore a purple crepe dress and a corsage of white gardenias.

A reception was held in the Church parlors immediately following the ceremony. Miss Lois Ballinger, a cousin of the bride, was in charge of the guest book. Mrs. Wayne Klinge served as hostess. A three-tier wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom centered the bridal table. Mrs. Elmer Brandt of Clarion, and Mrs. Tory Nodland of Kanawha, cut the wedding cake. Mrs. Dale Anderson of Dows, and Mrs. Maynard Bertilson of Clarion poured.

Miss Ella Marie Buckley, Miss Margaret Buckley, Miss Lois Lau, Mrs. Leland Hummel, Mrs. George Kallas, and Mrs. Johnny Goll were in charge of the gifts.

The couple left on a short wedding trip after which they will make their home on a farm near Clarion.

Turkey Dinner Held At Beier's

A big turkey dinner was held at the Elmer Beier home Sunday in honor of Gene Beier who is leaving for the service. Those attending were: Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Bridges and family of Thornton, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Bridges and family, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Bridges and family, Grandma Bridges and Fred Beier. Out of town guests were La Vonne Beier of Des Moines, Mrs. Maude Stille, Miriam and Barbara, Irene Bridges, Mrs. Walter Drake and daughters all from De Ridder La. Russell Thorson was an evening caller.

MISS ERDENE NELSON BRIDE OF PVT. ROBT. HALFERTY

Wedding Took Place At Methodist Church, December 26

High noon, Wednesday, December 26, 1951, was the time chosen for the marriage of Miss Erdene Nelson, of Des Moines, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Verner Nelson of Klemme, to Pvt. Robert Halferty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Halferty of Ollie. The wedding took place in the Klemme Methodist Church.

Rev. E. M. Egeland performed the double-ring ceremony. Maurice Jacobs provided nuptial music on the organ during the ceremony, and Miss La Vohn Beier of Des Moines sang "Because," and "I Love You Truly."

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a beige suit. Her hat was trimmed with orange blossoms and sequin teardrops. Her other accessories were forest green. Her bouquet was a white calla lily with orange blossoms on white streamers, which she carried on a white Bible. Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Ardella Nelson of Madison, Wisconsin, who was attired in a green suit, with grey accessories. Her bouquet was of white and red carnations.

The bride's mother wore a blue dress, with a corsage of pink roses.

Christmas greens decorated the front of the church. Silver ribbon and greens lined the aisles and lighted candles were at the altar.

Richard Halferty of Ollie was his brother's bestman. Richard Bachman, cousin of the bride, and Merlyn Helps served as ushers.

After the ceremony, the bride's parents entertained the guests at a reception in the parlors of the church. Christmas greens and a four-tiered wedding cake decorated the bride's table.

Mrs. Harry Gibbs was dinning room hostess. She was assisted in the kitchen by ladies of the Esther Circle. Miss Lois Ann Lau poured, Mrs. Harvey Nelson of Sioux City, aunt of the bride, served the casserole dish, and Mrs. Lloyd Jasperson of Rockwell, cousin of the bride, served the wedding cake. Mrs. Earl Bachman and Mrs. Elmer Larson served the bride's table. Mrs. Richard Bachman was in charge of the guest book.

IRVING HAUPT SCHEDULES FARM SALE DATE

Monday Irving Haupt came to The Times office to schedule a farm sale date and to make arrangements for The Times to handle his advertising.

Mr. and Mrs. Haupt will retire from active farming and have rented their farm for the coming year, but will continue to reside in their new, modern home on their farm near Klemme.

Mr. and Mrs. Haupt's closing out sale will be held Wednesday, January 16th. They will sell 16 head of cattle, hay, feed, brooder house, a Dodge truck, and a complete line of good farm machinery.

Watch this paper for the big sale advertisement.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

SCRIPTURE: John 1:19—51.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Isaiah 55: 1—7.

How to Find Christ

Lesson for January 6, 1952

NOT every one finds Christ in just the same way. This was true at the beginning and it is still true. A very interesting recent book is, "These Found the Way," edited by David W. Soper. (Westminster Press, Philadelphia, $2.50.) It contains the stories of a dozen modern persons who have become Christians. No two of them have the same story to tell, yet there is something in common among all of them.

Dr. Foreman

Each of them in some way has "found" Christ. It is a mistake to think that all Christians must be cast in the same mold, or that each of us must plant his feet exactly in the footprints (for example) of St Paul.

Sensational Conversions

AT the beginning of John's gospel we find the story of one person after another who followed Christ. There is only one of these who believed in Jesus on the basis of what could be called a "supernatural" experience. This was John the Baptist. He testified that he had "seen the Spirit" (that is, God's Spirit) coming upon Jesus.

Now you cannot "see" the Spirit in the same way you can see a fence-post. Even if you take the story in the most literal way, and take it to mean that the Spirit had taken the visible form of a dove, the question still is there: How would John know that this particular dove was not a dove, but the Holy Spirit?

Whatever you make of it, John was an exception. All the others in the story became followers of Jesus through some one's word, suggestion, invitation; some one introduced them to Christ. That still is true.

Very few people who are Christians today started out with some vision in the sky, some vision of a dove or an angel or of Christ himself (like Paul, later on).

Simpler Cases

JUST as likely, it was not spectacular at all. (Most of the conversions recorded in the New Testament were not in the least spectacular.)

It was some one saying, "Let's go to church," or it was a Sunday school teacher saying, "Bill, isn't it time you accepted Christ for yourself?" or a girl saying, "How can I marry a fellow that isn't even a Christian?" It may be reading a tract or it may be listening to some one's testimony in a prayer meeting, it might be reading that book about how some in our time have "found the way",—or it might even be reading this column.

However it comes about, two things are always true. First, some one introduces you to Jesus. Then, you make the decision for yourself. You are not likely to come to Christ unless some one else suggests it and helps you; but no other person however good, and no church however great and true, can do for you what you alone can do for yourself: make up your own mind to say "Yes" to Jesus Christ.

Nowadays much is said about "Fellowship Evangelism". There is nothing mysterious about it. For instance, a man who has never thought about becoming a Christian and perhaps no intention of being one, joins (say) a men's club at some church . . . and one thing leads to another, and he gets acquainted in this way with the minister or with some one else who has had a real and happy experience with Christ . . . and presently his heart is stirred and he too becomes a Christian—because he has made Christian friends.

Saying a Good Word

YET it is a strange thing: many people will talk about anything else they believe in, before they will talk about Jesus Christ.

Suppose that from the beginning every one had been as close-mouthed about Him as most church members are? Simon Peter, for one, would never have become a Christian. If it had not been for his brother Andrew, who knows what would have become of Simon Peter?

In commercial lingo, Jesus "sells" himself. First-rate things, ideas or persons always sell themselves But even the finest articles in the world need to have their story told, they have to be introduced, people have to know about them. Every church, every Christian, ought to be (in the best sense) advertising Christ Is yours? Are you?

HAPPY NEW YEAR
May it be a howling success

Many Holidays Mark Calendar In Various Regions

With January 1, one of the most important holidays, just around the corner, did you ever stop to think than an unusual number of the 365 days of each year are public holidays?

The number of holidays that you receive each year depends greatly upon the part of the country in which you live, for there are innumerable sectional holidays in addition to the accepted national observances. Many of the Southern states, for example, still set aside a day to commemorate the Civil War.

Columbus Day, October 12, is a holiday in 29 states. Kentucky and Tennessee are the only two states that observe both the birthdays of Lee and Lincoln and Easter Monday is a legal holiday in Texas.

Yet, we Americans are not the best, nor the worst, as far as the number of holidays per year are concerned. The largest number of holidays may be found in India, where 50 bank holidays are observed yearly to meet the prejudices of the varied religions to be found there.

The least number of holidays is found—you guessed it—in Russia. The U.S.S.R celebrates but five holidays yearly, all Sundays having been abolished.

Gift-Giving Is Old Custom in Scotland

New Year's day is more generally celebrated as a day for gift giving than is Christmas in Scotland.

A family get-together on the eve of the New Year was quite a ceremony in old Scotland. There would be the preparation of the "hot pint", a kettle filled with warm, spiced ale At the stroke of 12, each member of the family would take a drink of the "hot pint" and there would be a general round of handshakes and good wishes.

After good wishes and drinks had been passed around, the family elders would take up the kettle and go out to visit the neighbors to offer them sips from the kettle.

If they were the first to step into the house of a neighbor, it was deemed very important that they not come empty-handed, but with their hands well full, signifying the full year that lay ahead of the house's occupants.

The first day of the year has been more generally observed over a longer period of time than any other holiday.

Celebration of the New Year can be traced back to the Druids in England, and even to the Babylonians, when it was the season for a 12-day celebration.

The Druids celebrated the New Year on the shortest day of the year. They believed this to be the day that the sun, which journeyed away from the earth in the cold months, began the journey homeward bringing with it sunshine, warmth and good cheer.

New Year Late in U. S.

By the time the United States welcoming of the New Year is approaching the climactic stage, most of the world will have celebrated the advent of 1952 and quietly settled to rest. Geography puts the Western hemisphere at the end of the line for the approaching New Year.

The reason for this is that the earth turns from west to east, and the time gets here last of all.

Kidney Slow-Down May Bring Restless Nights

When kidney function slows down, many folks complain of nagging backache, headaches, dizziness and loss of pep and energy. Don't suffer restless nights with these discomforts if reduced kidney function is getting you down—due to such common causes as stress and strain, over-exertion or exposure to cold. Minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or wrong diet may cause getting up nights or frequent passages.

Don't neglect your kidneys if these conditions bother you. Try Doan's Pills—a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While often otherwise caused, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief from these discomforts—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

Entertain Easily at an Informal Buffet
(See Recipes Below)

Holiday Buffets

ENTERTAINING a large group? The easiest and most informal way to have a large party is to serve food buffet style. In this way you can have a beautiful table because food attractively arranged will do just that.

Your guests will be at ease serving themselves with what they like, and also in the quantity which they prefer. Sitting at the table and being served by host or hostess, they may get more than they want on their plates, and food is consequently wasted.

For the hostess, buffet style serving is simple, too, as everyone understands that he must take care of his own plate. It saves time and energy, too, to have the food all set out, and then there's no running back to the kitchen when second or third helpings are on call.

Another good feature of buffet style entertaining is the lack of having to have many of the foods piping hot. Baked ham or turkey can be served warm, for example, and all other foods may be of the "chilled" type.

If desired, the main dish may be hot, but this is no problem as you can serve a casserole which is easy to keep hot. Creamed foods can be served in chafing dishes, and this makes for easy and attractive service.

Here's a guaranteed-to-please menu which will make for easy serving, as well as preparation. The turkey need not be stuffed before roasting as it will probably be served sliced, and warm.

Buffet I
Sliced Turkey Assorted Relishes
Spiced Peaches, Crabapples
Tossed Greens Tangy Dressing
Country Ham Biscuits
Sliced Fruitcake Beverage

Prepare your salad greens in advance and place in a large salad bowl. Just before serving add the made-in-advance dressing.

Tossed Greens
Lettuce
Chicory
Watercress
Chives

Wash greens carefully and dry thoroughly. Tear into pieces. Toss with dressing, just before serving.

Tangy Dressing

1 teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon dry mustard
Dash of black pepper
1 teaspoon finely grated onion
1 tablespoon lemon juice
3 tablespoons vinegar
½ teaspoon worcestershire sauce
2 drops tabasco sauce
1 tablespoon prepared horseradish
½ cup salad oil

Combine ingredients in order listed. Place in covered jar and shake well. Chill thoroughly before using.

Country Ham Biscuits
(Serves 8-10)

LYNN CHAMBERS' MENU
Meat Balls in Gravy
Baked Beans
Buttered Nut Bread
*Tossed Greens *Tangy Dressing
Mixed Fruits with Coconut and Fruit Juice
Holiday Cookies Beverage
*Recipe Given

½ cup ground ham
2 cups sifted flour
½ teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons baking powder
¼ cup shortening
¾ cup milk

Sift together flour, salt and baking powder. Cut in shortening to the size of small peas. Stir in ham; add milk and blend well. Turn onto pastry cloth and knead 10-20 times. Roll to ½-inch thickness and cut with biscuit cutter. Place on baking sheet and bake in a hot (450°F.) oven for 10-12 minutes.

Holiday Buffet II
Creamed Sweetbreads and Ham
Candied Sweet Potatoes
Holiday Fruit Mold
Celery Sticks Pickles Olives
Crusty Rolls
Orange Cranberry Brew
Chocolate Spice Cake

Holiday Fruit Mold
(Serves 8-10)

1 package lime-flavored gelatin
1 cup boiling water
½ cup cold water
12 maraschino cherries, quartered
1 cup diced, canned pineapple
1 cup diced, canned pears
1 cup fresh seedless green grapes

Add boiling water to gelatin and stir until dissolved. Add cold water. When partially set, add the fruits and pour into mold or bowl. Chill until firm. Unmold, garnish with lettuce buds and serve with mayonnaise to which whipped cream has been added.

The creamed main dish may be served on toast or pastry triangles or in pastry tart shells made in muffin tins:

Cream Sweetbreads and Ham
(Serves 8-10)

1 pair sweetbreads
4 cups water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ cup butter or substitute
¼ cup flour
1 cup chicken broth
1 cup light cream
½ teaspoon worcestershire sauce
½ cup cooked ham, diced
½ cup blanched almonds, roasted
Salt

Soak sweetbreads in cold water for an hour. Drain. Pour 4 cups water over them, add lemon juice and bring to a boil to cook 20 minutes. Drain and remove membranes; cut in pieces. Melt butter and blend in flour. Add chicken broth and cream, stirring constantly, cooking until thickened. Add worcestershire sauce, sweetbreads, ham and almonds. Taste and add salt if necessary. Serve hot over toast, or pastry triangles.

LYNN SAYS:
Put Appetites in High Gear With Appetizers

Sardine snacks are tasty when bread strips are brushed with sardine oil, topped with chili sauce and a sardine. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese and broil until lightly browned.

Serve a Shrimp bowl at the buffet table. Serve well-flavored Thousand Island dressing in a bowl, surround with large, cooked cleaned shrimps on toothpicks and place crackers around them.

Most people will like this peanut butter appetizer: spread toast strips with peanut butter, sprinkle with crumbled cooked bacon and decorate with minced parsley.

Deviled eggs are a favorite on any appetizer tray. Be certain to add enough vinegar and mustard to make them tangy enough for a first course.

Garlic olives are very tempting. You need just add a clove of garlic to the brine of black olives and let soak for several hours. Drain and serve well chilled.

Crime in America

How the Laws Are Enforced In Up-State New York

As the Senate Crime Committee trailed the national crime syndicate across the country, evidence everywhere pointed in some way to New York City. America's largest metropolis, nerve center for much of its financial and industrial life, also was a nerve center of the underworld.

Our New York investigation, however, was not confined to the city itself. Months earlier we had conducted closed sessions in Manhattan, probing the workings of a vicious New York-New Jersey gambling ring and the flagrant operation of gambling establishments upstate at Saratoga Springs.

One result was that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, who had refused to go to Manhattan to see the Committee, convened a special grand jury to investigate the Saratoga conditions.

In Bergen County, New Jersey, just across the Hudson River from New York City, gambling had become so notorious that there finally had been a partial crackdown.

At the time of our hearings, only Anthony Guarini, who seemed to have been the front man for the ring, had been sent to jail. After our hearings, however, gambling indictments were returned against Joe Adonis, Salvatore (Solly Moore) Moretti, Arthur Longano and James (Piggy) Lynch.

We questioned a Newark (N J) certified public accountant, George Goldstein, who seemed to perform the same functions for East coast mobsters that attorney Eugene Bernstein performed for the Chicago-Capone syndicate. He acknowledged that for some years he has handled tax returns for "the New Jersey gambling partnerships."

Profits from these various companies were shared by Guarini, James Rutkin, Adonis, Gerals Catena, Salvatore Moretti, and Lynch. Actually, there is no way of telling exactly how much they took in, as Goldstein admitted he made out tax returns from figures which were not based on any real audit. But one gambling company alone admitted to gross receipts of $488,698 in its 1945-46 tax return.

Still another business-like facet of the gamblers was their method of converting into cash the sizable checks taken from their victims. Max Stark—since sent to jail—was "check cashier" for the mob. Daily, he would bring to the small Merchants Bank of New York City some 60 to 70 checks signed by losers at the casinos. Over six months, the checks came to about $5,000,000. Stark, conveniently, had become a stockholder in the bank; he owned 10 per cent of the bank's stock.

Another New Jersey operator examined by the Committee was Willie Moretti. The 56-year-old older brother of Salvatore Moretti was—and is—a big-time gambler, and, more lately, part-owner of a big laundry and linen supply company. Willie let slip a great many scraps of information about the East coast mob.

Willie's talkativeness, apparently, was not an isolated phenomenon. When rackets boss Frank Costello was testifying months later, Rudolph Halley quoted transcripts of telephone wire taps, legally obtained, which showed that Moretti called Costello "chief," and that Costello told him ". . . Rest and don't call me so much" . . . "Don't talk too much; you know . . ." Costello insisted he was just giving a little friendly health advice to a sick friend.

We took Willie through a list of leading gangsters, and with only a few exceptions, he knew them all.

Halley: Aren't these people . . . what you would call rackets boys?

Moretti: Jeez, everything is a racket today.

Halley: These people come from a great many different cities around the country. How do you get to meet all of these people . . . ?

Moretti: Well, you go to race tracks and you go to Florida, and you meet them; and the man that is well known meets everybody; you know that.

Halley asked him if he belonged to any political clubs. "I don't belong to any. I am a bi-partisan," Moretti answered. The incredible gambler went on to boast that he didn't "operate politically"—that, if he did, he might have become a member of Congress—"maybe sitting where you are."

What about some old charges filed by an established competitor, a laundry in the same Jersey area, that Moretti was taking business away from them by "strong-arm" methods? It was all a lie, Willie said; he did business in "a polite way."

Even the firm that had complained about him now has merged with his company. "Fortunately, God helped me," he explained. The president of the rival outfit "went horseback riding, fell off the horse, got kicked in the head . . . and died, so his company became my partners."

Our examination ended on a friendly note. He showed us a postal card which he had made of what he called "the Moretti estate" on the Jersey shore. Expansively he told his attorney to give me the postal card. "Let him look at it," Moretti said. "Maybe he wants to come down for dinner some time." And, as he left, he urged: "Don't forget my home in Deal if you are down the shore. You're invited."

The situation which we uncovered in Saratoga Springs was this. In August of 1947 Superintendent John A. Gaffney of the New York State Police asked that a survey be made of gambling conditions in Saratoga Springs. It was established that six wide-open casinos were in operation, one of them backed by William Bischoff, alias Lefty Clark, the notorious Detroit gambler, and Joe Adonis of New York city.

All this information was dutifully transmitted to Superintendent Gaffney. Gaffney put it in his "confidential file." Nothing at all was done about it until 1950, when, because of newspaper exposes and bad publicity resulting from the alleged trimming of a customer at one of the casinos, orders went out to put the lid on. The gambling was throttled down.

The excuse given us in many hundreds of words for the existence of this situation was, in effect, simply this: Gambling had been going on at Saratoga Springs for some time. True, the state police were supposed to enforce the law. But there was a "policy," it was explained, that the state police enforce the law in "rural areas," not in cities that had regularly organized police departments.

One of the most damaging admissions made by Superintendent Gaffney, it seemed to the committee, was when we asked him:

Q. When you get to be the superintendent of the state police, you are supposed to have enough savvy or understanding to leave it (the gambling at Saratoga) alone, unless you are told to go in; is that correct?

Gaffney: Well, probably, yes, it has been a policy over the years.

Behind the situation, of course, was the complacence of the Saratoga Springs police department of 23 men. We interrogated an incredible local police chief, Patrick (Paddy) Rox, who admitted that he augmented his police earnings by collecting $10 a night for taking money from the bank to the Saratoga raceway.

Walter F. Ahearn, the Saratoga detective supposedly in charge of supressing gambling in the resort town, confessed that he, too, supplemented his pay—by $120 a week—transporting the bankrolls and gambling loot between two casinos and the local bank every night.

The gamblers—though, of course, Ahearn "didn't know" they were gamblers—"were afraid of stickups more than anything else," he said.

Expert Predicts 50 Per Cent Increase In Delinquency

CHICAGO—A 50 per cent increase in juvenile delinquency within the next ten years has been forecast.

Dr. E. Preston Sharp, chief of the Division of Training Schools for the Maryland Department of Public Welfare, cited the increase in population as the cause for the rise in delinquency.

He pointed out that the highest divorce rate ever recorded was in 1946. Children of these homes of the average age of five, he said, were most likely to be the juvenile delinquents of the next decade.

BREAKFAST DID IT

Steaks in Morning Intrigue Detective

DETROIT, Mich.—One tip on how to be a successful burglar might be the warning to never eat steak for breakfast.

A detective spotted two men and a boy indulging in T-bones early one morning recently. The officer, Conrad Konetshny, was impressed. He didn't eat steaks in the morning and didn't know anyone else who could afford to do so.

He then noticed the trio had bulging pockets. He frisked them and found a collection of barber tools and $50 in quarters.

The steak-eaters then confessed, the officer said, to breaking into a barbershop and a filling station.

Held for investigation of breaking and entering were Clarence Shelly, 22, John Rogers, 20, and a 16 year old.

RESOLUTIONS ARE WORTH WHILE

Resolutions are not the laughing matter that cartoonists and humorists like to make of them. The practice of making new resolutions should be commended as much as possible because it signifies the desire to start out a new era correctly and to correct the bad habits of the past.

Words, like people, so often fall into disrepute by the company they keep. So it is with the word "resolutions." The popular theory is that resolutions are things that are made on New Year's day and then promptly forgotten on the second day of January. Such is not always the case.

Every man or woman who ever achieved success or greatness did so by making resolutions—resolutions not only made with the advent of a new year, but made during the course of every day living. These resolutions might well be more mental than verbal. A successful man is one who profits by his mistakes. He doesn't make the same mistake twice—and, whether or not he realized it, he made a mental resolution not to commit the same error again.

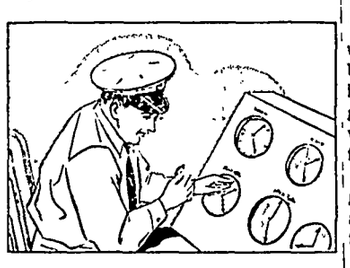
We should all be able to take a lesson from this information and not be afraid to make resolutions, even though we hold a fear that they might not be kept.

Each time we resolve to do better, we have improved our mental lot a thousand fold.

Naval Observatory Clocks Are Tops

To the most of us, seconds and minutes have very little importance. For that reason it is hard for us to realize the exquisite exactness with which the government tries to mark the passing of every second of time.

The clocks in the Naval Observatory are the most accurate in the world, and special pains are taken to see that they remain so at all times.



The standard clocks keep "mean" time, which is the division of the days into hours, minutes and seconds. Regulation of the clocks is so exacting that the daily rate, meaning loss or gain, is so small that it can not be measured.

The clocks are regulated by coincidence of the beats with a sidereal sounder. The clocks beat so silently that microphones must be used to magnify the beats in order that they might be heard at all.

Janus, Deity of Romans, Gave Name to January

January comes from the two-faced Roman God, Janus who has the power to look back into the past and also fortell the future.

The Romans named their New Year in honor of Janus, and represented him with a key in his hand to symbolize his power to open the doorways to the past and the future.

The year of the Romans once had but ten months, the New Year being celebrated in the Spring. January and February were the last two months to be added, being placed before the original ten, with January 1 being celebrated as the first day of the year.

THE WORLD BELONGS TO HIM

Did Christopher Columbus Celebrate New Year Here?

Some historians say Christopher Columbus was the first white man to celebrate New Year's day in the Western hemisphere. While his ships were being repaired on January 1, 1493, they say, Columbus enjoyed a sumptuous meal with two savage monarchs on the island of Haiti.

It was at this meeting that the discoverer of America had his first taste of tobacco.

Another Year GONE

It is that time of the year when people look to the calendar on the wall and remark, "Another year gone."

True enough, the last leaflet of the year 1951 will soon be taken from the wall, yet each of us have gained much more than we have lost during the time it was with us.

Looking back over the span of a dozen months we can all see little patterns of sorrow and happiness—perhaps much more of one than the other. And yet, somehow, they don't seem to impress us as much as they did in their brief moment of existence. They seem now but separate pieces of a pattern that make up a one complete picture. If we look closely we may see that this picture is simply a reflection of all our past experiences.

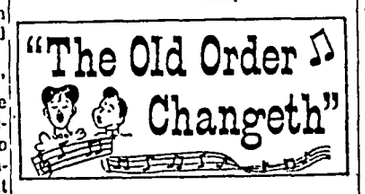
Yes, 1951 is almost gone. But it does not disappear from us completely. In living through the year, day by day, we have known experiences that have molded and shaped us into the person that we are today; looking forward to a new year—and new experiences.

Henry III Introduced Custom of Presenting Gifts to the Emperor

The Roman custom of making gifts to the emperor on New Year's was introduced into England during the time of Henry III. It is said that Queen Elizabeth supplied herself with jewels and wardrobes almost entirely from these gifts.

English nobility followed the custom of sending to the king a purse with gold in it until the 17th century. Under the Tudors and the Stuarts it became proper for all classes to give presents to friends with the wish that the New Year would be filled with prosperity.

Ladies received gifts of pins or gloves, both then quite expensive, and it was from this custom that the term "pin money" originated.



Modern times have changed—and none for the better—our manner of celebrating the New Year.

It was once a popular custom to spend the last three hours of the year singing hymns and giving thanks for blessings received. This watchnight, while it might have been unpleasant for the younger generation, was an excellent preparation for whatever lay in the year ahead. It was somewhat grounded in tradition, as was the old custom of graciously paying and receiving calls.

The downfall of this manner of receiving the New Year was started soon after the Civil War, when the prodigious growth of the larger American cities caused them to begin to lose the home-spun aroma and take on the faster, more exciting tempo of city life.

As time wore on, it became more and more the custom to make the New Year's eve a time for indulging in one more last fling before the disagreeable business of turning over a new leaf.

France, Germany See New Year Same as U.S.

In the countries of France and Germany, the New Year is celebrated in much the same manner as in the United States, with the larger cities taking on a carnival air.

Czechoslovakia and the countries nearby mark the New Year with visits and pompous official receptions. The tables in these countries are all piled high with food and feasting is in order on the eve and also on New Year's day. The exchange of presents is also observed.

The Greeks place a gold coin in a large cake baked especially for the New Year celebration. The cake is not cut until the New Year has arrived and, then, the person receiving the coin in his slice of cake is considered to have much good luck in store for him in the months ahead.

Navigators Gave Philippine Islands Two Different Names

When the Portugese first reached the Philippines, they called them the Islands of the Orient because they had reached them by sailing eastward, down and around the tip of Africa. Later, the Spaniards arrived, and having sailed in the opposite direction and around the lower end of South America, they called the Philippines the Islands of the West, demonstrating the confusion lack of knowledge could cause.

Sticking Waffles

QUESTION: Could you tell me what to do with the grids of my waffle-iron? The waffles stick to it every time. The iron is about nine months old and up until just a couple of weeks ago it worked fine, but now the batter sticks on both top and bottom grids. I followed the directions that come with it as to what to do in such a case exactly as directed but it didn't help a bit. Also, could you tell me how to clean the black from the grids?

ANSWER: I believe that if you would be more liberal with the shortening in the batter you would not have so much trouble. Although you did not say that your waffle-iron is an electric one, I presume it is. For some reason the directions given for making waffles appear to be a bit stingy about the shortening. If you would double the usual amount (or almost double it) I feel sure you would have better success. You can clean off hardened batter with a clean, stiff brush, either fibre or soft wire. You might have the iron cleaned up at an electric appliance shop. If that cannot be done, you can clean it at home by covering the iron with a paste of baking soda moistened with water and allowed to dry. This will remove much of the discoloration. Before using again, however, it should be brushed with a vegetable oil and heated, which is the same treatment given to a new waffle-iron.

FAIRY TALES and Christmas stories are a Yuletide tradition It is thus fitting that the story which promises to be America's most popular and long-lived fairy tale is related to the Christmas season.

Once upon a time there was a reindeer with a built-in flashlight bulb for a nose. You know, Rudolph, the red-nosed reindeer. From a small beginning in 1938, the little animal with the built-in beacon has become as familiar as Humpty-Dumpty and Cinderella to youngsters everywhere.

First invented as a sales giveaway promotion for Montgomery Ward by Robert L. May, Rudolph was featured in many free booklets before he become associated with Christmas. Songwriter Johnny Marks liked the title "Rudolph, the Red Nosed Reindeer", so he wrote a song about it. He was so sure he had a success that he started his own Publishing company, using "Rudolph" as his first release Gene Autry made the initial recording, and that one record sold 2,000,000 copies.

Last year, there were 16 different recordings of the song for sale, ranging from boogie-woogie by Sugar Chile Robinson to Bing Crosby, and cowboy singers.

Tree Decoration Has Ancient Source In Arabian Legend

When you fasten the ornaments to your Christmas tree this year you will be commemorating a centuries-old Arabian legend that relates how plants blossomed and flowered and trees miraculously bore ripened fruit on the eve of the first Christmas.

In fact, the Christmas tree itself stems from the story of a Scandinavian "sacred" tree and Martin Luther, a German, is said to have brought the first one indoors and decorated it for the Yule season in the early 16th century.

These are only two of more than a score of legends from which today's Christmas symbols and customs stem. According to Jeannette Lee, who has probed their origin for nearly a dozen years, the American Christmas symbols—from candles and bells to kissing under the mistletoe—have no common nationality. They have come from all parts of the world.

Mrs. Lee, who is supervisor of creative art for a greeting card company, constantly utilizes the traditions and emblems of the festival as ornaments for Christmas cards and is just as constantly searching for new ones. This year, for example, the bright-colored tree ornaments are in high vogue as decorative devices on Christmas cards.

Christmas Helps World's Economy

Many people, with the total exception of children, have come to believe that Christmas has become too commercial. In a spiritual sense this is true to some extent.

Economically, however, no other holiday or festive season contributes so much to the welfare of the world. Christmas has hardly passed into the new year before thousands are at work on toys and myriads of other Christmas specialties for the next holiday. Each year, as the lights of Christmas trees twinkle on a wintry night, how many of us think of the millions who have gained employment through the Christmas shopping industry?

And yet, "too commercial" may be an overstatement. Is it too wrong, once a year, to make the dominate theme one of giving, rather than of receiving? Christmas, and the spirit of Christmas, has endured wars and great chaos through centuries as a time of joyousness and happiness, and giving has always been an important part of the festivities.

The picture of the family united, with presents opened, and children wrapped in the joyousness of Childhood's greatest enjoyment is still and will remain, the Christmas

Tradition Says Tree Originated in Egypt

The Christmas tree, now almost a universal symbol, probably came to America from Germany, although tradition has it that Christmas trees originated in Egypt. The palm tree is supposed to put forth a branch every month, and a spray of this tree, with 12 shoots on it, was used in Egypt.

German writers mention the tree as early as 1605 The German prince Albert, consort of Queen Victoria, introduced the Christmas tree in ing d when he had a tree for his daughter.

Did Washington Start Custom of Open House?

American historians credit George Washington with starting the custom of receiving friends, or holding "open house" on New Year's day

In the year 1790 New York was the seat of the government and President Washington made a practice of opening the doors of the presidential mansion for a reception on each New Year's day. Home and foreign diplomats, and ordinary citizens as well, visited.

Washington was said to have expressed the hope that the observance might continue through the years. His wish was granted, for it is still a custom at the White House.

"Greetings by Mail" Originated in 1846, Now a Modern Custom

Look at the paintings on the Christmas cards you send and receive—you'll find famous names and some of the best contemporary art. Here is how it all began.

On a December day in 1846, a middleclass Englishman, Henry Cole, sat at the library desk of his London home addressing to his friends what were probably the first Christmas cards ever printed. The cards depicted a Victorian family assembled at the festive board and the traditional Christmas customs of giving to the poor. They also bore the now-classic greeting: "A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to you."

Cole, in a historic move, two months before had commissioned John Calcott Horsley, a Royal Academy artist, to paint the illustration for the card and had struck off a thousand lithographed copies. He dispatched them that December. This was such a markedly successful stroke of good will that plain Henry Cole subsequently became Sir Henry Cole.

Horsley's art was a far cry from today's Christmas card paintings, but he started a cycle which a hundred years later was to bring fine art into high favor on Christmas cards.

An American shopping for cards may select, for instance, a painting called "Snow Under the Arch" by another Royal Academy member—Winston Churchill, Britain's wartime prime minister and famed amateur artist. Or he might choose Peter Hurd's "One Night in Winter" or "Grandma" Moses' "The White Church" or "The Nativity" by Alexander Ross.

Mistletoe Outlived Sinister Meaning

Mistletoe, once used as a weapon of death, is now almost a universal symbol of love and peace.

According to Norse mythology, there was a god named Balder, who personified the sun. Loki, another god, plotted to destroy Balder

Balder's mother, when she first learned of Loki's intentions to kill her son, obtained a promise from all living things that they would not harm Balder All agreed, but the mistletoe, so it was with a mistletoe arrow that Loki induced Balder's blind brother, Hoder, to kill the sun god.

Higher powers intervened, however, and Balder was restored to life. The mistletoe was placed under Frigga's care, and the mother of Balda saw that it was never again used to do harm.

The custom of giving a kiss of love or peace beneath the mistletoe is an assurance that it will never again be used as an instrument of evil.

Origin of Gift-Giving Told in Many Versions

There are many interesting versions as to how the custom of gift giving at Christmas time started.

Some believe that it all came from ancient England, where it was once custom to hang kissing rings in the great halls. These rings were decorated with mistletoe and were the key for a pleasant holiday pastime. It is said that the young knights and ladies would come to the kissing rings with Christmas roses for their secret sweetheart.

This started it all. Now gift giving is traditional.

DEVOTION . . Christmas is not so much a time of receiving as it is a time for giving. These children, in their prayers, are ...ing by far the best gift of ... themselves.

Out of Date

The textbooks used in his school were hopelessly out of date but Mr. Smithers, the superintendent of education, could not be persuaded that they should be replaced by more modern ones. That is—until one night when Mr. Smithers telephoned his assistant and exclaimed excitedly: "Call a meeting of the board right away. We must have up-to-date books—and immediately!"

"What convinced you our present ones are out of date?" his assistant wanted to know.

"A problem my boy read out of his arithmetic book," Smithers snarled. "It begins: 'If a plumber gets three dollars a day—'"

It's Wonderful the Way Chewing-Gum Laxative Acts Chiefly to REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD

● Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different!

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon . . . right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, worn-out feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

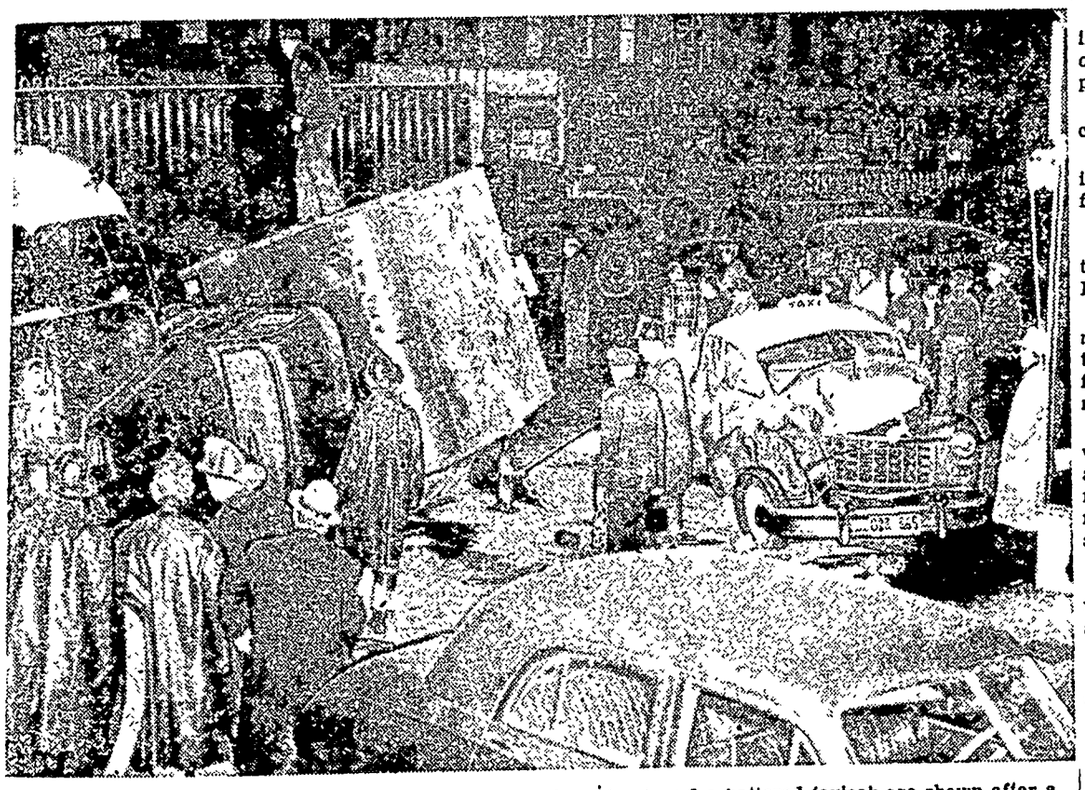
UNSINKABLE CARRIER . . . The H.M.S. Eagle, Britain's new 36,800-ton super carrier is shown in Bangor Bay near Belfast, Ireland, during recent tests. The admiralty revealed recently that the new carrier has a secret new method to control damage caused by enemy guns or bombs and is "virtually unsinkable." The new ship's keel was laid in 1942, but her commission was delayed while British engineers studied wartime damage reports and the lessons learned at Bikini atomic tests. This new knowledge was put into the building of the Eagle. The Eagle's new payload will be 100 jet fighters and atomic bombers.

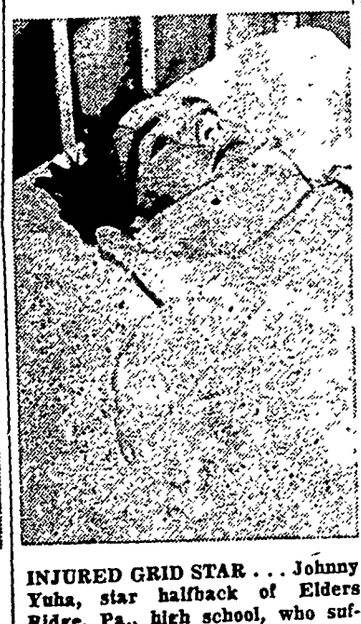


NEW YORK STREET SCENE . . . An overturned garbage truck and a battered taxicab are shown after a crash at 77th street and Second avenue. One of the vehicles hit a firebox, automatically sounding an alarm. The driver of the truck, Vincent de Marco, 21, died, pinned in the cab of his overturned truck, and four other persons were injured. Fire and emergency squads are shown working to extricate the body of de Marco. De Marco's helper, Louis Cencentino, also was pinned when the truck overturned and was removed by jacking up the truck. The cabdriver and his passenger were not seriously hurt.

ABANDONED . . . Patricia Ann Lawrence, abandoned about six weeks ago in St. Lawrence, Wisc., church, needed only her parents to make her first Christmas, full and joyous. Police believe the child is from out of town. An attorney for the case of the abandoned child says; "All I can say is that I hope if the mother of the child reads these lines, she will find it in her heart to claim the child." It looks as if Santa didn't forget the child.

OUT OF SHADE . . . Shirley Dellens, West Point, N.Y., comes from behind her big umbrella to enjoy some of the good sunshine at Daytona Beach, Fla. She is wearing one of the new bathing suit creations for 1952.

EXHIBIT A . . . Exotic stripper, Lili St. Cyr, is shown in court in Beverly Hills, Calif., where she was having a hearing on charges of giving a lewd and indecent performance at Ciro's. She was arrested in November while giving a torrid bubble bath dance. She offered to give the court a personal demonstration and the offer was quickly accepted, so courtroom spectators looked forward to seeing the bubbles fly. With her is her attorney, Jerry Geisler, favorite Hollywood lawyer.



INJURED GRID STAR . . . Johnny Yuha, star halfback of Elders Ridge, Pa., high school, who suffered a broken neck in a game, was sent to New York for treatment through contributions from his townspeople and the U.M.W

Capehart Amendment Allows Price Increases on Thousands of Items

HERE WE GO—With a sigh of "here we go again", home town housewives across the nation learned the Capehart amendment to the controls law is effective immediately. The amendment opens the way for possible price increases on thousands of consumer items, including clothing, meat, foods, milk, butter, coal, gasoline, tobacco, beer, drugs and cosmetics.

Under this amendment manufacturers and processors are allowed to use their pre-Korea prices and add or subtract cost increases or decreases through last July 26 in computing new ceilings. Because application of the Capehart formula is optional, the general effect of the new order could not be adequately estimated. However, it was believed the particular effect will be to raise prices whenever an application for adjustment is granted.

There is just one possible hope for the consumer. Manufacturers are not required to seek new ceilings, but are allowed to do so. If any concern seeks higher prices for any line of goods, any reductions required by the formula for other goods must be put into effect as well. The firm cannot seek higher prices alone.

Among the items affected by the new order are wool and cotton yarns and fabrics, soft drinks, liquor and wine, lumber and millwork, crude oil, canned and frozen fruits and vegetables, and many other processed foods, also many important chemicals, plastics, insecticides.

Price Director Michael V. Di Salle has warned congress that prices apparently are rising again and it would be a dangerous risk to decontrol any major item now.

FOOD PRICES—While the OPS was announcing possible future price increases, the Bureau of Labor Statistics revealed that its latest index on food prices indicated an increase of nearly 1 per cent since its previous report.

The bureau pegged the price index at 231 2. That placed it 131.2 per cent above the 1935-39 average and 14 per cent above June, 1950.

Leading the advance were fruits and vegetables, and dairy products, including milk, chese and butter. Meats, poultry and fish declined, as did fats and oils.

TRUCE TALKS—The drawn-out, frustrating Korean peace talks continue with the two sides deadlocked over supervision of the truce and the Reds refusing to open discussions on the exchange of prisoners.

Perhaps the most significant news from the truce talks is that the negotiations have entered the sixth month. It is almost inconceivable that two parties can talk for five months without agreement if there was good faith and a desire for peace on the part of all concerned. This fact alone has made the people in the home town of America pessimistic of the outcome.

By the time this reaches print the December 27 deadline on the provisional cease-fire line will have expired. If and armistice has not been agreed on, then a new cease fire line must be drawn before a final settlement. For this reason (since it appears unlikely an agreement will be reached) increased fighting can be expected on the battlefront as both sides attempt to improve their positions.

TRUMAN—President Truman cut short his Florida vacation and returned to Washington. The President hastened to assure the public that no sudden world emergency dictated his return.

It was obvious two things were uppermost in the President's mind: (1) The deadlocked Korean truce talks, and (2) the still-developing tax scandals.

It was considered unlikely there would be any public announcement concerning decisions about the Korean situation until those decisions had been carried out. The tax scandal, however, was another matter.

The President and those surrounding him have become more and more concerned with the developments (see blow) in the tax fix probe. White House intervention, even the calling in of J. Edgar Hoover, FBI chief, to conduct a sweeping investigation, appeared to be a likely prospect.

MRS F.D.R.—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, one of the most controversial figures to appear on the American scene, came under attack of Archbishop J. Francis A. McIntyre for "assuming the role of an agnostic and fatalist".

Mrs. Roosevelt said on a radio program recently: "I don't know whether I believe in a future life . . . I came to feel that it didn't really matter very much because whatever the future held you'd have to face it when you came to it, just as whatever life holds you have to face it in exactly the same way.

"I think I am pretty much of a fatalist. You have to accept whatever comes, and the only important thing is that you meet it with courage and with the best that you have to give."

The archbishop said he considers it "a strange situation that one who is chairman of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights, on the question of religion, assume the role of an agnostic and fatalist."

DEFENSE—Secretary of Defence Robert A. Lovett has announced that a provision for increasing the Air Force from 90 to 143 wings—126 of them combat—will be in the 1953 fiscal year budget now being prepared and which will be presented to congress early next month.

The actual size of the defense budget has not been announced, but it is believed to be within an informally set ceiling of $45,000,000,000 for the entire military establishment.

Congress appropriated a total of $59,403,264,000 for the Army, Navy, Air Force and the Office of the Secretary of Defense for the present fiscal year, exclusive of foreign military aid.

The present 90 wings of the Air Force—their size varies from about 75 planes for fighter units to 30 for heavy bombers—are not modernized since they are in many instances made up of aircraft such as the B-29 and B-50. These planes are World War II vintage and must be replaced.

TAX FIX—The House Ways and Means subcommittee graft in the Revenue Department was blown wide open by the charge of Abraham Teitelbaum that two men claiming friendship with federal officials tried to shake him down for $500,000 with promises of a "tax fix".

Teitelbaum, a wealthy Chicago lawyer, further identified as attorney for the Capone family in some of their legal troubles, swore that Bert K. Naster, Hollywood, Fla., businessman, and Frank Nathan, Pittsburgh, led him to believe that they knew of a Washington clique which was on the lookout for "soft touches".

ABRAHAM TEITELBAUM

Naster and Nathan both vigorously denied the charge, but Attorney General Howard McGrath ordered a grand jury investigation of charges.

As far as the people in the home towns are concerned, the charges and denials continue to throw a darker shadow across the Internal Revenue Bureau, under fire since the dismissal of Assistant Attorney General Theron Caudle by President Truman. And the deeper the investigating committee digs the more dirt that is likely to be uncovered. There is no doubt now that the echo of this investigation will be heard in the election campaign of 1952.

GRASS ROOTS MEDICINE

Hoosier Receives A.M.A. Award for Year

Dr. A. C. Yoder, 84-year-old Goshen, Ind., man has been named "Family Doctor of 1951" by the American Medical Association for his exceptional service to his community. He was chosen as representing the untiring general practitioner whose devotion to duty symbolized the medical profession.

Previously, he had been elected family doctor of the year in Indiana at the Indiana Medical Association convention.

"I have done nothing outstanding—nothing unusual—unless this be an exception," he told his colleagues. "I have interested myself in the grass roots of medicine, the county medical society."

Dr. Yoder was accorded the honor at the clinical session of the A.M.A. in Los Angeles.

Texas, Missouri Keep Gridders

By GRANTLAND RICE

NEW YORK—"If you want to size up a football team," writes L.P.S., "take a look at where most of the players come from. There's the answer. Teams that have many players from out of their own state were benefited by the heaviest proselyting, recruiting and subsidizing, as a rule. Did you notice that in a recent well-selected all-Southern team, nine of the eleven men came from the north? I just made a check and found the majority of the Southern stars came from well above the old Mason and Dixon or Smith and Wesson line. Pennsylvania is the main recruiting ground.

Grantland Rice

"On the other hand," he continues, "Texas teams are nearly all packed with Texans. Missouri has nearly all Missouri boys in her line-up. Pennsylvania, I'd say, gets the heaviest raiding. They travel from 1,200 to 1,500 miles to grab the best talent Pennsylvania has to offer. I'd say Pennsylvania could field a team that would outmatch any in the country, including Ohio and Texas. But one state can't take care of fifteen or twenty colleges. Or maybe many more." If any heavy cut is made in football's present system the loudest squawk will come from Texas.

Texas has from 800 to 900 prep schools that go in seriously for football. These myriad schools supply Texas, SMU, TCU, Rice, Baylor, Texas A and M. and one or two others. The Texas athletic scholarship list is also heavy and if there is any big reduction here Texas may secede again—if not from the United States, at least from the N.C.A.A. Texas could lure in Arkansas and Oklahoma, and have all the fun and action wanted. Football in Texas is a civil war and the teams really go all out. The high schools in Texas battle it to the hilt from September to December. I don't know whether Texas has the phony courses for football players that so many other colleges have or not. I doubt it, since most of the complaints that have come this way haven't blown in from Texas.

Split-Up May Follow

There is a good chance that the end of this football argument may lead to a big split-up—to different ways of running the game.

"Why," writes in one sideliner, "don't we have three divisions: Professionals, Semi-Professionals, and Amateurs? Each team to play among its own group?" The trouble is the professional casts would insist on being labeled amateur.

The chief trouble will come from athletic scholarships and scholarship ratings. A big number of colleges will stand up and howl at the idea of abandoning all athletic scholarships or forcing football players into courses too tough to be passed. For a great many football players can only pass simple courses. This doesn't apply to everyone, of course, especially to colleges with much higher standards.

If the athletic scholarship and scholarship standards can be handled effectively one won't have to bother with spring practice, bowls or even proselyting.

A fellow isn't going to a college largely to play football and then pay his own way and take up a tough student course. You can bet a carload of bullion on that and collect every time.

But if there are groups of colleges who want to continue athletic scholarships and soft courses they should certainly be allowed to play among themselves. No one is going to get all colleges to take the same route, to follow the same road.

The point is that these groups should be sharply divided, each one carrying a different label, each playing in its own sub-division for its own set of ratings or championships. It is completely unfair to compare college teams that don't have athletic scholarships and have high student standards with colleges that do have such scholarships plus moronic student ratings.

Another Entry

I doubt that anyone in the fight game was as well conditioned as one James Joseph Tunney, or knew more about conditioning. Tunney spent just seven years in getting ready for his first Dempsey test.

In those seven years he never broke strict training for as long as a split second. He handled his own program, and this also included mental training, working for better concentration. He set up a program and followed it faithfully.

Tunny's road work covered an enormous span of ground. Even playing golf he would hit a drive, toss his club to the caddie and then start running and punching.

THE FARM OUTLOOK

By Paul Henderson, County Extension Director

A year from now, most of us will look back on 1952 as a pretty good year for farming—if we get any kind of a break from the weather, Francis A. Kutish, extension farm economist at Iowa State College believes. Here are his suggestions on how Hancock county farmers can make the best use of the favorable "economic climate" that's in prospect:

Maintain high farm production with emphasis on labor efficiency and control of costs. Boost output per worker. Labor is expensive and hard to get. High output per worker is needed to pay current costs. So keep your labor force fully employed at productive work. Output often can be raised by using more fertilizer, better feeding and breeding, mechanizing, improved work methods, or by working more land.

Keep the hired man satisfied. Good hired men are scarce. If you have a good man, aim to keep him. Improvements on his house, regular hours, time off and the like will help keep him satisfied.

Buy machinery you will need. Less machinery will be manufactured and prices may go up. Check real needs and buy or repair now. But before you buy, be sure there is enough work to justify the machine.

Maintain the farm buildings Building costs are high Make needed repairs to keep buildings in good condition. Go into debt to put up new buildings only if they are needed to improve the efficiency of the farm business.

Keep reasonable inventories & anticipate reasonable inventories of repair parts. Fencing, baling wire and other essential production items.

Adjust insurance coverage. Building costs have been rising. Insurance costs should be adjusted in line with present replacement costs.

Keep informed. Changes happen rapidly in times of war or threat of war. It's important for farmers to keep informed and adjust promptly to changes.

Cattle Prices

Cattle prices have been going down for several weeks. Stocker and feeder cattle prices have dropped more than slaughter cattle. Kutish believes that one of the reasons for weaker feeder cattle prices is the rising cost of feed. With higher feed costs making cattle feeding less profitable, bids for replacement cattle have been sharply reduced. This has taken the edge off the keen demand for two-way cattle.

Since the end of October, federally-inspected cattle slaughter has been close to that of a year earlier. This has provided enough beef to bring wholesale beef prices below ceiling levels for the first time since controls went into effect. Thus, once again, beef prices are being determined by the forces of supply and demand.

There is no evidence of a significant decline in consumer buying power. Rather, the larger supply of meat-beef, pork and turkey and fowl-seems to be the main cause of the present price weakness in cattle.

"Rockets" Lost To Ventura And Thornton

In a recent game the Junior high "Rockets" lost to Thornton 44-28. Our boys were behind 30-10 at the half. We were also playing without the services of our big center.

Brinkman playing both a good offensive and defensive game was high with 18 points. Butch Terhufen played a good defensive game.

Coach Juhl's boys lost to Ventura in a close game 33-27. Ventura led at the half 15-10 and at the end of the third quarter 25-15 Haefner was high with 11 points while Kramer had 8, Terhufen 4 points and Larsen 4.

This gives us a season's record of 2 wins against 5 losses of which three losses have come in our last three games.

Be sure to attend our next game January 17 at 7:00 and bring your donations with you.

Population of U. S. Now 155,800,000

FIVE CANDIDATES SEEK OFFICES

Garner—The political pot is beginning to simmer in Hancock county. Five incumbent office holders have signified their intension to be candidates to succeed themselves. Hancock county Representative Penn Eckels recently requested nomination papers from the office of the secretary of state and will be a candidate in the June primary for his present office He is serving his second term as representative.

Hancock county supervisors F J. Schoun and Clarence A. Bird are circulating nomination papers to become candidates to succeed themselves, also County Auditor Maynard Schoneman & Recorder Edith Sonquist. Supervisor Bird was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late George Th. Gerdes and was elected to fill the vacancy at the last general election. All candidates are republicans.

GOODELL TAKES PAIR FROM SWALEDALE TEAMS

Swaledale—Goodell won a pair of close games from Swaledale here Friday night. The boys won 38-36 in an overtime with Bonner scoring the winning basket. Henry Beek tallied 20 points for the winners while Roger Ames had 18 for Swaledale. Evelyn Haupt scored 23 points to pace the Goodell girls to a 39-35 win. Doris Stevens with 20 points and Marilyn Nargon with 15 led Swaledale.

How many stray thoughts of business, of the dental appointment, of the children, of the bargin sale down the street have sent pedestrians to their deaths in the streets?

Only the dead and injured are counted of course. The little mental shadows that led them thoughtlessly into the streets are seldom known. But the pedestrian traffic victim is too often a person who forgot his ability to watch for danger.

The world has never given man a time when he could afford not to watch for danger. The apparent security of modern living has not changed that, but it has, at least, given us time to watch.

Take that time to watch when you walk or drive. Take time especially in wintertime when ice and snow increase the suddenness of accidents. Take time to watch and to live.

Mr. And Mrs. Emery Schaefer Last Couple Married In] Church Here

OPEN HOUSE HELD HONORING MR. & MRS. EMERY SCHAEFER

Mr. and Mrs. Emery Schaefer celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary on December 30th at the Reformed Church in Klemme by holding Open House, from 2:00 until 5:00 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Emery Schaefer were married at the Reformed Church in Klemme by Calvin Grosshuesch. It was the first wedding that Rev. Grosshuesch performed in the Klemme charge. and incidently was the last wedding performed in the old church. The Schaefers have four children: Donald, who teaches at West Union High School; Elwyn, who goes to the army January 14th; Roger, farming with his father, and Harvey, who is a senior in the Forest City High School. All four children were baptized and confirmed by Rev Grosshuesch. When the Schaefers were first married they lived in Klemme and worked for Albert Schmidt and then moved to a farm west of town, until 1947, when they moved to Forest City, where they purchased a farm. Their attendants at the orginal weddiny, namely, Hilda Schaefer, now Mrs. Floyd Wilson, and Bernard Smid, a brother of Mrs. Schaefer were present for the Silver Wedding Anniversary.

The church was decorated in Pink and Silver colorings and the linen table cloth used belonged to Grandmother Smid in Germany and was used at Mr. and Mrs. U. G. Smid's wedding, and Mr. and Mrs. Emery Schaefer's wedding and again for the Silver Wedding Anniversary Mrs. Robert Hanson and Mrs. Floyd Wilson poured and Mrs. Donald Schaefer took care of the guest book. Relatives and friends gathered from the following towns for the afternoon: Goodell, Klemme, Garner, Miller, Forest City, Leland, Kanawha, Marble Rock, Rockford Ventura, Britt, Clear Lake, Marshalltown, Fort Dodge, West Union, McGregor, Nora Springs and Des Moines.

Mr. and Mrs. Emery Schaefer have one grandson, Randy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Schaefer of West Union. Her relatives include, Bernard and Henry Smid of Klemme, and Mrs. Ed. Rall of Hanover and Otto Smid of San Franisco, Calif. His relatives include: Doris, Mrs. Robt. Hanson of Kanawha, Hilda Mrs. Floyd Wilson of Rockford, Iowa.

The Silver Wedding Program consisted of:

Silent-Mock Wedding

Three numbers by the Beier Girls.

History-Written in verse and read by Mrs. Herold Ridder.

Silver Wedding Poem-by Mrs. Roy Schaefer

Responses by Mr. and Mrs. Emery Schaefer.

HEAVY DEMAND HITS DOG FUND

Sixty claims for loss to domestic animals and fowl killed or maimed by dogs in 1951 filed with the Hancok county board of supervisors totaled $4,559.55, the largest sum for such loss in many years. Losses in 1950 totaled $2,713.55.

The claims have been prorated and paid. They are paid out of the license fees collected on dogs in Hancock county annually.

The animal license fee for 1952 as fixed by the board of supervisors is $1.50 for each male & $4 for each female in townships and in towns having no city license. In towns where dogs are licensed the fee is $1 for each male and $3 for each female.

If claims continue to come at the same excessive rate in 1952 as they did in 1951, the board will be forced to increase the license fee in 1952, as much of the surplus which has accumulated from previous years was used in paying 1951 claims.

PILOT SAVES PLANE DESPITE BROKEN SKI

Garner—What might have been a serious accident was averted by the skillful manipulation of a light airplane by Manager Bill Evans of the Garner airport.

A ski was broken in the takeoff and with only one ski Pilot Evans signaled that he was in trouble and requested that the Garner fire department be on hand in case the craft overturned in the landing and might catch fire.

Evans according to fireman brought his craft down without mishap in spite of the broken ski.

Hancock Dairy Herd Yields High Income

Herman Paul, steward at the Hancock county home, reports a dairy income at the Hancock Co. home in the sum of $4,295.77 for 1951. Hancock county owns one of the county's outstanding Holstien herds at the county home. The herd was recently tested by authorities and rated one of the best.

Re-Elect Schoun Board Ch'mn

Hancock County supervisors re-elected Supervisor F. J. Schoun, chairman of the board for the year 1952, at the annual organization meeting at the courthouse Wednesday. Schoun served as chairman of the board last year. The other two members of the board the Clinton D. Daniels of Concord Township and Clarence A. Bird of Woden.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Neuberger Arrive At Brownsville, Texas

The Times had a card from Clarence Neuberger and wife, stating they arrived at Brownsville, Texas Sunday evening, had good roads and fine weather all the way down. The temperature is 85 degrees and a most pleasant change for them. There is no fruit near Brownsville and oranges and grapefruit are shipped in from 200 miles west and sell at $3.50 per bushel. Clarence took a few cases of eggs with him which he sold for 75 cents a dozen, a nice profit that paid their expense down to Brownsville.

COUSINS ENTERTAINED AT 500 PARTY AT BARZ HOME

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Barz entertained cousins at a 500 party at their home Friday evening, with play at five tables.

Mrs. Martin Barz and Dr. H. G. Voetberg won the high prizes and Mrs. Voetberg and Allen Barz won the low prizes. Mr. and Mrs. Barz served a nice lunch later in the evening. All enjoyed a fine time at the Barz home.

"Rockettes" Win Sixth In Row

Coach Juhl's Jr. high "Rockettes" won their sixth game in a row here Monday afternoon. The final score was Klemme 42 Ventura 18. The "Rockettes" led at halftime 22-3 and at the end of the third quarter 3... Reserves played the last quarter. Bridges was high with 34 points while Barz and Christians each had 2 and B. Thompson scored 4 points.

In a recent game Coach Juhl's "Rockettes" won over Thornton 32-20 in a game played a... from home. Bridges was high with 24 points Barz 2, Rosendahl 4, and Thompson 2.

The "Rockettes" are enjoying their best season in junior high basketball and wish they could receive a large turnout of fans for our next home game with Crystal Lake, January 17, 7:00. This is our last night game here and an excellent chance to see the team in action. Our record is 7 wins against 1 loss and that by two points to Kanawha earlier in the season.

CSCS Leader Honored

Mrs. D. P. Anderson, leader of the Methodist CSCS was pleasantly surprised at their morning hour of Worship Sunday morning, as all the youngsters heard about her birthday, and they had a handkerchief for her. She received many lovely hankies and says "Thanks" to all the children.

DIOGENES GIVES UP

"IT'S too tough," said Diogenes sadly. "I'm handing in my lantern."

"Isn't this a rather hasty decision?" we asked. "Don't you think you should reconsider?"

"No. I'm quitting. The search for an honest man has never been harder. I thought I had found one the other day, but he got away."

We noticed something fuzzy on his sandals. "What is it?" we asked.

"Mink," he said sadly "It gets into everything these days. I just dashed off a little verse about it." Here Diogenes read:

"Think of me, little mink,
Wondering what people think;
Lately I don't sleep a wink
Knowing I may be a link
Putting someone in the clink.

"Sort of shows what a mink may think," he went on. "Oh, well, as I said, I'm through anyhow."

"Aren't you too cynical?" we asked. "There are plenty of honest men around."

"Oh yeah!" said Diogenes. "Get yourself a lantern and see how you like it. I will advise that if I would settle for something less and make a compromise I could get somewhere."

"Something less?" we asked.

"Yes. There's the nearly honest man, the almost nearly honest man, the possibly almost nearly honest man and the possible-almost-nearly-honest - provided-you-don't-ask - too - many-questions type. You find 'em everywhere these days in all walks of life and on every level."

"I suppose it really is hard to find somebody who hasn't taken bribes or accepted favors," we agreed.

"Oh, I don't bother too much with them," said Diogenes. "They're the great minority. It's the bribe givers, the tribute payers, the fixers, connivers, get-it-for-you-wholesale boys who need attention. For every man who takes a bribe there are thousands ready to pay it, which is the sad part."

"There's at least one gravy distributor, influence hunter and general contaminator in every neighborhood," we said.

"You're being conservative," declared Diogenes. "The real termites in American life are the fellows always ready to use money and connections to grease their way out of something. How many people do you know who wouldn't play ball with a tax agent, attend a testimonial dinner to a slick politician not noted for honesty, vote for a phony, put over a fast one, play a sure thing in a fixed horse race or basketball game?"

"Oh, there must be millions," we said. "Do you say there is more dishonesty today than there ever was?"

"It comes in more models and sizes," said Diogenes.

Diogenes was obviously washed up and discouraged. He needed encouragement.

"Listen," we said. "What you need is a new lantern . . . I know a fellow who can get one for you with 40 per cent off and . . ."

That's all we remember. Diogenes had slugged us with his old lantern and fled the scene.

These are days when you wonder whether even Diogenes got his lantern honestly . . . B B.H. says there are so many rascals in the world today that they are using a two-platoon system . . . The dollar is now worth 50 cents . . . That's provided you don't meet a fellow with 50 cents worth of something for which he is demanding a dollar and a half. . . Woman dashing into a hallway as the air raid sirens sounded in a New York drill: "That reminds me I must call up my voice teacher." . . . "Churchill Visit Will Have No Money Motive"—headline . . . Wanna bet? . . . We just heard of a labor leader who wants time and a half for tearing up contracts . . . Both parties, we are informed, will have a platform plank next year denouncing mink.

New York: A city sometimes known as Quillsboro, located at the southern tip of New York State, bounded on the west by the Hudson River and on the east, north and south by ultimatums, threats and dictatorial pronouncements. It was first settled by the Dutch who moved out in time to avoid harassments, headaches, transportation tie-ups and assorted chaos The city was later taken over by Michael Quill as his personal domain, without a shot being fired. The climate is hot.

After the visitor had talked all evening about the size and fierceness of the mosquitoes, the old Texan was becoming much annoyed.

"Just look at them swarm," the guest complained. "Why don't you screen this porch?"

Little Johnny was doing his homework. His problem was: A trucker had fifty crates of apples to sell for $10 apiece. If he sold them all, what would he get? Johnny was getting nowhere fast and Mother decided to help him. "It's easy," she said, "you just multiply fifty by ten." "Oh, I know that," said Johnny. "The answer is $500. But then it says: 'What would he get? I know I'd get a repeating rifle, but how do I know what he'd get?'"

Enhance Breakfast Appeal with Hot Breads
(See Recipes Below)

Hot Breakfast Breads

WHEN THE FAMILY gathers for breakfast in the morning, there's nothing like a batch of freshly-baked hot breads to help start the day with a genuine smile.

Grandmother knew that the best way to get those late risers out of bed on time to speed them off to school, was to wave a wand of fragrance from her oven. That irresistible odor of something baking is the best alarm anyone can have.

What's the homemaker's reward for getting out of bed just a bit earlier to bake in the morning? Why, those lusty, wonderful appetites and the pleasure of seeing her family off to a good and cheerful start in the morning!

To save time in the morning, have all ingredients measured the night before, ready to combine and bake. While baking, you can set the table in a gay cloth with cheery dishes, and start the other things for breakfast: fruit, cereal, beverage, meat and eggs.

Spicy Oatmeal Muffins
(Makes 8-10 large muffins)
1 cup quick rolled oats, uncooked
½ cup buttermilk or sour milk
¾ cup applesauce
1 egg, beaten
¼ cup brown sugar
1 cup sifted enriched flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon allspice
¼ cup melted shortening

Combine rolled oats and buttermilk; mix well. Add applesauce, egg and sugar. Sift together dry ingredients and add to mixture, stirring only enough to combine. Fold in melted shortening. Fill greased muffin pans ⅔ full. Bake in a hot oven (425°F.) 20 to 25 minutes.

Apricot Coffee Cake
(Makes an 8-inch square)
¼ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
2 eggs
1½ cups sifted enriched flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk
¾ cup quick rolled oats, uncooked
½ cup cooked, dried apricots (well drained)

TOPPING:
1 tablespoon melted butter
¼ cup brown sugar
¼ cup chopped nutmeats

Cream shortening; add sugar gradually and cream well. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Add to creamed mixture alternately with milk. Fold in rolled oats and apricots. Pour into greased 8-inch square pan. Combine ingredients for topping and sprinkle over batter. Bake in a hot oven (400°F.) for 20 to 25 minutes.

Butterscotch Pecan Biscuits
(Makes 16 to 20 medium biscuits)
2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder

Beverage
*Recipe Given

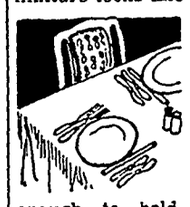
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup shortening
¾ cup milk

Sift flour, baking powder and salt into bowl. Cut in shortening (with knives, fork, or a blender) until the mixture looks like coarse cornmeal. Remove 1 cup of this mixture to a small bowl; blend with milk to form a paste (do not try to smooth). Add paste to shortening and mix just enough to hold dough together. Transfer dough to board or pastry cloth which has been dusted with flour. Knead lightly. Roll dough slightly more than ½ inch thick; cut with floured cutter. Place biscuit in muffin pan which has been rubbed with shortening, in which 1 teaspoon butter, 1 teaspoon brown sugar and chopped pecans have been placed. Bake in hot oven (425°F.) 15 to 20 minutes.

Cinnamon Pinwheels
(Makes 16 medium pinwheels)
2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup shortening.
¾ cup milk

FILLING:
2 teaspoons cinnamon
⅓ cup sugar
2 tablespoons butter

Sift flour, baking powder and salt into bowl. Cut in shortening (with knives, fork, or a blender) until the mixture looks like coarse cornmeal.



Remove 1 cup of this mixture to a small bowl; blend with milk to form a paste (do not try to smooth). Add paste to shortening and mix just enough to hold dough together. Transfer dough to board or pastry cloth which has been dusted with flour. Knead lightly. Roll dough to oblong shape, about 10" x 18". Sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar and dot with butter. Roll lengthwise in same manner as jelly roll and seal edge tightly. Cut slices; place on cookie sheet or in muffin tins which have been rubbed with shortening. Bake in hot oven (425°F.) 12 to 15 minutes.

Corn Cheese Muffins
(Makes 12 medium muffins)
1 cup sifted flour
1 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons baking powder
3 tablespoons sugar
1 cup yellow corn meal
¾ cup grated sharp cheese
1 egg
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons melted shortening

Sift flour, salt, baking powder and sugar into a bowl. Add cornmeal and cheese; mix. Beat egg slightly; combine with milk and melted shortening. Add liquid mixture to dry ingredients and stir until just mixed. Place in muffin tins which have been rubbed with shortening. Bake in a moderately hot oven (400°F.) 25 minutes.

LYNN SAYS:

Plan a Sensible Reducing Diet

Any meat may be eaten with the exception of pork which is high in fat. Use only cuts, however, that can be broiled, baked or roasted.

If extra interest is desired in vegetables, cook them in bouillon or season with celery or onion salt or herbs.

A good dressing for vegetable salads includes tomato juice seasoned with salt, pepper, dry mustard and a clove of garlic.

Dessert for weight loosers should include fresh or unsweetened cooked fruit, plain or fruited gelatin.

Cut down your bread to one or at the most, two slices daily. These should be thin and unbuttered. Avoid the sweet spreads, too, like jelly, jam, sugar, honey or marmalade.

Salad dressings are to be avoided in reducing programs because most of them contain highly caloric oils or fats. Make a dressing with lemon juice or vinegar with salt and pepper.

January Inventory Sales Offer Housewives Attractive Bargains

In the next few days Main Street merchants will begin the tedious job of inventory of stocks. Shortly afterwards, your local newspaper will carry announcements of January and first of the year sales. The home town housewife who studies the advertisements and is willing to spend a little time in shopping will find numerous bargains.

From the merchant's point of view, this first of the year promotion is designed to clear space in his store for spring merchandise. By selling it at cost, and sometimes less, he reduces his inventory and secures capital to reinvest in spring and summer goods.

True, some of the merchandise he will advertise may be damaged by handling, but generally it is as good as when he received it into his store. The most serious difficulty he may encounter is the lack of assorted sizes, colors and styles.

A MAIN STREET FEATURE

But by careful shopping and studying the advertisements in the home town newspaper, the housewife can find savings of as much as 50 per cent.

This is also a good time for the housewife to invest that Christmas present of cash in new drapes and household furnishings. These lines, as well as apparel, will go on sale in thousands of Main Street stores across the country.

One last hint to the bargain hunting housewife: look for the label, brand names that you know from past experience are quality. If the garment's label says 100 per cent virgin wool then you know its quality. If it doesn't, then keep looking until you find what you want.

1952 Will Be Designated 'See America First' Year

Home towners across the nation are going to be seeing a lot of the slogan "See America First" during 1952. It is the official slogan of the Hotel Greeters of America and the American Hotel Association. The home town that has a tourist attraction and will participate in the program will find a lot of outside dollars floating around the community.

Ninety million Americans with vacations on their minds will be moving about by train, plane, bus, auto, bike and on foot to get better acquainted with their native land during the year The community with an attraction worth seeing should start now to sell that attraction to the tourists of his state and the nation.

Jingling in the pockets of these 90 million tourists will be something like 15 billion dollars. Some of it will be spent for lobsters in Maine, hot dogs at Coney Island, shrimp in Mississippi, steaks in Chicago, chow mein in San Francisco and barbecue in Texas. Everyone, everywhere, is going to benefit by this great pilgrimage to see America. There is no reason why your home town should not also.

More than 30 city and state hotel associations have joined in the promotion and will use the slogan "See America First" in all their publicity and advertising activities.

Backing the Hotel Greeters and other hotel associations are many of the transportation companies, proclaiming America's transportation system to be ready and the best in the world. Hotel and resort operators offer the finest accommodations and services available in the world. And publications allied to the hotel and travel field will report and extol the "See America First" story

Louis Rangno of Los Angeles, director of the promotion, had this to say of the project: "Nation-wide promotion of the slogan 'See America First' is not meant solely to discourage foreign travel Rather it is to serve as a reminder to the general public, hotel, resort, transportation and allied fields that to 'know America is to live America.' Everything that can be done along educational and promotional lines to stimulate the desire to travel in America increases the general welfare of all concerned in the activity."

The American Hotel Association, speaking for its 6,000 members, said the industry will do everything it can to help the traveler on his journey across the nation. The group reported hotel accommodations today are priced for every purse. The freedom to travel is for all, the rich, the not-so-rich, the white collar worker, the laborer, and the student.

A man could travel every day of his life in the United States and every day see something wonderful. So, this promotion will better acquaint the public with the many points of scenic and historic distinction with which America abounds. And it will serve notice to the world that the right to move about freely is an American freedom, a personal freedom not to be denied.

Watch for the slogan "See America First" during the coming months and find out if your town is participating.

Local Dimes March Starts January 2

The campaign for polio-fighting funds will get under way in thousands of home towns of the nation on January 2. The March of Dimes campaign period has been doubled because the National Foundation has been forced into debt four yeare in succession by surging polio incidence.

During the last four years, the foundation and its chapters have spent $79,000,000 in March of Dimes funds for patient care charges alone, as compared with $41,000,000 in the previous ten-year span.

This situation was brought about not only by rising costs but also because there were more cases during the last four years than in the entire previous decade.

Added to increased costs and increased incidence has been a third factor that has compounded the difficulties of the National Foundation. Polio doesn't just hit and run. The effects of any one year's epidemic are not soon forgotten by many of the stricken ones, nor by the foundation chapters which pay the bills.

In 1951, for example, the March of Dimes organization provided care for 45,000 men, women and children stricken in prior years—in addition to the four out of five of the new patients who needed help.

This black picture has meant that the National Foundation is annually faced with an average of 30,000 cases, in contrast to the 10 to 12 thousand cases a year formerly considered "normal."

Odessa Conducts Antipolio Cleanup

Odessa, Texas, where the invisible enemy polio has stricken 62 persons and taken nine lives this year turned out in force with rakes and disinfectant recently to clean up the town. Bankers, lawyers, clergymen, and doctors were among the thousands who put on work clothes. Both banks and many business houses closed. Other firms operated with skeleton crews of women.

A clothier gave work gloves, a grocery donated rakes and shovels, neighboring towns sent 120 trucks and drivers, and oil companies provided mobile units to spray alleys with live steam.

The community had 50 polio cases during November and December. Also, 43 cases of infant diarrhea prompted the cleanup.

When the day was done 500 truckloads of trash had been hauled to a special dump and burned. Housewives served workers hot coffee.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
The Family Year

NINETEEN FIFTY-TWO ought to be America's family year. Inasmuch as the whole world is in an uproar, and half of its occupants suffering from one disaster or another, this would be a good time to pull ourselves together domestically, and make every hour count in developing new securities and new happiness right in the family circle.

For no changes in wars, politics, treaties, loans, international agreements can possibly be as important as just that—what you and I do in our homes. The very base of civilization is set in these eight-and nine-room homes of ours, these five and six-room flats. That's where the great reformation of the world is going to start. And it is only when we make home perfect that the change will begin. Ten changed family groups in your town would make a dent in world misery; a hundred in your state would save thousands of divorces and despairs, and if one million women began today to make 1952 the happiest year their own loved ones ever had known the whole of the tired old world would know it.

Start with New Year

So start with this New Year, and use just the materials you have at hand, and see where you get.

Start with love, of course. Love fulfills the law. If you are the man of the house scatter a little affection about. Amaze your children into the whispered comment:

". . . family year . . ."

"What's happened to Dad! He's awfully nice this morning."

Talk confidence and safety to the children. What you and their mother say is making little records on their minds and souls, scratches of fear and dislike and discouragement that won't ever be effaced. Change all that by telling them that nothing bad can happen as long as they love each other. Your long-suffering wife may faint away at this sudden change in your attitude, but you'll have to risk that. Remind them that if you have less money someday—well, you'll move to that battered old farm Joe Doakes has been trying to sell you, and Mommy and Maureen can make doughnuts for the market, and Jim and Bob here can raise cocker pups. Cockers sell well, these days.

You'll Be Surprised

You may be surprised and somewhat daunted to discover that of all things that is exactly what your supposedly pampered children would like.

If you happen to be the young daughter of the house, reading this, then contribute your own sensational reforms to the general movement. Suddenly grow up. Grow up to realize that it is love, and not just fussiness and bossiness, that is worrying Mother and Dad about you. That with the wrong friends, drinks, cars, parties, night clubs, you can throw away in your teens what all your later years can't replace, and that they know it and you don't. A reckless love-affair now, a hasty, silly marriage, isn't just a matter of making some boy promise he'll never tell anyone, or rushing into a young divorce. No, it's doing something to you, body and spirit, that has a way of recalling itself all your life long.

But it's on you, the wife and mother, that the real burden of this family year falls. Begin by being always cheerful, always confident. On the outside, anyway. Puzzle them all into wondering what delightful thing has happened to Mother. Why, she's always smiling. She acts as if she had some awfully pleasant secret deep in her heart. She walked to the door with Daddy, and brushed something off his coat—she hasn't done that for ever so long! And she said, "Take care of yourself now, we value you," and did you see Dad come back up the steps and kiss her again?

Have Dan's mother and sisters over for a Sunday dinner, and merely laugh good-naturedly when they tell you that it was all your fault that there was a breach in the family

To build a family takes more than people. It takes someone at the head who will keep a high heart against all the little pricks of the day, take an occasional humiliation, admit an occasional mistake, bear with unappreciation sometimes and with the tiredness and unreason of everyone else most of the time.

Ottumwa's "Wagon Bridge"

You probably never heard of Ottumwa's famous "wagon bridge" . . . but it was quite a sensation back in 1858.

That was the time of the Lincoln-Douglass debates. Ottumwa planned a big rally. But there was no bridge across the river.

So the settlers lined up their wagons, end for end, made a bridge 300 feet long . . . and solved their rally problem.

That kind of cooperation was typical of pioneer Iowa, and it's typical of our greatness today. Here were people from many lands . . . all with their own tastes and customs. But each cooperated with the other, respected the other's rights, and ideas.

And, today we carry on those same traditions. A family of one descent may enjoy its smorgasbord and lutfisk . . . another pork chs sauerkraut and a temperate glass of beer. That's American . . . as big and varied as the pioneers who made it.

Our ability to live side by side as good neighbors, with all our many tastes, makes for a wonderful community, and a great state.

Obituary Of Victor Hueneman

VICTOR CALVIN HUENEMAN was born May 2, 1894 at German Valley, near Titonka where his father, the Rev. Jacob Hueneman was pastor of a German Reformed congregation. His mother's maiden name was Mathilda Kaster. Victor was batized as an infant by the Rev Johnson of Belmond.

When Victor was 5 years old the family moved to Menno So Dak., and 2 years later moved to Garner, Iowa. It was at Garner that the Rev Jacob Hueneman died at the age of 33. The widow Mathilda and her four children continued to live in Garner until Victor completed his public school education and the moved to their Liberty township farm 3 miles north of Klemme. Victor was 17 years old when he assumed the responsibility of operating the home farm for his mother and sisters.

On September 6, 1924 Victor Hueneman and Drusilla Bromer were married at the church parsonage in Klemme by the Rev. A. A. Deppling. They commenced housekeeping on this same Hueneman farm.

This union was blessed from time to time by the arrival of bright and healthy daughters. How lucky for Victor to have shared in this pleasant but onerous task of providing for this family of children and watching them grow up to womanhood.

On Oct. 14, 1927, Victor lost a foot in a farm accident and while laying on his hospital bed he expressed the wish that he might live to see all of his children educated and confirmed in the Christian Faith. His prayer was granted.

Victor was a man of model habits; was active in church work, having held at various times such offices as Elder, Deacon and Sunday School Superintendent in the Peace Reformed Church of which he became a member at the age of 15, by confirmation, during the pastorate of the Rev. R. Kirchhefer.

Victor became ill about a year ago, sought relief at Rochester and other hospitals, all to no avail. The end came Thursday morning, December 27, 1951 at his farm home—age 57 years, 7 months and 25 days.

And now his busy life is over and we lay him to rest in the beautiful church yard of the Peace Reformed Church, near his father, his grandparents and other relatives, and near the founders of this, the oldest church in Hancock County.

He leaves besides his wife Drusilla, five daughters Miriam, Lois, Abigale, Rachel and Eunice, all at home; his mother, Mathilda Hueneman, Garner, Iowa; two sisters, Amalie (Mrs. Ferdinand Lemke, Meservey,) and Stella, (Mrs. Ray Haberkamp, Garner, Iowa) and other more distant relatives and friends.

New Class For Children Being Organized By Rev. Egeland

The Pastor's Confirmation and Membership Training Class for children will be organized this Thursday afternoon at 4:00 p. m. in the Klemme Meth. Church. To be eligible for admission to the class children must reach the age of 12 by June 1st, 1952.

Masonic Lodge Meets

There will be a meeting of Bethel Lodge at Garner this week Thursday evening at 8:00 o'clock. Installation services will be held at which time Fred J Arnold of Klemme will be installed Master for the coming year. Other officers will also be installed. Lunch will be served after the meeting.

Go-Getters Hold Xmas Party

The Twin Lake Go-Getters held their Christmas Party at the home of Dorothy, Leola, and Norma Lacey. Ten members and one leader answered roll call on "What I want for Christmas." A short business meeting was held. Games, provided by the hostesses, were played, after which Christmas songs were sung, accompanied by Darlene Roul. The gifts were then exchanged. From the Christmas cards we sold to raise money for our treasury we made $43. Lunch was served by the hostesses and their mother. The next meeting will be held at the home of Linda Swalve on January 12.

THIRD GRADE NEWS

Billy De Merritt returned his dental card Wednesday. We still have a few cards not returned.

Thursday we put our booklet on fruits together. It contains pictures of apples, bananas, dates, oranges, lemons and pineapples. We made a cover for it and called it, "A Few of Our Fruits." When we studied this part of our Geography we learned many of the fruits we like do not grow in our state or even in our country.

Ellen Waddingham, Joanne Trampel and Jerry Stokesbary were absent due to sickness.

FOURTH GRADE NEWS

This has been a short week but also a busy one.

Those to win first prize in our sixteen week health contest were Maurine Johnson, Sherryle Clabaugh and Roxanne Back. Second Prize went to Jo Anne Jacobs and Jane Renner and 3rd went to Edna Heginger, Miriam Hartbeck and Candace Carlson. Monday begins a new contest and we all hope a few boys win some prizes next time.

Paige Patterson was a visitor in our room all day Friday.

Sharon Blau treated our class with candy bars last Friday. Her birthday is January 5.

Last Wednesday we began a new chapter in Science. It is about fossils and the huge dinosaurs. We all like the subject very much.

SOCIAL SECURITY

4,400,000 People Receiving Survivors Insurance Payments

A young man walked into a social security field office recently and said: "I've just started to work for myself and I want to get straight on my rights and obligations under old-age survivors insurance."

The conversation developed some interesting facts. His father had been a plant foreman, and his job was brought under social security when the original law went into effect in 1937. At the time of his death in the forties, he was fully insured.

By careful management of the family's meagre savings, plus the monthly survivors' benefit payments, the widow had been able to keep the son in school. He finished his vocational school training. He took a job, and then he married. Now he had started his own business, and so is one of more than four million self-employed who are for the first time coming under social security.

This particular interview was of unusual significance in that it is an outstanding example of a generation protected by old-age and survivors insurance building social security protection for the next generation. It is proof that social security has come of age.

In January, 1937, when the program was inaugurated it was frankly an innovation and an experiment. For several years, its progress was necessarily slow, and its impact on family economy was limited. Beneficiaries added to the rolls did not average over a quarter of a million persons yearly and coverage was restricted to persons employed in commerce and industry.

Fifteen years, and the several amendments to the original act, have changed the picture. The widow and the son in our story are numbered among the three out of every four mothers and children who now have this insurance protection. Moreover, not only jobs in commerce and industry, but most other kinds of work are now covered by the social security law.

In brief, the old-age and survivors insurance program under federal social security now affects three out of every four workers in the nation. Sixty-three million persons gainfully employed or self-employed are in work covered by the law.

OBVIOUSLY, fifteen years of operation has not been a sufficient length of time to bring old-age insurance protection to even a majority of the people past 65 However, at the close of the fifteenth year of the program, 4,400,000 people were receiving monthly old-age and survivors insurance payments.

How much in benefit payments does this mean to the average worker and his family? For the worker who after 1950 earns $250 a month his personal monthly benefit payment will be $72.00; he and his wife will get a total of $108 monthly, and in case of his death his widow will get $54.40.

The scale of benefit payments ranges from a minimum of $20 monthly to an individual to a maximum family benefit payment of $150. As earnings up to $3,600 a year are now credited to a worker's social security account, the average benefit payment will steadily increase in the years immediately ahead.

It is not difficult to evaluate the effect of this social insurance program on the average community and the average family. As in the case of the young man mentioned at the beginning of this article, it is making it possible to hold many homes together; as illustrated in his case also, it is enabling one generation to acquire the means to build the same protection for the next generation. This, as old-age and survivors insurance enters its sixteenth year of continuous operation, is the most significant achievement of the program.

Star Dust
STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

NAVY Commander Arthur Godfrey made a promise about a year ago that has developed into one of radio's favorite Cinderella stories. While on two weeks' active duty at Pensacola Godfrey was asked by enthusiastic shipmates of Julius La Rosa to hear the young man sing. Godfrey did, said if La Rosa weren't in the Navy he'd give him a job at once, told the young man to look him up in New York

ARTHUR GODFREY

La Rosa appeared on the CBS Radio "Arthur Godfrey Time" while on leave, and recently, one week after he was discharged, became one of the "little Godfreys", a regular on the star's daytime program.

Ginger Rogers and Fred Allen should make a wonderful couple in "We're Not Married", which Edmund Goulding will direct for 20th Century-Fox. It's the story of five couples who find their marriages upset by a legal technicality. Allen's last film was "It's in the Bag", way back in 1945. Zsa Zsa Gabor, George Sanders' wife, will be one of the other wives.

Dick Powell, ABC's sleuth on the Friday night "Richard Diamond" air series, now is grounded. He recently sold his plane, at the request of June Allyson Powell; they'll use the money toward payment on a ranch in northern California.

When a movie or radio star first tackles television, usually in guest shots, the results are usually pretty horrible. If they step out with their own shows—murder! Dinah Shore is a rare exception. After some try-outs on other programs she has settled down twice a week in the Dinah Shore Show, on NBC-TV, and from the very first she has been an outstanding success.

THE FICTION CORNER
SUMMER STORMS

By Ralph Blanchard

FOR a week it had been raining. Ken sat on the porch of the resort hotel and looked over the lake

"Why in thunder doesn't it stop," he asked? He threw the newspaper at a fly on the railing.

3-Minute Fiction

Gail was sitting on the swing She was pretty with a few freckles over her nose and cheeks—just a few.

"There's no use letting it get you, Ken," she said, knowing inwardly that she was tired of it, too.

"With this thing on your leg, you'd be fed up," he snapped, thumping the heavy cast. He had been in an accident two weeks ago. Now that there was rain he was doubly unhappy.

"Maybe by tomorrow I can take you for a ride in the boat," Gail suggested. "It looks as though it might stop raining tonight."

Ken kicked his good leg against the steps. "I'll go by myself. I'm not a cripple."

Gail felt her face redden a bit. She, too, was nervous and on edge. The rain had been so bad for the last week that no one had done anything but play cards. She turned her face from Ken.

"I'm sorry," he said.

Gail turned abruptly. "But, Ken, you know the doctor warned you about being on the lake. What if you should have an accident?"

"I'm not an undernourished school kid, you know!"

She knew what he was thinking and answered, "Of course, you can take care of yourself, but it's better to be safe than sorry."

"Will you please shut up!"

Gail looked at him. He had never come right out and said that he loved her, but she knew that he did. And she understood him. It wasn't that he was angry at her, but it was the whole business of rain and a broken leg.

THE next morning the rain stopped for a while. Ken was up early and down by the lake walking along the shore with his crutches. He felt better than he had for several days, and when he came to a boat he decided that he would go out just a little ways from the beach. With his crutch, he pushed the boat out, and laboriously placed himself between the two oars. He heaved a sigh as he felt the boat move over the water.

For a while he thought the sun was coming out from behind the clouds, but the sky grew darker As the boat sped through the water, it would snap at the waves. After a few minutes, Ken realized that he had gone further than he had planned. He looked up at the sky and saw that it was just on the verge of storming. As he looked up, one of the oars slipped, slid down into the darkening water just out of reach.

The rain poured down as though someone had taken a knife and slashed the under side of the dark clouds. Quickly, he took the other oar and used it Indian fashion, but the boat was much heavier than a canoe, and it was hard to lift the heavy paddle.

The waves grew larger. The shore was at least three-hundred yards away, probably more, and the wind seemed to push the small boat further away. If only he had two oars, his arms would not have been so tired.

In his mind he saw Gail sitting on the porch. He wondered if he would ever see her again. His wrists ached and sharp pains shot through his broken leg.

A wave nearly swamped the boat and he was thrown backwards. His head hit the side of the craft.

He was having a crazy, ugly dream. Multicolored spots swam up and down before his eyes. A sickening hum rang loudly in his head. Suddenly the dots disappeared. The hum stopped abruptly.

When he opened his eyes, he saw Gail blurred before his vision, and he heard her voice, softly, "It's all right, Ken. It's alright, now."

"She must have missed me and gone for help," he thought. Then, her voice faded away. As he closed his eyes, he knew she was right. Everything would be fine.

He felt her soft hand on his face He wasn't quite sure whether he was sleeping or awake now, but he kissed her fingers as they caressed his lips.

Truman and Taft Will Be Opponents in Election

By Wright A. Patterson

AT THE TIME this is written it seems entirely safe to name the candidates for the presidency on both the Democratic and Republican tickets in the political race of 1952.

Truman has not definitely said that he will seek another term, but has so broadly intimated that he proposes to do so, that there can be no chance of a miss in naming him as the Democratic nominee.

His is the last chance any one will have of being named for the job for more than two terms. The new law providing for a two term limit specifically exempts the incumbent, which in this case is Harry S. Truman. Whether he is elected or not, he can at least have the glory of being the nominee of his party for a third term.

The President will start his campaign with an advantage of some nine million votes, representing the army of government bureaucrats, their relatives and friends. With such an advantage he believes he can win, and it does represent a big handicap for the Republicans to overcome.

Many Republican leaders, who have in the past figured that Senator Taft was not a vote getter, did not have popular appeal, and did have organized labor against him, changed their opinions on both points following the last election in Ohio, when Taft carried the state in his fight for reelection by a majority of better than 440,000.

It proved to the doubting Thomases of his party that the senator could attract votes, and that union labor leaders did not control the union labor vote. They want a candidate for 1952 who will not take success for granted, but will fight for the needed votes.

The limited demand for Eisenhower has largely petered out because the general has not made any announcement of his political affiliations, or uttered any desire for the nomination. Had he done these things, by this time the result might still be very much in doubt.

In his campaign it is reasonably expected that Senator Taft will have the enthusiastic backing of MacArthur. As a participant in the campaign on the Republican side, MacArthur will do much to offset that nine million vote handicap Taft must overcome to win.

Taft is not the type to be overconfident and count the votes before they are cast, as did Dewey. Regardless of straw polls, or the opinions of political leaders, he will figure he can lose up to the counting of the votes next November.

Taft will stand for the maintenance of our free enterprise system; he is opposed to all forms of socialism; he believes in helping those who are down, but he does not believe in making us a nation of indigents by the voting of indiscriminate doles to all who are willing to accept.

His platform will undoubtedly embrace those things he considers as of value to the nation as a whole, and not only those of one or more minorities. It will, in no sense, be a "me-too" platform that has resulted in Republican defeat in the last three campaigns. The 1952 campaign will be a real political battle. It will not be lost because of a lay-down on either side, but it will not be won until the votes have been counted.

We need airplanes to wipe out the Communist nests in Moscow, but the planes we need have not yet been ordered.

It is said the French Communists do not like Eisenhower. We hope Stalin and his compatriots in Moscow do not like him for the same reasons

MacArthur and his plea for Americanism will largely determine who will be inaugurated as President in 1953.

Let us hope the "too-big" Duponts are successful in perfecting an H-bomb.

Cheer up, Mr. President, it could be worse. Not all of the less than 3,000,000 for whom you have provided government jobs, even those from Missouri, are bad. Some of them are both legally and morally honest, even though dumb.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

SCRIPTURE: Matthew 4:18—25; Mark 1:16—20; Luke 5:1—11.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Matthew 4.18—25.

A 'Yes' to Christ

Lesson for January 13, 1952

JESUS knew some distinguished people. But his first and most intimate friends were not of that kind. Christianity started at the grassroots of humanity. It did not start in the top branches. It is a good thing, too.

Dr Foreman

It is quite true that Christianity has depths and heights to which most Christians do not attain. A St. Paul has not only mystic raptures but intellectual penetration which comparatively few Christians have shared or can share; he was a genius, and most of us are not geniuses.

But in Jesus' first group of companions there was no St. Paul. They were the plainest of plain people. The first of them were fishermen. They were not used to lectures; it is extremely doubtful whether any one of them would have understood the Epistle to the Ephesians if it had been read to them. But they understood Jesus . . . at least they understood what he said. He said, "Follow me;" and they followed him. It was as simple as that.

THAT is what Christianity is, at its heart: saying Yes to Jesus. When those fishermen said their "Yes" it meant three things, and those three are always involved whenever any one sincerely begins the Christian life. For this was only the beginning, of course. There was a long road ahead, much they would have to learn and do and suffer; but even the longest road has its beginning. And the Christian's road begins with this first "Yes."

First of all, it means surrender. They took him for their leader, they absorbed his teaching, they obeyed his orders. There is a Christian hymn, "My Jesus, as Thou Wilt"; one hears it most often at funerals, but it is not intended as a funeral hymn. It could well be the hymn sung when young people are confirmed or join the church; it could well be the every-morning song of every real Christian.

What do I want most? Is not a Christian question. Rather it should be, What does Christ want most?

AGAIN, those fishermen's "Yes" meant separation. They left their nets, their old occupation.

We must not read too much into this, as if in order to be a Christian one must leave his wage-earning business, whatever it is. On the contrary, the best place to be a Christian may be right where we are.

However, no matter what we may do for a living, it is still true that saying "Yes" to Jesus means saying "No" and "Goodbye" to many other things. It means separation from all that is out of tune with him; separation from selfishness, from sin, from trash and trifles. It means separation from habits that enslave us, from "recreations" that do not re-create but tear down, from places and opportunities of temptation, from hatred and prejudice and pride.

If a man really means "Yes" to Jesus, he cannot mean "Yes" to what is opposite to Jesus. The Christian life is a separated life. It is not that he is separated from people. Isn't it likely that the fishermen who followed Christ had a far wider circle of friends as they went with him than they had ever had before? But they were being shaken loose from what had before seemed to them most important,—yes, even from themselves.

Service

BUT that is the negative side of it. The Christian life is not only "from" but it is "for." That is, just as these first fishermen followed Jesus in order to become fishers of men, so the Christian's yes-saying always means enlistment for service.

A Christian's sincerity cannot be measured in what he says, nor even in what he does not do; it is to be measured in what he does.

It is a serious and solemn question: Suppose this is your last day in life, and all the accounts are in. Looking back on what you have been and what you have done, has your life actually helped what Jesus Christ is undertaking in this world, or have you hindered him?

The Christian life is a surrendered, a separated life, but also a life of service. "Yes" can be said with the lips alone—that was Judas; a "Yes" to Christ can truly be said only with life itself.

SHOPPER'S CORNER

By DOROTHY BARCLAY

SOMETHING FOR YOURSELF

ALL those Christmas bills paid? And you still have that gift money labeled "buy something for yourself"? Bachelor Uncle John never did know what to pick out for you and the children, did he? So didn't he always give you a generous check for "something for yourself"? Didn't he always tuck a silver piece in each of the children's stockings?

A MAIN STREET FEATURE

When Christmas is all over—and paid for—don't you look back and say, "There is a Santa Claus — and his name is Uncle John!"

And what are those "somethings" you've always wanted, and never had the nerve to buy for yourself? Nylons? Stockings? Blouses? Even dresses? You'll find buys in all those somethings in the New Year sales—and New Year is not just a day, but a season!

A corduroy skirt or jumper to go with those Christmas blouses? A velveteen party dress for the Country Club? You'll never find a better time to buy 'em than in the post-holiday clearance sales.

That miraculous new material, Orlon, that stays fresh and crushless through the most active day? You'll find wonderful buys in Orlon dresses at your store. This marvelous stuff has no appeal to moths. It's as warm as wool, and twice as lasting and good-looking.

100 PER CENT BUY

Don't be fooled by that "100 per cent wool" ticket. But question what kind of wool. If it's "100 per cent virgin wool"— in quotes — you're safe, and you're getting something for your money. Remember, there are wools and wools, and plain "100 per cent wool" may cover reprocessed yarn from unused woven or felted materials—or even a poor grade of new wool.

So, be guided by the label, and the interpretation of that label by your clothing clerk—and you'll be warm and happy all winter long.

SNOWSUITS

As for the children—they're going to be living in snow-suits for some time to come, and you couldn't do better with that Christmas money than to invest it in nylon snow suits. The wool ones can be handed down, yes, but why not one of the new nylons? Warm? As toast, because the nylon napped fabric inside the outer cloth holds layers of warm air.

Nylon is wind-resistant, too, and lightweight—no more of that dragged-out windblown feeling which sends him whimpering in from play. It's water-repellent, too,—simply sheds snow and rain, so little Johnnie never gets chilled.

As for getting dirty, as children will do when they have fun at play—who cares, when nylon is so easily laundered? Sure, you can use hot water for washing, but when you get to ironing, if you have to, avoid too much heat. That's the word from clothing authorities. Before you wash any nylon, examine the seam edges for fraying. If thread pulls out easily, wash by hand, if not, it's perfectly safe in the washing machine.

California Village Has Record Building Requests

VISTA, Calif.—Building permits for the community of Vista, population 1,000, reached an all-time high during October. Building permits for the month aggregated $218,854.

The permits included 21 one-family dwellings, 47 additions or alterations, 16 private garages, 12 barns or storage places, 2 commercial buildings, 3 repairs to commercial buildings and 5 duplexes.

Village Volunteers Raise Money for Equipment

SHAKOPEE, Minn. — The Shakopee Volunteer Fire department's campaign for funds to purchase emergency rescue equipment topped the campaign quota by $800. The drive quota was $1,500. The department will purchase a resuscitator stretchers and first aid equipment, gas masks, smoke extractors and a boat and trailer with the funds The final total of the drive was $2,339.00.

It's Wonderful the Way Chewing-Gum Laxative Acts Chiefly to REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD
● Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different!
Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon . . . right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.
But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes mostly waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, run-down feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self—full of life! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Whom To Blame Unimportant

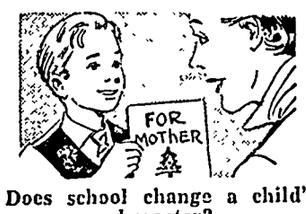
By Lawrence Gould

Is there any use discussing who is "to blame"?

Answer: Very little, even if it were not usually impossible to reach a just decision. But blame and responsibility are quite different things. You cannot correct a condition until you have found what —or who—caused it. The fact that your parents were not "to blame" for your lack of confidence in yourself makes it no less important to realize that they were responsible for it—that your self-doubt is based on their criticisms rather than on your own natural shortcomings. But once you have seen this, the responsibility for trying to re-educate yourself becomes yours, and it is wasting time to blame them.

May abrupt weaning make a pessimist?

Answer: Yes, says London child psychiatrist, Dr. Frieda Goldman-Eisler She reports a three-year study which led her to conclude that to be abruptly weaned at three or four months arouses fear and resentment in a baby which will lead him to "expect the worst" forever after. Dr. Goldmann-Eisler says that pessimists are usually better moneymakers than optimists, but that while 70 per cent of optimists have financial difficulties, they tend to live longer than the pessimists do. Her experiments at least confirm the psychoanalytic belief that abrupt or too early weaning is an emotional shock which has lasting consequences.



Does school change a child's character?

Answer: Not essentially, says Dr. Dale B. Harris of the Institute of Child Welfare of the University of Minnesota. So far as his basic attitudes and interests are concerned, a child learns most from the people he meets and the atmosphere he lives in during the first few years of his life, for it is then that he is most imitative and receptive to suggestion. This is true especially of basic traits of character like friendliness, self-confidence and interest in learning Schools may modify his attitudes and tastes by giving him wider experience but they make no "drastic changes."

KEEPING HEALTHY

Leukocytes Are Our Disease Fighters

By Dr. James W. Barton

DURING THE FLU epidemic in 1918-1919, a young medical officer was brought to our base hospital and, despite all care and attention, there was no response to our efforts. The visiting consultant looked at the patient's medical history chart and shook his head and agreed that nothing more could be done for him

Why? Because, despite the severity of the flu which was complicated by pneumonia, the white corpuscles of his blood, the disease fighters, had not increased to any extent; they were insufficient in numbers to put up a real fight for this young physician's life. Also, his family history showed that his father passed away under the same circumstances, no resistance to disease.

The physician is able to estimate the degree or severity of the illness by the increase of the white corpuscles in the blood, which demonstrates the big help of the hospital laboratory in being able to give the physician this information in a very short time. If the number of white corpuscles (leukocytes) is high, the patient may be very ill but his leukocytes are keeping up with his illness—giving the illness a strong fight. An increase in the number of leukocytes, then, is a favorable sign during an illness.

Just before an operation, the number of leukocytes in the blood is often counted to show degree of illness and resisting power of the patient's blood. Counting leukocytes after operation is also important.

In some chronic or "run down" conditions, which have been calling on the leukocyte reserves for months, these leukocyte reserves become exhausted. Sometimes certain illnesses exhaust the leukocyte reserves in a short time for some unknown reason.

The suggestion, therefore, is that the leukocyte count should be taken (a) at time of admission to hospital and especially before operation to compare with numbers after operation, (b) when severe infection is present to detect early exhaustion of leukocytes.

Night Coughing Quickly Relieved by Home Mixture

Saves Big Dollars. No Cooking.

This splendid recipe is used by millions because it makes such an effective medicine for coughs due to colds. It's so easy to mix—a child could do it.

From any druggist get 2½ ounces of Pinex, a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its soothing effect on throat and bronchial irritations.

Then make a syrup with two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle and fill up with your syrup. This makes a full pint of cough medicine, very effective and quick-acting, and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and children love its pleasant taste.

This cough syrup takes hold of coughs, giving quick relief. It loosens phlegm, soothes irritated membranes, helps clear air passages. Money refunded if Pinex doesn't please.

Sugars and fats are soluble in hot water. Therefore soak any sugary or greasy pans or utensils in hot water. Hot water "sets" milk, eggs, and starchy foods and makes their removal difficult. So rinse or soak mixing bowls, mixing spoons, doughy dishes, and such in cold water.

Chas. Bielefeld, Woodsman And Nature-Lover, Dies

WAS WELL VERSED IN WOODCRAFT AND KNEW ANIMALS

Mr. Bielefeld Loved To Be Out-Of-Doors At His Timbered Farm

Charles Bielefeld, 88, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Atlanta Thompson in Klemme where he had spent the past 3 years of his life.

Mr. Bielefeld was well known as an authority on outdoor life and he knew the habits of wild animals, birds and fish. The greater part of his life was spent close to nature in hunting and fishing and trapping fur-bearing animals. He was condidered an expert trapper.

For many years Mr. Bielefeld resided on his 65 acre farm southeast of Klemme. The farm was practically all timber and the Iowa River ran through a part of his land. It was an ideal home for a nature-lover as he was close to the animals of the timbertimber, wild game and birds, and he was happy in his work in the timber and in fall and winter trapping.

Services were held Sunday from the Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Church with Rev. Jaberg delivering the funeral sermon. Mr. Bielefeld was carried to his final resting place in the Ell Township Cemetery by his grandsons: Charles Bielefeld, William Bielefeld, Warren Smith, Merlin Smith, Seabo Lamfers and Verle Wooten.

The obituary appears elsewhere in this issue.

Surprise Party Held For Walt Schubert Family

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Schubert were surprised at their home Saturday evening, when a group of friends gave them a farewell party. Those that joined in were: Mr. and Mrs. Luther Schmidt and son, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Schmidt and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Schmidt, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Schmidt, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Baack, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Bachman & family and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Roul and family. The evening was spent playing cards. The Schuberts were presented with a gift and lunch was served from well filled baskets brought by the self-invited guests. All enjoyed a good time.

A correction is in order on a news item published last week in which it was stated that Mr. and Mrs. Wes Schuldt entertained Mrs. Frances Ridder and Minnie Lau to goose dinner. It should have been the other way around: Mrs. Frances Ridder and Minnie Lau entertained at a goose dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Wes Schuldt and Walter Lau, at the home of Mrs. Frances Ridder.

Mrs. Mildred Day returned home Saturday evening from Des Moines where she had been for a week helping her son, Dorance and family pack and get ready to move to Klemme. Dorance and family brought Mrs. Day back to Klemme Saturday evening. Gary Day remained here to begin school on Monday. Mr. and Mrs. Dorance Day will move here the middle of this week.

PLAN TO START A LIBRARY IN KLEMME

The American Legion Auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. Leafy Coobs on Tuesday afternoon, January 8, with Mrs. Flora Back, presiding. Mrs. Carrie Schwichtenberg acted as secretary.

The Auxiliary women are planning to organize a library for Klemme. The library committee Lois Chambers and Helen Stille, report that there will be space available in the Wellemeyer Store for the library.

The following ladies were appointed additional members of the library committee: Leafy Coobs, Margaret Thomas and Carrie Schwichtenberg.. Anyone having books they would like to donate to the library is asked to report to any of the committee.

The Auxiliary sent in 837 Butternut key strips before Christmas.

The mid-winter Conference at Des Moines on Jan. 13 & 14 was announced.

Margaret Thomas won the attendance prize.

A nice lunch was served by the hostesses, Leafy Coobs and Lois Chambers.

OAT AND BEAN LOANS COMING UNDER PRICE SUPPORT PROGRAM

Final Date January 31, 1952

January 31, 1952, is the last date that loans and purchase agreements maf be obtained on oats and soybeans produced in 1951, according to information from Hancock County PMA Office.

The loan rate for oats is 70c per bushel, and the loans mature on April 30th, 1952. Purchase agreements expire on the same date.

The basic rate for soybeans is $2.46 per bushel, and the loans and purchase agreements for beans mature on May 31, 1952.

It is suggested that producers who plan to seal either of these grains make application for the loans now, so that there will be time to seal the grain and complete the loans before the end of January.

TRAPPING SEASON CLOSES JANUARY 10

With the season closing on "long-haired" fur-bearing animals January 10th, trapping is prohibited on all fur bearers except weasel, red fox, gray fox, ground hog, wolf and coyote on which there is a continuous open season. All raw pelts of protected fur bearers must be sold by January 20 unless a cost-free permit is secured from the State Conservation Commission. A cost-free permit is also required for all furs sent out of the state for sale.

Although figures for the 1951-52 season have not been compiled, the trapping. season has been characterized as good by conservation officials. It is belived that the value of wild fur trapped in Iowa during the past season will exceed the million dollar mark for the first time in four years. The most productive fur catch in the history of Iowa's "million dollar fur crop" was in 1943 & 1944 when 979,000 animals brought trappers $2,961,000.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Some men quit work by the whistle, some by the office clock, some by the setting sun. But whatever different chores we lay down at whatever different times of the day, no man shrugs off his responsibilities entirely.

In fact, the responsibility of safety, both to ourselves and to others, becomes much greater at quitting time. Jobs tend to set up regular routine and movement, but the release from work starts a movement and shifting of people that make the maneuvering of an army look like a children's drill.

Then's when the death-by-accident rate shoots up. Serious or painful injuries occur more frequently in the streets, in homes, in public places.

When you quit work tomorrow, remember that it isn't quitting time for personal or public safety Like the little man in the picture, we are all followed by a five o'clock shadow.

FARM BUREAU MEMBERSHIP DRIVE IN FULL SWING

The 1952 Farm Bureau membership drive is in full swing in Hancock County. One hundred sixty eight members who are working on the membership drive attended the Kick-Off meeting at the Garner High School Auditorium last Wednesday evening.

Harry I. Storey, Director of the Legislative Department of the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation, was the guest speaker. Others on the program were: Gilbert Guenther, County Farm Bureau President; Paul Shurts, County Farm Bureau Fieldman; Paul Henderson, County Extension Director and Chas. F. Jackson, County General Agent. E. A. Gerardi, of Klemme, entertained the group on his accordion.

Fifty-five percent of the Hancock County quota of 1322 were paid up before the membership drive had started. Avery Township being the nearest to quota of all townships.

Two Check-up meetings will be held within the next 2 weeks to find where each township stands. One 4-Township check-up will be on January 16 and 17 and the Bi-County 8 township meetings will be held on January 23 at Britt IOOF Hall and January 24 at the Garner IOOF Hall.

The membership jumped from 727 at the Kick-Off to 764 by Friday night just by those coming into the office or mailing in their dues. The County quota of 1322 is expected to be reached within two weeks.

KLEMME, ROWAN SPLIT TWIN BILL

The Klemme boys defeated Rowan here Friday night 57-35 after the girls lost their contest 35-28. Ronnie Karsjens hit 24 points and his team was ahead at half-time 26-20. Dorothy Lacey and Hansen of Rowan each had 13. The Klemme girls trailed 22-13 at the half.

This week we made safety posters to be displayed in different parts of the school building. We hope it will help remind people to be careful when sliding, skiing, skating or even walking on icy streets.

THE FARM OUTLOOK

By Paul Henderson, County Extension Director

The chances are pretty good that the winter hog price rise this year will not be as great as usual, Francis A. Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist belives. But he adds that the same forces which are causing the less-than-normal winter hog prices will produce a good hog market from late spring through to the end of October.

The big cause behind the slow snap-back of the hog market from the winter seasonal low price spot lies in the heavy marketings. Farmers have been sending a lot of hogs to market for the last two months--more than some people expected. And Kutish predicts that we can expect these heavy runs to continue for the next few months.

Farmers have been boosting hog production for the past few years. This process of saving extra gilts for breeding has held down the number or hogs going to market. A little Arithmetic will show how this works out. Out of every 1,000 pigs raised, for example, farmers save back in the neighborhood of 140 gilts for farrowing the next spring if they plan to hold the size of the next spring pig crop steady. So they sell about 860 barrows and gilts out of the 1000 raised.

But in the last few years farmers have been saving back more gilts. The 1951 spring pig crop was up 7 per cent, for example. That meant farmers held back an extra 10 or 11 gilts of about 150 out of the 1,000. So they sold only about 850 head.

Now this year we swung the other way. Farmers are cutting 52 spring farrowings a[bout] per cent. Thus, they will [sell] only about 125 or 127 gilts out of the 1,000 raised. This leaves about 875 head to sell. Kutish points out that is one of the reasons the hog market has been rough this fall. About 10 percent more hogs are coming to market even though the 1951 spring pig crop was up only 7 per cent.

The reason Kutish expects hog sales to continue heavy is from the large number of summer pigs raised last year. According to the government pig survey, we raised only 3 percent more fall pigs in 1951 than in the year before. But that increase was all in June, July, & August farrowings. Total farrowings for those three months was up 11 percent. We actually farrowed 3 percent fewer pigs after September 1.

Thus, we should have heavy hog runs for the next few months. But after midspring, when the pigs farrowed September 1 and later came to market, our hog marketings will drop below the corresponding figures of a year earlier.

With the feed shortage cutting back sales of both fat cattle and hogs during the summer months, Kutish looks for a good livestock market until late fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund K. Josten Sell Their 80-Acre Farm

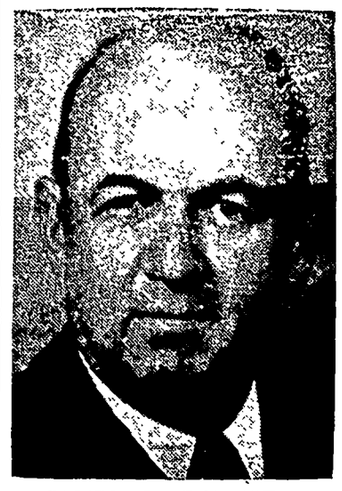
Friday, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund K. Josten completed a deal whereby they sold their 80-acre farm east of Klemme to Mr. Wm. Finn, farmer of Jefferson, Iowa.

Mr. Finn will take possession March 1st. The farm has been occupied by Ronald Barz and family.

Hancock Gives To Bureau Work

Hancock County supervisors the past week approved the application of the Hancock County Farm Bureau for its annual appropriation as provided for in the code of Iowa. The Bureau will receive $5,000 in 1952 plus an additional $1,000 each for a county extension youth assistant and a county extension home economist.

Representative James I. Dolliver Is Candidate



JAMES I. DOLLIVER

REPRESENTATIVE JAMES I. DOLLIVER CANDIDATE FOR REELECTION

James I. Dolliver of Fort Dodge announced his candidacy for re-election as representative in congress from the sixth Iowa district. He is a republican.

A lawyer, Dolliver practiced in Fort Dodge for more than 20 years before his election to congress, and is a former Webster county attorney. He is a former member of the Fort Dodge board of education and of the board of trustees of Morningside college. He received an honorary degree of doctor of laws from Morningside, where he took his pre-law course.

In congress, Dolliver is considered one of the ablest members of the strong Iowa delegation. He serves on the house interstate and foreign commerce committee. Concerned with transportation, communications, radio and television, this committee has the widest jurisdiction of any congressional group.

Among its numerous assignments, the committee considers such important legislation as the national health measures. It has a voice in matters vitally affecting the nation's economy, and oversees resources vital to the defense program.

Dolliver is a veteran of World War I, and has long been active in servicemen's affairs He is past commander of the Iowa department of the American Legion, and has served on national committees of the organization

He has a natural interest, therefore, in veterans' legislation and has a reputation in congress for his wide knowledge of measures affecting service men. His other legislative interests are agriculture and education, fields in which he is highly informed.

Representative Dolliver is married and has four children. His son, James, a World War II navy veteran, will complete his law studies in June. His elder daughter, Peggy, is doing mission work in Alaska. His Second son, Mac, is a student at Iowa State college, and the youngest, Robert, goes to public high school in Washington. Mrs. Dolliver, the former Rachel McCreight, is the daughter of the late Dr. A. H. McCreight of Fort Dodge.

Neighbors And Friends Help Carl Wille Get Ready For Big Sale

Carl Wille wants to thank all the neighbors and friends who came to his farm to help him arrange his machinery and get ready for the big sale. Carl said there was about as many men present as he had machines so the job was done up quickly and everybody had a lot of fun. It would have been an awful big chore for Carl alone so he was very well pleased when help showed up . . . in strength.

Mr. and Mrs. Wille had a good sale and there was an enormous crowd present. They will move to town soon to live in their new house. The new home will be completed in about two more weeks, when they will move into town.

FRED SCHMIDT, CAUGHT IN DRIVE SHAFT ESCAPES SERIOUS INJURY

Clothing Ripped From Farmer When He Slipped Against Shaft

Fred Schmidt, farmer residing west of Klemme escaped serious injury or a fatal accident Saturday while working near a tractor power shaft at his farm home when he slipped on ice against the revolving shaft which caught his clothing and ripped it from his body.

Mr. Schmidt was hurle against the frozen grou..d, but when brought to town for examination and medical treatment, it was found that he suffered only bruises and a few cuts, and no bones were broken.

It is almost a miracle that Mr. Schmidt was not killed in the mishap, as the revolving shaft tore all of his clothing away, except a few shreds around his shoulders and his shoes.

Mr. Schmidt is able to be about the house, but is not doing any farm work for a few days until the soreness wears off.

HARVEY GIRLS

Harvey Opened First Restaurant At Topeka, Kan., 75 Years Ago

In 1876 a young man named Fred Harvey opened a restaurant in a little red depot at Topeka, Kansas. In seventy-five years the business Fred Harvey started in this modest way has become a great system of resort hotels, restaurants, shops, and newsstands extending from the Great Lakes to the Pacific Coast and the Gulf of Mexico.

The story of Fred Harvey is a Horatio Alger chronicle spiced with the romance of pioneer days in the West. Harvey was a lad of fifteen when he left London for America.

His earliest interests were in the restaurant business. Later the railroads pioneering into the West captured his imagination. As a traveling freight agent, he was annoyed by the bad food, the dirty, bug-ridden quarters, and the racketeering, "customer - be - darned" business methods he encountered at railroad eating houses and hotels.

Determined to better the lot of the traveler, Harvey intrigued the Santa Fe Railway into letting him open a restaurant in their Topeka station. Thus began the business destined to enrich the West with many colorful traditions. The appeal of the Harvey Girls, comely waitresses recruited from the East, and the good food, service, and honest business methods earned for Fred Harvey the title "Civilizer of the West."

Harvey Houses were established in the 1880's and 90's every 100 miles along the tracks of the Santa Fe Railway. At meal stops passengers were welcomed to Harvey hospitality with "thirty minutes for dinner" by a bong of a big brass gong. The seventy-five cent dinner included as many as seven entrees Meal prices were apologetically raised to a dollar in 1920, and remained about a dollar until 1927.

THIS YEAR the Fred Harvey system is celebrating its diamond jubilee, three quarters of a century of continuous Harvey family management. The founder's son, B. S Harvey, is chairman of the board His three grandsons are president, Byron Harvey, Jr., and vice presidents, Stewart and Daggett Harvey.

Today the business employs 6000, hands out around 31 million meal checks a year, and grosses about $30 million. The company operates fifty-five restaurants and twelve resort hotels, the best known of which are El Tovar and Bright Angel Lodge at the Grand Canyon and La Fonda at Santa Fe, New Mexico. Fred Harvey operates 100 dining cars on the Santa Fe, runs the concessions at the big union rail terminals in Cleveland, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Los Angeles, and other cities, and at the Albuquerque, New Mexico Municipal Airport.

Important events in the company's rehabilitation and expansion program this 75th Anniversary year are the opening of new Fred Harvey restaurants at either end of Chicago's swank Michigan Avenue. The Bowl and Bottle is located at Jackson Boulevard on South Michigan Avenue. On North Michigan, in the world famous Palmolive Building in the center of Chicago's fashionable Near North Side, are the Harlequin Room and the Harvey House Grill.

Expanding

The chemical industry, which uses about 20 million tons of coal a year, is in the midst of its largest expansion program in history.

FRIENDS of Frederic March's who have seen a preview of the film version of "Death of a Salesman" are telling him to prepare a third niche on his Oscar shelf. March has twice won the coveted "Best performance by an Actor" award, for his performances in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and "Best Years of Our Lives". Now Hollywood insists that his portrayal of "Willy Loman", the ill-fated salesman, tops anything he has done heretofore. Many members of the original cast of the play were brought to Hollywood to recreate their roles in the picture. The play won both the 1948 Pulitzer Prize and the New York Drama Circle Critics Award.

series. More than 100 Hollywood stars will be heard in ten top shows produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, through an exclusive agreement with the broadcasting system.

22,000 persons from 1200 cities saw parts of "The Korean Story" being photographed while the company was on location in Colorado Springs. A Visitors' Scroll was set up in the main village set, and everybody was asked to sign it.

Cecil B. DeMille's "The Greatest Show on Earth" is all that Paramount has claimed for it—which is saying plenty! Any picture that can run for two hours and thirty-three minutes and hold its audience to the very end has to be something special. The great Ringling Bros. circus is magnificently portrayed; the back-stage scenes are of especial interest.

THE FICTION CORNER

THE DOCTOR'S HOLIDAY

By Ralph Blanchard

3-Minute Fiction

THE FRIENDS of James Keenan often wondered why he should always spend his vacation in so dull and obscure a place as the sleepy little mountain community of Booneville. It was one of a hundred small mountain towns in the western part of North Carolina. Surely, they reasoned, a person who was accustomed to the many attractions of a city could never be content with a place that consisted of one main street and a square dance every Saturday night.

For a surgeon, there was little hope of a future in such a place. It was more than merely a love for the mountains that James felt for this community, for had it been only this, he could have found a thousand places more near the city and his hospital.

One night he was sitting in his room reading when there was a knock at the door. He put the book down and asked, "Who is it?"

"Doctor, let me in." The voice seemed breathless and frightened. "Please, I must see you."

He went to the door and opened it. A girl entered the room. She was young, not more than twenty. Black hair stuck out from under the red 'kerchief and her plaid shirt had come out of the dungarees. She looked tired.

"Here, sit down," James suggested.

"I don't have time." She leaned back against the wall. "You must come with me."

"Now wait a minute . . ."

The girl looked up at Keenan and bit her lip. "Dr. Johnson is sick

'I'm not scared, now that you're coming," she answered.

"Well, tell me what's wrong."

"Its Paw. He's deathly sick. You've got to come with me." James saw for the first time that she was really frightened.

He ran to his closet for the small black case that never left his side. "Let's go," he told the girl.

IN a moment they were in his car speeding along mountain roads.

On a straight stretch, James turned and looked at the girl. For a moment he thought he had made a mistake. He would have sworn that this was not the same girl that had entered his room only minutes before. She looked straight ahead, but her 'kerchief had fallen around her neck and now her soft black hair streamed down and framed her face untouched by the modern devices of simulated beauty. Her features were tense and drawn, however.

"Are you all right?" James asked her.

She turned and looked up at him, a smile forming on her lips.

"I'm not scared, now that you're coming," she answered.

When they finally reached the small mountain cabin they found her father just as she had left him. There was another child, but no mother to greet the doctor and girl. The little boy was sitting in a chair watching his father when they entered.

After it was over, James assured the girl that her father would be all right.

He walked out onto the porch and sat down in one of the flimsy rocking chairs. The moonlight was bright and he could make out the mountain ridge.

Behind him he heard the door open. He didn't turn. The girl walked around the chair and leaned up against the railing. She had pushed her plaid shirt back into her dungarees, and brushed her hair. She looked out over the valley and breathed deeply.

The doctor looked at her. Until now he had never looked at a woman except as a patient. Something inside James seemed to melt, and he saw once again his childhood that he had so strongly tried to forget. He saw his mother rocking peacefully back and forth on a little mountain porch. He smelled his father's clay pipe, and the fragrant aroma that seemed to follow him wherever he went. He saw himself going to school in the city, and, then, he saw himself not able to stay away from the mountains, coming back year after year.

Suddenly he realized the battle to stay away didn't matter any more.

Crime in America

By ESTES KEFAUVER
United States Senator

Seventeen of a Series

Costello & Co. of New York

For sheer drama, for wholesale peeling back of deceptive camouflage, the New York City open hearings were the climax of the Senate Committee's crime hunt.

Our final judgment on Ambassador William O'Dwyer's official conduct when he was Kings County district attorney and then mayor of New York, was this:

". . . Neither he nor his appointees took any effective action against the top echelons of the gambling, narcotics, waterfront, murder or bookmaking rackets. In fact, his actions impeded promising investigations of such rackets."

O'Dwyer was questioned closely in connection with his handling, as district attorney, of the wholesale homicide ring known as Murder, Inc. A former O'Dwyer appointee Frank C. Bals, one-time chief investigator for District Attorney O'Dwyer and later the seventh deputy police commissioner when O'Dwyer was mayor, was severely castigated by Senator Tobey

The controversy was whether O'Dwyer and Bals had mishandled the case in such a manner as to permit Albert (Umberto) Anastasia, alleged boss of the murder ring, to escape prosecution.

Murder, Inc., which the gangsters themselves called "The Combination," was a tightly run crime syndicate which police believe was responsible during the 'thirties for assassinating between 120 and 130 persons throughout the country. It has been charged publicly that Anastasia directed its execution branch and that Joe Adonis was a top leader.

The operations of Murder, Inc. finally came to light when, through confessions of underlings, police obtained iron-clad evidence against Abe (Kid Twist) Reles, who later admitted he actually carried out the murders under Anastasia's orders. Reles made a deal with O'Dwyer to turn informer in exchange for leniency. Information he gave sent eight men to the chair and some 50 others to prison.

But before Kid Twist could testify against Anastasia, who was eluding arrest, the informer met a mysterious death. Reles was under protective custody, not in jail, but in the suite of a Coney Island hotel. Early one morning while supposedly guarded by six policemen, Reles, fully clothed, went out of his hotel window and was found dead five stories below. Out the window with him went the case against Anastasia.

Bals admitted that Reles was so frightened of gang reprisals that it was unlikely he intended to escape; also that "he was too much of a coward to commit suicide."

When Senator Tobey, who later declared he believed Reles must have been thrown from the window, demanded an explanation of what had happened, Bals finally came up with the remarkable theory that the killer-informer must have intended to climb down one floor on a knitted bed sheet, come in a window and then trot back up to "kid around" with his guards, who had fallen asleep

Even O'Dwyer later said he could not go along with Bals on the "peek-a-boo" theory

The fact remained that somehow, whether through carelessness or design, not only was the star witness against Anastasia eliminated, but Anastasia himself never was apprehended, although the Committee learned that he actually was serving in the United States Army—and the fact was no secret—during part of the time he was supposed to be a fugitive.

Moreover, another O'Dwyer appointee, James Moran, then chief clerk of the district attorney's office, had caused withdrawal from police files of the "wanted notice" cards for Anastasia and other Murder, Inc, fugitives.

Anastasia, who entered this country by illegally jumping ship now is a partner in a prosperous dress manufacturing business in Hazelton, Pa., and lives in a $65,000 home in New Jersey. He replied, "I don't remember" when we asked him to name any occupation he had engaged in between 1919 and 1942

As for Joe Adonis, the committee found him one of the toughest, most contemptous of all the racketeers we questioned. Like others, Adonis knew all the big boys of crime, and followed the gangster circuit of Miami in the winter, Hot Springs ("for d' bat's," he told us) in the Spring

This man with blood-stained hands for years had set himself up as bigger than the law and was able to get away with it—until, in the wake of the Committee hearings, he was sent to prison on the New Jersey gambling charges. Previously, he had been arrested many times on charges ranging from grand larceny to kidnaping and extortion, but had paid only insignificant fines

Adonis is slick and smooth, an expensively tailored figure with iron-gray hair pomaded into a Hollywood type hair-do. His voice was deep and gruff, but the words that came from his mouth were mostly windy, meaningless, legalistic phrases which sounded like the words of his counsel.

A bizarre picture of still another phase of underworld life was given by the former Virginia Hill, now Mrs. Hans Hauser, the once-striking, erstwhile consort of the murdered Bugsy Siegel and other gangsters. The strain of the life she had led since she ran away to Chicago at 17 from her little Alabama town has taken its toll. Now 35, and plumpish she no longer is the captivating figure who once charmed such gangsters as Siegel, Adonis and Frank Costello.

She told a fantastic story of how she collected an annual income that ran into thousands of dollars from "the men I was around"—only, she indignantly insisted, they "were not gangsters or racketeers."

When she began living with the late Ben Siegel—her eyes flashed indignantly when Counsel Halley referred to him as "Bugsy"—the gifts ran into big money and even "a house in Florida", costing $49,000.

Halley questioned Miss Hill about a famous six weeks she spent at Sun Valley, where, incidentally, she met her latest husband, a skiing instructor. In six weeks, she squandered $12,000—all but $1,500 of it paid in cash. Most of the money came from some Mexican gentlemen whose names she refused to reveal, as Halley suggested, "out of chivalry."

Her income tax return shows that she used to report large winnings from betting on the horses, anywhere from $15,000 to $24,000. "I didn't keep any books or accounts or anything, but I paid what I thought was right," she explained. When Halley suggested that this sort of tax reporting might seem a little irregular to Uncle Sam, she peevishly snapped: "Well, then, he'll have to take care of that, won't he?"

"Uncle Sam? Maybe he will, Mrs. Hauser," Halley said.

"Well," she retorted in her tough little voice, "that's all right, sure. I don't blame him."

If Bugsy or Joe Adonis or any of her friends would start to talk business around her, she testified, she would just get up and walk away. "Whether you believe it or not," she flared at Halley, "I don't know anything about their business . . . I didn't want to know."

Of all the witnesses from the crime world summoned before us in New York, Frank Costello was the focal point of interest.

"No, Mr. Halley," Costello said toward the end of his long examination when counsel asked him if he supported a certain judge's candidacy. "Since the Aurelio case I burned my fingers once and I never participated in any candidates."

It was not a convincing picture that Costello sought to paint of his lack of political influence. "There can be no question," the committee concluded "that Frank Costello has exercised a major influence upon the New York County Democratic organization, Tammany Hall, because of his personal friendships and working relationships with its officers and with Democratic district leaders even today in ten of the sixteen Manhattan districts."

It's A Gift

It was Smedley's first night in jail and he noticed that one of the inmates in his block would call out a number and the rest would howl with glee Then the process was repeated by someone else

Smedley asked his cellmate what it was all about and got this answer: "Well, we've been here so long and heard the same jokes so many times, we numbered the stories to save time. Now someone calls out a number, and we identify it with a certain funny story."

Next night, Smedley tried his hand. "Twenty-six," he yelled. Utter silence followed "Fifty-two," he yelled. Not a chuckle. "What's the matter?" Smedley asked his cellmate.

"Well," said the inmate "it's like this. Some folks can tell a joke and some folks just can't."

Government Employees Vote Selves Above Nation

By Wright A. Patterson

I WAS RIDING through the California southland south of Los Angeles with a friend, and we passed one of the two large marine camps in that section. As we approached it, a long string of automobiles was passing through the gate, outward bound. It was four o'clock, quitting time for the civilians employed at that camp.

As we waited for a break in that line of cars that would let us pass, I noticed my friend was counting the occupants of the passing cars. When he had reached a number well over 100, I asked his reason for what he was doing. He explained that the men in the cars were civilian employees of the camp, they were in no way a part of the armed forces of the nation, they would not wear uniforms, though most of them were of military age. Their homes and families were in the surrounding towns, and they vote where they live. Their votes are cast for Democratic candidates for congressmen, United States senators, governors, members of state legislatures, President and vice president, and for any and all whose names appear on a Democratic ticket.

"The men in those automobiles," he continued, "are but a small part of the greatest political machine ever known in this nation. Such machines as Tammany in New York city, the Hague machine in New Jersey, those in Chicago, Memphis, or the Pendergast machine in Kansas City, the operations of which sent Tom Pendergast to prison, not before he had taught his students the methods of organizing and operating such organizations, were but local.

"The Truman machine covers the nation, and effects the elections in every state. The many thousands, a total of more than 2,300,000, who pour out of such buildings as the enormous Pentagon, represent the Democratic machine, and the members are scattered from coast to coast.

"For example: There are more people on the federal payroll in California than all the employees of the state government, those of the counties and the municipalities, including all the school teachers and all the police. Those on the federal payroll, their relatives and friends, will vote the Democratic ticket, in effort to hold onto government jobs. They know which side of their bread the butter is on.

"For all of it we, the American tax payers, must provide the wages that run into billions of dollars each year. We are paying for the votes with which the president hopes to be re-elected, and the election of a Democratic Congress.

"It means a terrific handicap for the Republicans to overcome." The occupants of those passing cars were but a small part of that machine."

As we waited and watched those civilian employees pouring out of the El Torro gates, I realized, as I never had before, what a handicap faced the Republicans in the elections of 1952, more than nine million purchased voters that civilian jobs were buying, though they actually represented but a small fraction of the total of job purchased votes in California. They will be cast for Harry S. Truman for President.

The Farm Journal wished to print the facts regarding the potato marketing agreement of last year. The department of agriculture had all the facts, but refused to let them be known, even to the farm organizations. The Farm Journal, at much effort and great cost, dug them out. Those facts reflected on the judgment of the administration, and the department of agriculture and the President did not want the people to have them.

We are rapidly developing secret methods in the conduct of government. The people will be told only what the administration wants them to know. The shady transaction of government officials will be covered up in so far as government departments are able to cover them, and that will encourage more such legal or moral shortcomings on the part of government officials. Secrecy in government means an invitation to corruption in government.

Beware of those who propose indiscriminate paying of doles to all willing, or who can be induced to accept. It will not be long until there will be nothing left with which to pay those doles. Industry will be dead, and there will be no jobs for those willing to work for their sustenance.

'THING TO DO'

Company Makes History, Army Refund

PHILADELPHIA—The tool making firm in the Philly area that voluntarily gave the army a refund of $6,126 on an ordnance corps contract did so because it was "the moral thing to do."

Harry E. Hyde, regional head of the Philadelphia ordnance district said that the company was Greene, Tweed and Co. of nearby North Wales.

Hyde said that the company had obtained a contract for 1,200 bogie wrench assemblies on a competitive bidding basis at a price somewhat over $50 each. The assemblies are used by the army for self-propelled artillery mounts.

The company produced each unit for $5.18 less than the expected sum after making what it considered fair profit.

EGYPTIAN LIBERATORS SHOW TEETH . . . In Cairo, Egypt, several members of the "Liberation" unit, a group of underground fighters, are showing off their weapons to Ceza Nebarawi and Zanib Al Ghazali in an undisclosed headquarters. Mrs. Nebarawi is the leader of the Moslem's women's party, a group that is agitating for the complete ouster of Britain from the Suez canal zone. She entertained the warriors at her home after the inspection of the guns. MIRROR Of Your MIND

Too Lucky For Own Good

By Lawrence Gould

Can you be too lucky for your own good?

Answer: Yes. Some of the most unhappy people I have known owe their unhappiness to having "got away with" too much in their childhood and early maturity. A young man with too much money, an exceptionally beautiful girl or a person with an "iron constitution" may manage for years to escape the consequences of behavior which would bring disaster to most people, and come to believe that he or she is "above the rules." But eventually reality asserts itself and the later anyone has to begin adjusting to it, the more likely it is that the task will be beyond him. If you were not "born lucky," you should probably be thankful.

Do children "adjust" well to operations?

Answer: Most do in the long run, but there are considerable differences, reports Barbara Davis in Smith College Studies of Social Work. Study of the after-effects on a number of children of having their tonsils removed showed that the success of their adjustment to this strange and unpleasant experience depended on their relation with their mothers. When this was healthy, the child was better prepared for what he had to face, and better preparation meant better adjustment afterwards. Incidentally, there is a growing trend in hospitals to let mothers spend much more time with child patients than the usual "visiting hours."

Are symbols a "universal language"?

Answer: Those of one type are, writes Erich Fromm, Ph.D., in his new book "The Forgotten Language." There are "conventional" symbols like the use of the spoken or written word "table" to stand for a certain kind of object. There are "accidental" symbols like the way in which a place where you have been unhappy comes to represent unhappiness in your dreams. And there are "universal" symbols "in which there is an intrinsic relationship between the symbol and that which it represents"—as seeing symbolizes understanding. Out of these last is built the universal but forgotten language of dreams, fairy tales and folk-lore.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Heart Disease Is Hazard to Doctors

By Dr. James W. Barton

INSURANCE STATISTICS and other reliable sources of information show that, as a class, physicians themselves are sufferers with heart disease, especially coronary thrombosis (heart stroke).

As coronary thrombosis is associated with high blood pressure and high blood pressure in the majority of cases is associated with or related to tension of nerves and muscles and emotional disturbances, it can be seen how the had life of the physician with its irregularity of meals and sleep can upset not only the heart but the workings of all the body processes. Life is indeed difficult for the busy general practitioner or the specialist engaged in performing dangerous operations and giving decisions on cases that mean life or death.

It is interesting to read of the findings of two New York physicians, Drs. Arthur M. Master and Kenneth Chesky. In The Canadian Doctor we read that heart disease was classified as an occupational hazard of the medical profession. Stating that coronary heart disease is the greatest killer of doctors, these two physicians told the New York state medical society that heart and blood vessel examinations of 200 doctors at Mt. Sinai Hospital, New York City, showed that nearly 65 per cent (about 2 of every 3) had the disease or were potential victims. The doctors ranged in age from 40 to 81.

The report disclosed that the great majority of the examined physicians were overweight, leading to the conclusion that "there is probably a definite relationship between obesity and the development of coronary thrombosis."

Our life insurance physicians are well aware of the relationship of obesity to coronary thrombosis as they reject those applying for life insurance if they are more than 10 per cent overweight.

Ironing Hint

If you're ironing, and all of a sudden decide you want to stop, don't hesitate just because you have a batch of dampened clothes. Put the clothes in the refrigerator. They'll stay damp and you won't have to worry about mildew.

It's Wonderful the Way Chewing-Gum Laxative Acts Chiefly to REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD

● Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different!

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon... right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy You feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes mostly waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, run-down feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self—full of life! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

Little Cattle Feeders News

The roll call at the annual Christmas party, Dec 20, of the Grimes Little Cattle Feeders 4-H Club was answered with names of our favorite kind of car. The Ford seemed to be a little in the lead. Our Projects for 1952 were discussed. Two of our members, Larrie Hindman and Lee Gruis attended the International Show at Chicago. An exchange of gifts followed the business meeting. The club presented their leader, Gene Janssen, with a gift. Each member received a box of candy from the leader. A delicious lunch was served by the hostess, Mrs. Helps.

Resolution

Before the Board of Supervisors of Hancock County, Iowa:

In the Matter of Assessments and Reclassification of Lands in Lateral No. 8 of Drainage District No. 1 and 2:

Garner, Iowa, Dec. 27, 1951

The Board of Supervisors having met pursuant to notice at the Court House at Garner, Iowa, at 1:30 p. m. on Dec. 17, 1951 to consider and hear objections to the report of the commissioners appointed to assess benefits in Lateral No. 8 of Drainage District No. 1 and 2, and to hear and consider the petition of Laurice Larson, filed May 24, 1951, asking that No. 7 and No. 8 of said Laterals be reclass.fied, and that the amount paid by him in 1951 in the sum of $114.23 on account of Lateral No. 7 be credited to his assessment on account of Lateral No. 8, and the Board having given due consideration to written petition of Laurice Larson, and having heard the said Laurice Larson orally and his attorney, G. W. Templeton, and having heard other land owners within said District who opposed the reduction of the assessment of Laurice Larson, upon motion duly seconded, said meeting was adjourned from Dec. 17, 1951 to Dec. 27, 1951 at the Court House at Garner, Iowa, at 1:30 p. m of said day, and it now appearing to the Board that all persons have been served with notice as shown by proof of publication on file, and the Board having further considered the report of the commissioners to assess benefits and the objections thereto, the Board finds that all assessments made as determined by the commissioners should be and the same are approved with the exception of the two tracts of land hereafter described belonging to Laurice Larson, to-wit:

1. The classification of E½ SW¼ SE¼ and NW¼ SW¼ SE¼ of Sec. 33-97-25 is hereby changed from .0230 to .0212 percentage, and the assessment thereon is hereby reduced from $432.40 to $398.56.

2. The classification of E 33A. NW¼ SE¼ of Sec. 33-97-25 is hereby reduced from .0270 to .0255, and the assessment on said tract is hereby reduced to $479.40 from $507.60.

The Board further finds that Hancock County roads in Crystal Township, Hancock County, Iowa, should be and is increased in its classification from .0154 to .1087 to make up said deficit of $62.04, being the amount of the reduction to the above lands of Laurice Larson; and in all other respects the report of the commissioners filed herein and the percentage factors of classification made by them, except as amended herein, is in all respects approved and confirmed, and the assessments and classifications and the percentage factors as fixed and determined by said commissioners is in all respects established, confirmed and ratified by this Board, and same shall stand as a basis for future assessments against the lands in said District until changed or modified as provided by law.

Be it further resolved that the levy of such assessments, except as modified herein, shall be a lien upon the real estate described in the commissioners' report and in the amounts therein stated, except as modified by this resolution, from the 31st day of December, 1951

Be it further resolved that if any owner of land against which a levy exceeding $20.00 has been made shall within thirty days from the date of such levy agree in writing endorsed upon any improvement certificate, or in a separate agreement, that in consideration of having a right to pay his assessment in installments, he will not make any objections to the legality of his assessment for benefits or the levy of the taxes against his property, then such owner shall have the option to pay such assessment in any of the options provided in Section 455.64 of the 1950 Code of Iowa with interest not exceeding four per cent per annum.

And be it further resolved that any owners of land may pay their respective assessments by the issuance of improvement certificates as provided by Section 455.77 and Section 455.78 of the 1950 Code of Iowa at an interest rate not exceeding (4) four per cent per annum payable annually

And be it further resolved that any owner failing to agree in writing to make no objections to the legality of his assessment for benefits shall not be entitled to the options provided in Section 455.64 and of this resolution, and any such owner failing to enter into such agreement shall pay said assessment with interest at four per cent per annum in the same manner as is provided by law for payment of general taxes payable in the year 1952.

The foregoing resolution was offered by Supervisor Bird and seconded by Supervisor Daniels, and after discussion, the chairman, F. J. Scoun, put the motion upon the adoption of said resolution, and upon call of the roll by the Auditor, the vote was as follows:

C. D. Daniels, Yea.
Clarence Bird, Yea.
Frank J. Schoun, Yea.

All members being present.

Whereupon? the chairman declared the resolution duly adopted and directed the Auditor to levy the tax as set forth in the report of the commissioners and as amended by this resolution.

F. J. Schoun, Chairman
Attest: Maynard Schoneman,
County Auditor

Obituary Of Charles Bielefeld

CHARLES BIELEFELD, 88, a long time resident of these parts, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Atlanta Thompson in Klemme, Thursday morning, January 10th, 1952.

He was born June 9th, 1863, in Bielefeld Province, Germany, the 4th of a family of nine children born to his parents, Karl and Minnie Greeta Bielefeld. Of this family of four sisters and five brothers, only one survives, namely, Henry Bielefeld, age 92 of Sheffield, Iowa.

At the age of two, Charles Bielefeld moved with his parents to America. They settled on a farm near Cottage Grove, Wisconsin, where he completed his common-school education, and attended the German Lutheran Church with his parents, and grew to manhood.

On March 22nd, 1888, at the age of 25 Charles Bielefeld and Mary Schluter were married at Cottage Grove, Wisconsin. They commenced housekeeping on a farm near Sheffield, Ia. Later they lived on different farms near Thornton, and near Moservey, but finally they purchased a 65 acre tract of timber land on the Iowa River in Avery Township. Here they stayed until retirement. They were the parents of four children.

After acquiring this tract of timber land, with the river running through it, Mr Bielefeld devoted his entire time to hunting and fishing. He enjoyed this work very much more than farming. In the fall of the year, Mr Bielefeld and his wife would travel to various swamp lands and along the rivers with their cook-shack trailor, taking pelts from mink, muskrat, etc. Literally thousands of pelts were gathered each season.

At his home place he kept wild animals as pets, such as foxes, raccoons, wild ducks, etc. The writer remembers seeing a flock of 40 wild geese, with wings clipped, which he had raised from eggs.

The last three years of his life were spent at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Atlanta Thompson of Klemme, who with the aid of a grand daughter, Diana Masterson, cared for his needs and nursed him.

He reached the age of 88 years and 7 months and leaves of his immediate family:

His children:
Mrs. Fleeda Wooten, Des Moines, Iowa
Mrs. Helen Jost, Klemme, Iowa
Mrs. Atlanta Thompson, Klemme, Iowa
Adrian Bielefeld, Dougherty, Iowa.

Ten Grand Children:
8 Great Grand Children, and
2 Great, Great Grand Children,

One Brother:
Henry Bielefeld, Sheffield, Iowa.

If you want to see 90, don't look for it on the speedometer.

SO THEY TALK—about disbanding the Civic Club!! Let's think up something better to replace it.

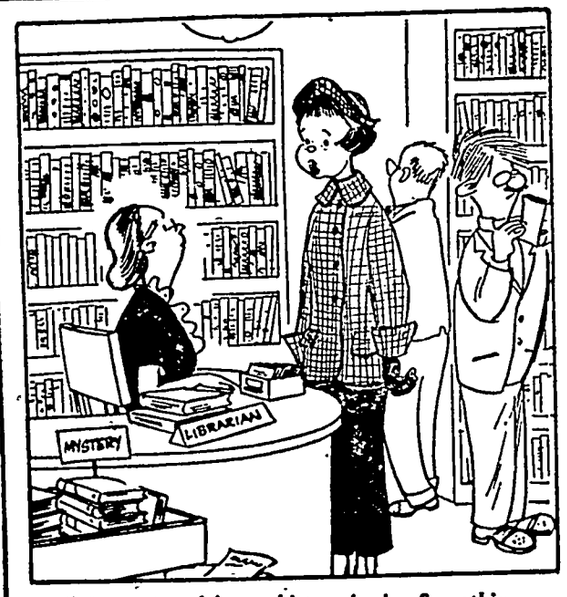
BOBBY SOX



"I want a real heavy history book. Something suitable for pressing orchids."

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Under a Spell

"MY DAUGHTER is 22," writes Mabel Blake, from a small Illinois town. "She is tiny, wears size 10 clothes, and looks about 12. She has always been a great favorite, and much in demand by the nicest crowd here. At 15 she was having young admirers very much in earnest, and last year she announced her engagement to one of the finest men we know. Her father and I were very happy about it. Pam has always had a very steady little head on her shoulders, and she chose a man of 29, who passed the bar with honors, and is already established with a fine legal firm in Evanston. In every way Clyde is the ideal mate for her.

"Four months ago a man came to town with an unpleasantly free manner, no job, and a bad record. That is, at 21, he is already being divorced, the father of a small child for whom he apparently cares nothing, and altogether an undesirable person.

Dreamy State

"However, he sings, he fills in on radio programs, he is handsome, and Pamela has fallen completely under his spell. She has broken her engagement to Clyde, and all we hear is Hal, Hal, Hal. She seems to be in a dreamy state utterly unlike her old self; she has an answer for everything; nothing we can say seems to penetrate.

"My husband has made Hal feel that he is unwelcome here. Pam meets him at the corner and they go off together almost every evening. That she has seen him the worse for alcohol I know, and we also know that she has lent him money, for my son, who works in the bank, has had an opportunity to ascertain this.

"We've always had a happy home; my husband is the best of men and a most considerate father; there seems to be no reason why Pam should turn away from us all, and jeopardize everything she has ever known for this boy. Clyde came from the city to talk to her about it last Sunday; Pam would no nothing but laugh and joke, and instead of driving him to the train as she always has done, went off with Hal, and left us to handle Clyde.

". . . he is unwelcome . . ."

"This morning she tells me that his divorce, which his wife is getting in California, will be granted in a few weeks, and then he and she will be married, and she asked that we don't argue about it. Is there any accounting for this foolishness, and is there any way in which she can be stopped?"

Mother Nature's Job

It's Mother Nature's job to account for the foolishness, Mabel, not mine. It's an expensive form of foolishness, but Mother Nature never did bother about expenses. It means that that curious chemical — I prefer the word reversed myself, and call it "alchemic"—insanity has gotten hold of Pamela; whether it's all physical or all mental or both, nobody seems to know. But it produces the grand passion, that ephemeral feeling of lightness and ecstasy, that absorption in the presence of another person, that heady intoxication that makes only what he says important, and makes him one's entire interest.

He may be, as in this case, far from an admirable person. Pamela may be headed for bitter disillusionment, and probably is. But that doesn't mean that his lightest word, his lightest touch, doesn't thrill her as she has never been thrilled in her life before. As for warmer signs of affection, praise in his magical voice, the pressure of those handsome lips, the firm hold of those manly arms—well, she is living in a world colored by those and nothing else, and for the moment it is a glorious world.

It is hard for you. It will be harder for her. She will find herself, in a few years, possibly in a few months, in a small cheap apartment, with breakfast dishes hanging on unwashed until noon because Hal hates to get up, with a flat pocketbook, with even margarine and frankfurters beyond the budget, because there is no budget, and every pound of coffee a problem.

Thousands of girls meet this experience every year, and they add to the long list of divorces simply because the material of a successful marriage isn't there—never was there. They have sense enough not to buy shoddy clothing or go to poor shows or invest in Arctic banana plantations, but when it comes to a spurious human being they let their young passion, their vanity, their credulity carry the day.

Pamela will be back with you in a year or two, perhaps with a small bewildered baby whose only knowledge of his father will be bad.

TEXAS TALL ONE

After the visitor had talked all evening about the size and fierceness of the mosquitoes, the old Texan was becoming much annoyed.

"Just look at them swarm," the guest complained. "Why don't you screen this porch?"

"That, suh," the old man replied, "would be unsportsmanlike. We use mouse traps."

DIFFERENCE OF OPINION

Little Johnny was doing his homework. His problem was: A trucker had fifty crates of apples to sell for $10 apiece. If he sold them all, what would he get? Johnny was getting nowhere fast and Mother decided to help him. "It's easy," she said, "you just multiply fifty by ten." "Oh, I know that," said Johnny. "The answer is $500. But then it says: 'What would he get? I know I'd get a repeating rifle, but how do I know what he'd get?"

Tradition

By the time a man has reached the age of 30 he has either made a fool of himself or permitted some woman to do it for him.

Ho, Hum!

He married her, and now he'll sigh
And sit around and curse;
She was the apple of his eye,
Now she's the lemon of his purse.

Yet to Come

They had just become engaged.

"I shall love," she cooes, "to share all your troubles."

"But darling," he murmured, 'I have none."

"No," she agreed, "but I mean when we are married."

The Reason

"What," exclaimed the lady, "you charge me one dollar for that loose leaf note book?"

"Yes, ma'am," replied the polite clerk, "That is the lowest price we can sell it for."

"How is it that I can get one just like it at Smith's for 90 cents?"

"I cannot say, madam. Perhaps Mr. Smith has taken a fancy to you. He is a widower, and you are very beautiful — yes ma'am, one dollar Thank you."

Smart Menu Plans Call for Tempting, Attractive Salads

MANY HOMEMAKERS find that their families like certain main dishes served time after time, as long as they're not repeated too frequently to become tiresome. How can she add interest and variety to meals, in that case?

Variety in the salad department adds zest to any menu and is much appreciated by the family. Most salads can be made so very easily, either quickly or ahead of time, that they need add little work to the preparation of a meal.

If you want your salads to have as fresh and appetizing appearance as possible, arrange them in the last few minutes before serving. Everything, however, can be made ready before then, like the greens, chilling plates, fruit or vegetables.

Basic salad ingredients can be treated with new color and flavor combinations to keep them varied and attractive. Make them the light part of a heavy winter meal that keeps the folks from saying, "Are we having the same old things tonight?"

Cottage cheese is a favorite but it need never grow tiresome when treated with grated orange rind, maraschino cherries and canned cling peaches:

Cheerio Cottage Cheese Salad
(Serves 4)

- 1 pint cottage cheese
- 2 teaspoons grated orange rind
- 2 tablespoons chopped maraschino cherries
- Lettuce
- 8 canned cling peaches
- Maraschino cherries
- Mint sprigs, if desired

Blend cottage cheese, orange rind and chopped cherries; form into rough ring on each of 4 lettuce-garnished salad plates. Arrange 2 drained peach halves in each cottage cheese ring as shown. Garnish with cherries and mint.

Molded Raisin Salad
(Serves 6)

- ½ cup seedless raisins
- ½ cup cider vinegar
- ½ cup granulated sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 4 teaspoons plain gelatin
- 2 tablespoons cold water
- 2 eggs
- 1 tablespoon prepared horseradish
- 2 teaspoons mild prepared mustard
- 1 teaspoon onion salt
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 2 cups coarsely shredded raw carrot
- ¼ cup finely cut sweet pickle
- 1 cup mayonnaise
- Salad greens

Cover raisins with boiling water and let stand 5 minutes; drain thoroughly. Combine vinegar, sugar and salt, and bring to boil. Remove from heat. Soften gelatin in cold water and dissolve in hot mixture. Pour hot mixture over beaten eggs, stirring briskly. Add horseradish, mustard, onion salt, lemon juice, carrot, pickle and raisins. Blend well. Cool until thick but not firm. Blend in mayonnaise. Pour into 6 individual molds and chill until firm. Unmold on salad greens.

Colorful canned fruits either by themselves or molded in gelatin make picture-pretty salads that can serve as a dessert course, as well as the salad. Plan to use them for parties and special occasions, too.

There's no need to lack for salad inspiration when you can use old favorites with new seasoning as in this cottage cheese-peach salad. Grated orange rind and maraschino cherries add both flavor and color for a salad that's pure eating pleasure.

An unusual molded salad uses raisins, carrots, mayonnaise and gelatin as its base. It's good for a luncheon when you entertain or it can enhance the family dinner to a great extent. Here it's served with sandwiches, potato chips, ripe olives, pickles and a glass of milk.

Fruit Ring Salad
(Serves 6-8)

- 2 packages lemon-flavored gelatin
- 1¼ cups hot water
- 2 cups fruit syrup (drained from peaches and pineapple)
- Canned peach halves, drained
- Canned pineapple slices, drained
- Canned dark sweet cherries, drained
- Salad greens

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Add fruit syrup and chill mixture until slightly thickened. Pour ½ cup gelatin into the bottom of an 8-inch ring mold (1½ quarts) and chill until almost firm. Set pineapple slices in gelatin with a dark sweet cherry in the center and pour in gelatin just to cover. Chill until firm. Stand peach halves upright against sides of mold and place cherries above pineapple slices. Pour in gelatin to cover peaches about one-half and chill until firm. Add remaining gelatin and chill thoroughly. Unmold and garnish with salad greens. Serve with a whipped cream dressing.

Buffet Fruit Platter
(Serves 6)

- Canned peach halves, drained
- Canned fruit cocktail, drained
- Canned pineapple slices, drained
- Cottage cheese
- Bananas
- Salad greens

Place peach halves, cut side up, on salad greens in the center of a large plate. Fill with fruit cocktail. Spread pineapple slices with cottage cheese and top with another pineapple slice, sandwich style. Fill centers with cottage cheese. Cut bananas in half and slice from tip in, spreading apart to make a fan. Dip in pineapple syrup. Arrange pineapple sandwiches and banana fans around peaches. Garnish with salad greens. Serve with desired dressing.

Frozen Fruit Salad
(Serves 8)

- 1 No. 2½ sized can fruit cocktail
- 1 teaspoon unflavored gelatin
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 3-ounce package cream cheese
- ¼ cup mayonnaise
- Dash salt
- ⅔ cup whipping cream, chilled
- ⅓ cup sugar
- ½ cup chopped nuts

Drain fruit cocktail. Soften gelatin in lemon juice, then dissolve over hot water. Blend cream cheese with mayonnaise and salt. Stir in gelatin. Whip cream until stiff, adding sugar gradually during last stages of beating. Fold in cheese mixture, nuts, and fruit cocktail. Pour into refrigerator tray that has been lined with waxed paper. Freeze until firm with refrigerator set at coldest setting (approximately 4 hours). Turn out on platter, remove paper, cut into thick slices. Garnish with watercress. Note: Let the salad stand at room temperature for a few minutes just before serving. The flavor and texture are ever so much better.

LYNN SAYS:

Let Salad Making Become an Art

Too much greenery on a salad plate "dwarfs" the salad. The greens used should never extend beyond the rim of the salad plate, whether this is individual or large.

Vegetable salad combinations can be enhanced with a dressing whose base is mayonnaise or French. To either of these add some deviled ham, sweet relish, chopped sweet or dill pickles, stuffed green or ripe olives, catchup or mustard.

To arrange fruits in a gelatin mold in a definite pattern, use a thin layer of slightly thickened gelatin. Chill this with the fruits until firm and then add the next layer in the same way.

Large gelatin molds should be prepared the day before they are served so they will have a chance to become thoroughly firm and molded before serving time.

For easy unmolding, have large molds as full as possible. Then you can slip a spatula easily around the edges for loosening the mold.

Judge Thomas F. Murphy to Direct Administration's House Cleaning

SCANDAL—Thomas F. Murphy, a New York federal judge, will direct President Truman's non-partisan commission which will attempt to clean up the present administration before the coming election campaign. Murphy is an old hand at investigations. He formerly directed the criminal section of the U. S attorney's office in New York and prior to being elevated to the bench, served for a time as commissioner of New York's huge police force.

As things now stand, the President is taking personal charge of the cleanup campaign. However, administration critics, as well as some of its supporters, believe that corruption in government as revealed in the past few years has ruined the Democratic party's chance of re-election.

The postwar rash of investigations started when evidence of skullduggery was revealed in the disposal of surplus war property. Almost immediately afterwards a probe was started of "five-percenters"—men who peddled influence and obtained juicy government contracts for a fee. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation was next in the headlines for finagaling loans. This resulted in a shakeup in the agency and the naming of a single new administrator, W. Stuart Symington. Even Democratic National Chairman William J. Boyle figured in the probe and resigned as a result.

The R.F.C. scandal was still making news when the special congressional tax investigating committee plowed into the Bureau of Internal Revenue, resulting in sensational disclosures of "tax fixing" and influence peddling.

It was evident the President had this sordid history in mind when he announced he planned to establish a special house-cleaning agency, and that wrongdoers will be ousted "no matter who they are or how big they are."

The President's action, however, is not likely to lessen the criticism of his administration. To the contrary, it could mean a fresh wave of embarrassing exposures, particularly if the probe is pushed as vigorously as the President says he intends. And if the probers show any signs of heel-dragging, there will be plenty of Republicans ready to prod them along.

It would seem, then, that the people in the home towns of America can expect further disclosures of corruption in government, perhaps more sensational than already revealed during the past few years. One GOP strategist has summed up the situation pretty well: "If this thing really gets rolling, it could make Teapot Dome look like a tea party."

TRUCE TALKS—The Korean peace talks hit a snag of vital importance and interest to home towners who have relatives fighting in Korea—the exchange of prisoners. The Communists refused to list the prisoners, or even to say how many they held. Until they do, the UN has refused to talk on the subject of prisoner exchange.

It may be the Communists will change their tactics and produce the prisoner list before this reaches print. If they do, the UN will then be concerned about the location of the camp and the exchange method.

There are 11,000 Americans and 1,500 British and other UN troops missing in Korea. Under the head of "allied missing" (but not UN) are about 89,000 South Koreans. UN forces hold 165,000 of the enemy, of whom 18,000 are Chinese.

When the prisoners are exchanged, and they must be before there is any final peace in Korea, less than 4,000 can be expected to return, UN officials believe. One UN report recently estimated that nearly 8,000 UN soldiers have died of wounds or atrocities. This would support the general figure of less than 4,000 still being alive.

THE BUDGET—Within the next few weeks the people in the small towns of the nation will hear what the government expects to spend during the fiscal year beginning July 1. The budget is about ready for formal presentation to congress.

Advance reports indicated it may be about $83,000,000,000, although President Truman has spent considerable time trying to prune it below $80 billion on advice of political aides.

Even an $80,000,000,000 outlay would be the biggest in history, except for the two peak years of World War II, when spending passed $95,000,000,000. The spending this fiscal year, which will end next June 30, is expected to be about $70,000,000,000.

A number of factors directed the President's pruning attempts: (1) Military spending must be kept within bounds to retain public support; (2) This year is a presidential campaign year and federal spending, deficits and indebtedness will be an issue; (3) Prospects for a new tax increase to match the rising budget are very dim; (4) Never before have taxes been as high as now.

CEILINGS CUT—Price ceilings on cattle hides, calfskins, carpetings, and rugs have been rolled back by the government. The roll-back amounted to 5 cents a pound on cattle hide and 18 per cent (10 to 15 cents a pound) on calfskin.

The reduction in hide ceiling is not expected to have any effect on the market price of leather or on shoes and other goods made of leather, price officials reported. Leather and shoe prices have been depressed and are lower than existing ceilings.

Meanwhile, a threatened shortage of tires next summer has been averted by the government's decision to stop allocating American made general purpose rubber.

James A. Newman, vice president of the B. F. Goodrich Company says the elimination of government restriction on the consumption of new rubber should make it possible for tire manufacturers to produce at least 71,000,000 passenger tires in 1952, or approximately 5,000,000 more than the probable production of 1951.

BRITAIN TO PAY—The British government has announced payment of $176,200,000 on United States and Canadian loans. The payment has an ironic twist since the British have asked the United States for another $600,000,000 in economic help during the next six months.

Britain owes the United States $4,350,000,000 and Canada $1,185,000,000. She has until the year 2000 to pay off these debts, incurred after World War II had ravaged the British economy. The first installment due on the American loan made in 1946 amounts to $138,500,000. Of this, $87,000,000 represents interest.

This is the first picture released of the nation's newest tank, the giant T-36. Ordnance officials say it will outslug any land-fighting machine ever built, although they will not reveal any statistics. They even photographed it blacked out against the setting sun to safeguard military security.

FARM LABOR SHORTAGE

Government Speeds Up Refugee Program

John W. Gibson, chairman of the Displaced Persons Commission, has announced revitalization of the commission's program for the processing of escaped persons with farm experience in order to ready a large pool of good dairy, "dirt", and general farmers for sponsorship by Americans. The action has been taken in view of the Department of Agriculture's estimate that next summer will mark a peak in the current farm labor shortage.

Gibson explained that any American farmer who can guarantee a job, housing, inland transportation, and that the refugee will not become a public charge, can become a sponsor.

Farmers can get further information from the U.S. Displaced Persons Commission Washington 25, D. C.

Lesson for January 20, 1952

TAX collectors and customs officers in these days are highly respectable men. They are not (officially) popular; but every one knows they are necessary. What they collect is fixed by law, and they get no commission on their collections. They live on a salary also fixed by law. If any one feels "gouged" by taxes he never accuses the collector, the fault is somewhere else.

Dr. Foreman

Now in Palestine, in the time of Christ, it was different. Throughout the gospels the name "publican" or, as translated in present-day English, "tax-collector", is evidently a name for a mean man. Jesus himself used publicans as examples of the lowest level of society. The reason was this: In the Roman system of tax collection, the privilege of levying taxes in a given district was "farmed out", that is to say, offered at auction. The highest bidder was given the franchise, and then he, or men he hired, would proceed to collect all the traffic would bear.

Palestine at that time was under the Romans, and the Jews had the army of occupation with them year after year. What the tax collectors did was to turn over to the Romans what the Romans wanted, and everything over and above that amount went into the collector's strong-box.

A Christian's Job

ONE day Jesus just said "follow me" to one of these men, named Matthew, and the man got up and followed him. So far as we know, he never set foot in his office again. Very likely, as a great preacher has suggested, this was not the first time Matthew had seen Jesus. Possibly they had had conversations before, out of business hours. The preacher goes on to suggest that Matthew may have come to loathe his job, but never have seen just how he could leave it.

Be that as it may, Matthew understood quite well that he could not be both a publican and a follower of Jesus. This raises a question: Are there occupations today which a true Christian cannot follow without sin?

There was a dope peddler one night sitting on a stone wall outside a New England church. Somehow the Spirit of God blessed the singing that night, for one of the hymns sang its way straight into that man's heart, and that very hour he threw his packet of dope away and became a Christian. He never went back to that business. We can all see that he was right; but are there other businesses also that cannot have the blessing of Christ upon them?

Whom Do You Follow?

THE story of Matthew suggests also that every one is some kind of follower. Some people just "follow their noses", that is, they just keep on in the routine of their lives, doing today what they did yesterday just because they have the habit of living in this way. Others follow an ambition, others a desire for revenge, others follow pleasure, others attach themselves to a leader (political, social or what not) and follow somebody else's band-wagon.

The tragedy of the Christian church is that although every Christian, or rather every church member, has solemnly promised to follow Jesus Christ, they don't all follow him, by any means. They go right on following habit, or pleasure, or ambition, and they do not ask (as Matthew must have asked) whether these things are such as Christ can bless, or not.

In spite of Jesus' plain statement: You cannot serve God and Mammon (the god of money), people go right on serving Mammon in spite of their Christian profession.

About Face!

THE word "conversion" means simply "turning around". It means turning all the way around. When the sergeant says "About Face!" it won't do for the rookie to twist his face around, or to turn one foot. It's all the way or nothing.

Yet when Jesus our Commander gives the command "About Face!" how many Christians barely move a muscle!

The church is too well loaded with half-converted people. They are turned around enough to go to church, but the rest of the week they are headed just the same way the world is headed. What we need is more Matthews, converted 100 per cent.

Big Saving. No Cooking. So Easy.

You'll be surprised how quickly and easily you can relieve coughs due to colds, when you try this splendid recipe. It gives you about four times as much cough medicine for your money, and you'll find it truly wonderful for real relief.

Make a syrup with 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water. No cooking needed. (Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.) Then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (obtained from any druggist) in a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This makes a full pint of medicine that will please you by its quick action. It never spoils, and tastes fine—children love it.

This simple mixture takes right hold of a cough. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, quickly eases soreness and difficult breathing.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its quick action in coughs and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Memorial Service Sunday For Corporal Billie Lewis

WAS KILLED IN ACTION IN KOREA OCTOBER 10TH

Services Will Be Held At The Evangelical & Reformed Church In Klemme

CORPORAL BILLIE LEWIS

Memorial services for Corporal Billie Edgar Lewis, who was killed in action in Korea October 10, 1951, will be held at the Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Church on Sunday afternoon, January 27, 1952 by the Adam-Schaefer Post of the Klemme American Legion. Rev. Vernon Jaberg will deliver the sermon.

Remains Arrived Tuesday

Cpl. Lewis' body escorted by Cpl. Jack E. McDougal. arrived at Mason City Tuesday afternoon. Graveside services will be held Thursday p. m. at Memorial Park Cemetery near Mason City with the Klemme Legion providing casket bearers and firing squad under the direction of Commander Claude White. Rev. Vernon Jaberg will conduct the rites.

Cpl. Billie Lewis, who's only living relative is Mrs. Charles Christie of Klemme, enlisted in the Army in 1949 from Cerro Gordo county at the age of 17. He was first sent to Fort Ord, California, then to an engineering school at Fort Belvoir, Virginia and from there to Camp Stoneman, California.

He left the States in March 1951 for the Pacific theatre for Japan and then to Korea. Later he was transferred to Eta Jima for a special foreman course from which he graduated on September 9, 1951. He then returned to the battle front where he was killed in action on October 9th.

The obituary, which was prepared by the Wellemeyer Funeral Service of Klemme, who were in charge of arrangements, appears elsewhere in this issue of The Times.

It doesn't take much sense to think twice when streets and highways are covered with solid, glare ice. Even the most willful drivers slow down. The death rate drops.

But when ice breaks up, melts, retreats, it leaves a booby trap behind like any skillful enemy. Those booby traps are small patches of ice hidden over crests of hills, out of the sun. They are small patches of ice on bridges that warm less rapidly than the surrounding earth. They are small patches of ice on shaded portions of the highway, protected, from the sun.

That's the time to be wary, to have your wits with you. Slow down in winter when approaching bridges, when approaching hill crests or clumps of trees along the highway. Think twice on ice. And make that second thought count!

FISHING THRU ICE AT IOWA RIVER REPORTED GOOD

Local Fisherman Have Been Getting Good Catches

Fishing through the ice at the Iowa River west of Klemme has been good the past week, according to local fishermen who have been enjoying this sport.

Frank Schulz caught the first string of fish in 1952 out of the Iowa River, getting his catch soon after the first of the year. Echard Zeidler, who usually is the first to report in on early catches, is second in line for the local fishermen.

Frank and Echard have been bringing in some nice catches of carp, bullheads, and what have you. The fish caught from under the ice have an excellent flavor and the flesh is firm.

A LETTER TO THE TIMES FROM THE CHAMBERS

Jan. 19, 1952

Dear Jergie:-

We left Klemme at just the right time for our trip to Los Angeles. The weather and roads were as near ideal as one could expect for this time of year.

Lois and I were passengers with our nephew Lloyd Aldrich who was returning to March Field near Riverside California.

We left early the morning of Jan. 10th and arrived at El Monte a suberb of Los Angeles early evening Jan. 13th a distance of 2100 miles in four days driving. We did not do any night driving at all.

The road was clear all the way and we did not see snow below Kansas City except some snow on road side over the pass at Williams, Ariz.

Since we have been here it has rained and rained. Traffic is very much tied up in Los Angeles and the "Old Timers" who are happy to see the rain said the water is the worst for many years. Normal rainfall for this time of year is about 5 inches and it has reached the 18 inch mark and more rain today.

Our trip in January is a poor time to see agriculture at its best. We saw very few cattle except in Texas. The winter wheat fields of the Pan Handle is green and the pastures look very good. Also the irrigation around Tucumcarri New Mexico was the best we saw until we reached the citrus groves of California.

The land erosions in Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma looks bad and the color of soil from buff to red is not attractive to a black soil farmer of Iowa or Minnesota.

We haven't been able to call on any of the addresses we brought along. A great many of the streets are blocked off for land slides and water.

My one big disappointment is that we can't possibly get boat transportation to Honolulu for at least six weeks and Lois is not too sure she will fly. I am trying to get air transportation for two for the first of next week. Will let you know later.

With best regards for you and Mary Jane.

Sincerely,
J. A. Chambers

P.S. Just received conformation for 2 tickets via Pan American for Monday night 11:59 Jan. 21.

JUNIOR HIGH WINS DOUBLE HEADER BALL GAME

Coach Bob Juhl's Junior High "Rockettes" came through again and won their 7th game in a row here Thursday evening. The final score was 54-25 over Crystal Lake.

Carol Bridges set a new school record by scoring 40 points. She was followed by Clabaugh's 8, Barz 4 and Thompson 2 points.

Gerardi, Haefner and Rosendahl played a good defensive game.

The halftime score was 26-13 in Klemme's favor. The reserves played the final quarter of the game.

The record so far is 8 wins against one loss.

"Rockets" Win Again

The "Rockets" won their 3rd game of the year, defeating the the Crystal Lake boys, who had lost only one game by the score of 36-27.

Coach Juhl's boys were behind by 8 points early in the first half but overcame the lead and were ahead at halftime 18-16. Kramer was high with 12 points, Haefner had 6, Larsen 6, Brinkman 8 and Weddingham 4 points.

This was by far the best game the boys have played. The record: 3 wins, 6 losses.

Ernest Gerardi Elected To Head Civic Club For '52

MEMBERS DECIDED TO CONTINUE CLUB FOR BETTERMENT OF TOWN

Kenneth Kluckhohn Named Vice President; Howard DeMotts Secretary

A fairly good attendance of businessmen met Monday night to decide the fate of the Civic Club, the outcome of which they decided to keep the Club in operation as is.

An election of officers was held with vice-president E. A. Gerardi being elevated to the presidency to succeed W. F. Pavey, who did a very good job of directing the club the past year. Howard DeMotts was elected as secretary-treasurer to succeed Lloyd Sherwood, and Kenny Kluckhohn was elected vice-president..

After the business meeting a nice lunch was served by Asa Arnold, Fred Arnold, Donald Bacon and Buck Kluckhohn.

Mr. Gerardi asks the support of all business men and their employees for the coming year, all cooperating for the good of the community.

The date for the next meeting will be announced later.

OPERATION UNITY

The East-West Struggle Places Europeans in Political Quandary

By FARNHAM F. DUDGEON
Editor, WNU

Second in a Series

Europeans today are having an extremely difficult time trying to face in two opposite directions at the same time. There is, of course, the ever present Soviet threat of military invasion.

Europe Is Concerned

But, as the United States enters into a crucial election year in which the fate of European military and economic aid will be determined in congressional debate in next November's election, these people are extremely concerned with political events in the United States.

American taxpayers can feel fairly sure on one important aspect of this situation Their representatives from both houses of Congress have poured into Europe in good numbers to observe first-hand the political and military situation as it exists.

When the great debates start, both in the halls of Congress and on the campaign platforms of America's home towns, there will be a store of first-hand observations, which will enable the American voters to ask direct questions and be reasonably sure of getting well-founded replies with regard to the stake we have in Europe.

Both American officials and the officials of other countries told us that these congressmen and senators, who visited them, took a good look and should be able to present a clear picture. We noticed that both political parties were well represented in these congressional inspection teams.

No Backing Down

If economic and military aid from the United States were to be withdrawn, or seriously curtailed, it would be difficult to speculate on the outcome of such action. These countries certainly would not immediately back down, or "go over to the other side".

Countries like Turkey, Greece and Yugoslavia have no choice but to stand as firmly as they can against the Soviet Union. In Turkey we were told, for example, that the world would not be in such a sorry state today if other countries had taken as firm a position against Russia as have the Turks.

In Yugoslavia there is great concern on the part of many observers, as to whether or not the people of the United States are completely convinced that the Tito defection from the Kremlin has been complete and unqualified. Our representatives in Europe voice the general opinion that Yugoslavia has, indeed, cast her lot with the West.

In countries like Italy and France there are thousands of people who still vote as "Communists". However, the general appraisal of these voters by American officials seems to be that only a small percentage are real "hard-core" Communists They ally themselves with Communists and vote for Communist candidates as a protest against the other political parties which currently govern these nations.

If the cold war turned to a hot one, these people would undoubtedly fight against the Russian Communists. There would be some local sabotage, of course, but the majority would support the west.

A subject of continuing speculation by thinking men in Europe today is this problem of the "will to fight". Europe is tired. Its economy has been shattered by almost nonending wars through the first half of this century. Its people bear physical and moral scars of these conflicts.

Much of the physical property which was destroyed during World War II has been rebuilt. But the minds of the people who have survived these wars are not rebuilt. They look with understandable suspicion upon alliances, which conceivably could thrust them into another war. And yet, at the same time, they know that their fate is completely tied to the democratic principles of government best personified today by the United States.

In their attitude toward peace and war, these people are little different than Americans They know, even better than we do, the high and horrible price of war. But, somehow, one senses that they know, too, that unity must be maintained against Russian aggression

Somehow, you feel that they instinctively agree with General Eisenhower, when he says:

Political Federation

"I believe that there will be no permanent position of serenity and confidence for the western world as long as we are confronted with the Communist menace. As a counter, there must be created a United States of—or political federation of —Western Europe; and Western Europe must include at least Western Germany, and preferably United Germany."

Many of the American officials with whom we spoke sincerely believe that such a federation of European countries is the only answer to the enonomic and political problems of these countries.

Such a union will not come easily, but the Europeans themselves know that something other than continuing subsidization by the United States must be done to give them an equitable status in the world's family of peoples. And it is here, in this realm of future long-range planning, that one encounters a European viewpoint, perhaps not thoroughly understood or appreciated by the American taxpayer.

Two Personal Questions

In the early stages of our trip, we encountered an American businessman, who was primarily concerned with getting us to find the answers to his two most important questions: (1.) "Do these people (the Europeans) really appreciate what we are doing for them?" and (2.) "When are they going to get "off the back" of the American taxpayer?"

"Appreciation" is hardly the word for the feeling which most Europeans have for the United States, with regard to the financial and military assistance which it has rendered. They know, and say freely and openly, that this aid has been their salvation. But by and large, these people are strongly nationalistic, and they are not happy with their fate of being the recipients of American "benevolence"

They don't feel that we are "giving" them anything. They feel that we are buying their partnership in an alliance against a common enemy.

They feel, also, that they would like to have the aid, which we have been giving them, terminated just as soon as it is militarily and economically safe to do so. They feel that we are buying much with the money we are spending in Europe.

Many of them are frank to say that it is much better for America to have a "front" against Soviet Russia located where it is today, than it would be to have a front on the Atlantic seaboard of the United States.

THE FICTION CORNER

OVER THE COUNTER

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

DALA WAS thinking of Bill when the young man with the mustache leaned over her counter. Kate Holland had said that she had seen Bill and Reba Ellsworth dancing at Sutton's. Kate was a gossip, but Bill had certainly been acting strangely of late.

"You're Miss Scott, aren't you?" the young man said.

Dala glanced up at him and then gave her attention to her switchboard. "Empire Hotel," she said into the receiver. "Mr. Ricker? Just a moment, please." She plugged in. "You must be psychic," she said to the young man. "Or did you inquire of one of the bellboys?"

The young man looked surprised. "Neither. The clerk told me."

"And now you're going to tell me, I suppose, that you just bought this hotel and unless I go out to dinner with you tonight, I'm fired."

"You're quick," said the young man.

"It's a good line, mister, but I don't like traveling salesmen. Besides, I'm busy—Empire Hotel?"

When she looked up again the young man had gone. She was a little surprised. Usually they didn't give up so easily.

The telephone was ringing when she turned the key in her apartment door at 6:10 that evening. It was Bill, of course. "Hello," she said, trying to force casualness into her tone.

"Remember me?" said a voice. "I'm the man who bought the hotel."

"Like a bad penny," Dala said. "Or didn't you understand me?"

"Thanks a heap," said Dala. "I'll remember you in my prayers."

"Just called to assure you that your job is safe," the voice told her cheerfully.

"Thanks a heap," said Dala. "I'll remember you in my prayers." She hung up.

Bill didn't call that night. No one did. Dala spent a lonesome evening. She was almost glad the next day when the young man with the moustache appeared.

"By the way," he grinned. "You're supposed to give out information, aren't you?" She admitted it by nodding, at the same time droning her usual "Empire Hotel" into the mouthpiece "Then what's your name?" he asked.

She swung around to face him, but somehow decided against the retort that rose to her lips. "It's Dala," she said. "But calling me Dala won't help."

"Thanks. Mine's Johnny."

DALA was returning from lunch when she ran into Bill. He was in a hurry. Or said he was. He only stopped for a minute.

The realization made her kind of sick at heart. No matter whether you loved a man or not, it was something of a blow to find out he was two-timing you.

She jumped when the young man with the moustache spoke into her ear. "I die hard," he grinned. "There's still tonight. And I promise to be good."

Dala looked at him and thought of Bill. "All right," she sighed resignedly.

They had dinner at a restaurant where Dala hadn't eaten before. She liked the place and wondered what Johnny did for a living.

Two nights later Johnny took her to a show and later to a night club. It was then she began to wonder about him.

He regarded her in surprise when she put the question. "But, I've already told you. I'm the man who bought the Empire. I thought you knew."

She said nothing until they were in the lighted hallway of her apartment house.

"Now tell me," she said, looking at him. "Tell me again."

He told her and suddenly the floor seemed to give away beneath her. She turned, but he caught her hand. "What difference does it make?" he pleaded. "I knew you didn't know."

She put her hand over his mouth. "Don't say it. The answer is yes. It's a terrible shock. You see, I've just recovered from being made a fool of by one man. And now this—"

"This, he told her gravely, "is different. We'll make it different. Shall we?"

She nodded.

Truman and Cohorts Leading America into Morass

By Wright A. Patterson

AS WAS THE CASE in the last English elections, when the socialist Atlee was voted out and the Conservative Churchill was voted in, the one issue, the only issue, was socialism. The English people were asked to pass judgement on the results of the socialistic experiment.

So in our presidential election of next November the one issue will be socialism for America. The American people will have the opportunity of saying whether or not they want to continue the socialistically inclined Truman and his fair deal cohorts in office, or whether they want a decided turn to the right.

The proponents of socialism may not express the issue as definitely as that, but the voters should not be fooled by any such phrase as "welfare state," that is but socialism of the brand England has repudiated. And we will follow the same road that has broken England, darkened its factory chimneys, blighted its fields, and left England a fourth rate nation, despite the 35 billions of American money Washington poured into that socialistic rathole.

Socialists are the park-sitters of the nation, those who are asking something for nothing, who wish to eat, without doing their share in production.

The fair dealers would have America bogged down in that same morass in which England is now trapped. They will not admit that fact; they will hide behind lying promises. But the fact remains that socialism for America will be the issue in the November elections. An effort may be made to cover up that fact. But no voter should permit the weasel words of politicians to convince him to the contrary. His vote will be cast for or against socialism.

It took socialism, as operated by the Atlee government, six short years to destroy England, to change it from a reasonably prosperous people. She did not recover from the ravages of World War II as did the other nations of Europe. Production went continuously down, rather than up as in other European nations.

It will take many more than six years for England to recover from the blighting effect of six years of socialism, and through those years will be many, very many, heart aches and back aches, all because of six years of socialism. Socialism changed England from a nation upon which the sun never set, to a nation upon which the sun no longer rose.

President Truman has made every possible effort to drive through congress such legislation as would have made of us a socialistic nation. To some extent he was successful, but the major moves will come after the convening of the 83rd congress in January of 1953. The verdict of the voters will have been registered before that date. For the protection of America, for all of us other than the "dole" collectors, those who would eat, but not work, that verdict must be against socialism. Do not permit any weasel words of politicians to fool you. Socialism will be the issue of the next political campaign.

For close to 200 years Benjamin Franklin has been reverenced as the patron saint of printing and publishing interests in America, but there is another line of vast importance for which he was the pioneer leader. That line is mutual fire insurance. On March 25, 1752, there was started in Philadelphia a concern called "Contributionship." It was the first mutual insurance company in the nation. Its organizers were Benjamin Franklin and a group of associates, mostly Pennsylvania farmers. The idea spread, and now there are 2,616 mutual fire and casualty insurance companies operating in this country, into which were paid last year as premiums more than one billion 400 million. That business was conceived in the mind of Franklin. It stands as monument to his genius in a radically different line from that of printing and publishing. These mutual companies are operated by and for their policy holders.

SENTIMENTAL

One of the clerks at the employment agency was a bit of a wit, and he was preparing to gain a laugh at the expense of the next in line.

"Where were you born?" he asked the man, a Scotchman.

"Glasga'," was the reply.

"Glasgow! Whatever for?" continued the funny one.

"I wanted to be near mother," said the other with devastating meekness.

Admiration

"My boy," said Mr. Smith to his young son, "when I first went into business I had not an asset in the world except my intelligence." 'Gosh, Pop," the lad exclaimed, admiringly, "you sure must have had a lot of courage."

MOTION CARRIED

In a town on the Pacific coast a earthquake shock was felt. When the municipal building rocked dangerously, the aldermen broke up their meeting in a hurry and crammed.

The clerk, a fuddy-duddy who insisted upon formalities and parliamentary procedure, was hard put to give his minutes the proper official tone. Finally he evolved this masterpiece:

"On motion of the city hall. the council adjourned."

Found A Home

A salesman was dismissed because of lack of courtesy to customers. A month later the sales manager spotted him walking about in a police uniform.

"I see you've joined the force, Jones," said the sales manager.

"Yes," replied Jones. "This is the job I've been looking for all my life. On this job the customer is always wrong."

Artist's Pride

Steeplejack — "'Ullo, Bert! Where's that mate you took on—the chap that used to be an artist?"

Second Ditto — "Aven't you 'eard? Soon as he laid a couple of bricks, he stepped back off the scaffolding to admire 'is work."

BURIED SON'S NAME ON PRISONER LIST . . . The parents of a Kansas City, Kansas, soldier, whose body they supposedly buried last summer were overjoyed when they read that his name was on a prisoner of war list submitted by the Communist Chinese command in Korea during the exchange-of-prisoner talks with the U.N. command. Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Smith are shown with their daughter, Mary Ann, 10, as they read the good news concerning their son, Pvt. James W. Smith, 19. President Truman has warned that the Reds' prisoner lists could not be trusted as being absolutely accurate, so the Smiths can only hope.

FROZEN SMOKE? . . . When the thermometer dropped to 10 degrees below zero recently, shivering Milwaukee, Wisc., citizens would have sworn the above scene depicted a column of smoke solidified in the frigid air as it attempted to rise from the chimney of a local residence. Actually this "smoke" was caused by the engine fumes of a high-flying plane passing over, or so says the news service photographer who made the picture for us. It is one of those camera illusions that make picture snapping interesting.

College Football Full of Variety

By GRANTLAND RICE

COLLEGE football in the badly mixed up U.S.A., will be one of the most scrambled sports on any map for 1952.

It was known in advance that the Ivy League had no connection whatsoever with the Southeastern and Southwestern Conferences. The wide split concerned athletic scholarships, student work, bowl games and almost everything else.

Now it seems that the Southern Conference, the Big Seven, the Big Ten, the Missouri Valley and the Pacific Coast Conference are heading for Ivy League standards At least a good part of the way.

Grantland Rice

Each conference is entitled to make its own choice. It is apparently the choice of the Southeastern and the Southwestern Conferences to go out for even bigger and better football —athletic scholarships, plus bowl games, freshmen playing and what else do you want?

There are certain to be wide, sweeping changes over most of the football map. But there will still be football every bit as interesting in other sections as the Southeastern's and Southwestern's untrammeled conferences can put on.

The main point is that the Southeastern and Southwestern leagues can supply enough teams for most of the Bowls, since the Big Ten and West Coast take care of the Rose Bowl's destiny. For how long no one can say.

Certainly the two Conferences from Georgia through Texas can see that the Sugar, Cotton, Orange and Gator Bowls are all supplied with Bowl teams. They may need some help, however, from stray wanderers such as Holy Cross, Fordham, Miami, Virginia and one or two others who are not in a Conference.

The various college presidents have gone farther, in the main, than anyone suspected they would.

This doesn't mean the Southeast or the Southwest where coaches and athletic directors still have control, which is the way those two sections want it.

Different Football

Teams that play with almost unlimited athletic scholarships attached have terrific advantages over those with limited or with no scholarships at all to dole out.

The wonder of 1950 and 1951 was that Princeton, with no athletic scholarships, had teams that matched Tennessee, Maryland and Michigan State

The Southeastern wing and the Southwestern delegation can get along minus any outside schedule help. They have enough old-time rivals at home to fill any schedule.

But the Southern, going in for any scholarship reforms, will have to duck such old rivals as Tennessee, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Tulane and such. Or be outclassed.

If this split develops there will be time enough to see which plan is the sounder. Only the educational side certainly won't be helped where football is given too big a play. Too much football and a sound education don't walk the same road, which is something everyone knows. It will take some time to digest all the many moves that have been planned.

But as things look today there will be a wide gap in some of our major conferences where teams will have to be ranked in different groups—the athletic scholarship and bowl set against the rest of the field.

This will give everybody more confusion than the average fan can handle But that's the way it will have to be if any fair ranking is expected.

The Big Show

These are big days around the pleasant village of Arcadia, Cal. The famous Santa Anita track is open for its 15th season as Dr Charles Strub starts his 50th year as one of sport's fabulous promoters.

It was the San Francisco doctor who sold DiMaggio to the Yankees and gave racing Santa Anita.

This will be Santa Anita's biggest year. The total stakes run into more cash than we can add up on a busy day and was enough to lure out owners with big stables who have a chance to win.

If you walk around the stables you'll run across such big name horses as Counterpoint, 1951 champion, Hill Prince, Count Turf (Derby Winner), Windy City (English and Irish champion two-year-old), Bed o'Roses, Palestinian, Moonrush, Wistful, Special Touch, Rough n' Tumble, Bryan G., Guillotine, Gold Capitol, Hill Gail, A Gleam, Cousin, horses from the stables of C. V. Whitney, Greentree, Vanderbilt, Calumet, C. T. Chenery, an almost never-ending list.

This shot at big cash has also lured out the top jockeys.

Arcaro, Shoemaker, Atkinson, many of the track's biggest names, who can scent the odor of newmown money.

Among the features are the $200,000 Maturity, with Counterpoint featured, the $100,000 Derby on February 23, and the $100,000 Handicap.

REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD

• Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different!

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon.... right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes mostly waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, run-down feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self—full of life! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

Spitzbergen Coal Mined By Russians

The coldest crossroads of the cold war are Norway's jagged Spitsbergen islands, where polar bears nose inquisitively into the only mining settlements operated by Soviet Russia on the free side of the Iron Curtain.

Svalbard — "land of the cold coast"—is the ancient Norse name for this Arctic archipelago which became part of the Kingdom of Norway a quarter of a century ago. Once an international no man's land, Svalbard has recently become a strategic question mark.

It straddles potential polar air routes between Europe and North America. But under a 1920 treaty, the islands cannot be fortified, and signing nations (United States, Great Britain and its Dominions, France, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Denmark, Sweden, and Russia) are guaranteed continued access to any economic interests they might hold there.

Today both Norway and Russia mine Spitsbergen coal. Norway is a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization; Russia is not. Svalbard's status is somewhere between.

First, make a syrup with 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. This is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its quick action on throat and bronchial irritations.

Put Pinex into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. Thus you make a full pint of splendid medicine—about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

And for quick, blessed relief, it is surprising. You can feel it take hold in a way that means business. It loosens phlegm, soothes irritated membranes, eases soreness. Makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep. Just try it, and if not pleased, your money will be refunded.

FOR EXTRA CONVENIENCE GET NEW READY-MIXED, READY-TO-USE PINEX!

Your idea of what is meant by being a good citizen was the roll call eight members answered January 19, 1952, at the home of Marlene Blumer.

We are sending $5 to the International Youth Exchange. This is a practice we have adopted for the past few years.

After a short business meeting, Jo Ann Burgess gave a talk on the preparation of coffee, tea and cocoa. The leaders gave a talk on a recent training school Judy Gilpin had the recreation.

Jo Ann Burgess, Lois Helps, and Marlene Blumer served a lunch.

Visiting around Iowa

by Joe Marsh

No Stairs for Ed

Cousin Ed got himself a new bungalow last week . . . right from his old, two-story house.

"Getting too old to climb stairs," he said.

So, he just sliced off the top story, set it down beside the bottom half, and has a dandy looking ranch house.

The whole neighborhood likes its looks . . . that is, everyone except the neighborhood critic.

"No fool like an old fool," she complained. "He's built a monstrosity, spoiled the neighborhood."

Well now, we know that isn't so. If Ed wants a one story house, that's his business. A little variety in houses makes a better-looking street. Just as a variety in tastes, ideas, and opinions makes a better community.

Some folks like to see a movie and eat popcorn, some enjoy a temperate glass of beer while they watch the television, and Grandma Edsel likes to sip her tea and knit. Each to his choice.

Let's not criticize the other fellow's tastes just because they don't happen to be ours.

Commanders Praise Front Line Morale Of Troops in Korea

A Pentagon general who toils far into each night to insure that Korean commanders are supplied equipment and trained troops is finding inspiration these days in a letter he received from a United States Army battalion commander who is leading army troops in battle.

"I've taken off at first light with them," the battalion commander writes, "fought all day and into the night, buttoned up on a mountain peak in two feet of snow, beat off two counterattacks during the night—and when morning came, found them ready to move out. No gripes, no despair—

"How can you help but love men like that? I've almost decided that United States Army men just don't crack."

The commander said his battalion is well-trained, tough, sound as a dollar, and loves to fight. At the time he wrote, the battalion had been in regimental reserve for five days.

"The men don't like it," he said, "they'd rather be on the move and so would I.

"I've got three rifle companies that are top-notch. There's little to choose between them. In planning an attack, I can toss a coin to determine the company that's going to make the main effort.

"In the past two months, we've experienced almost every type of operation in the book except a river crossing and we're looking forward to that in the near future.

"Of course, the most outstanding thing about this outfit—and it's none of my doing so I can brag about it—is the spirit of the men themselves.

"Whenever I feel low, I get out among them and talk with them—it's the best medicine in the world for the commander who wonders how much further he can push his outfit before it begins to crack."

The shot fired by the American colonists at Concord was the "shot heard round the world."

STATE TREES AVAILABLE FOR 1952 PLANTING

Landowners who wish to obtain forest seedlings, multiflora rose and other wildlife plants from the state forest nursery for 1952 planting may place an order now with local county extension directors, soil district farm planners and state conservation officers.

The State Conservation Commission reports that the supply of multiflora rose is much larger than last year.

Tree seedlings available include green ash, red elm, soft maple, jack pine, red pine, and white pine. Wildlife plants available include wild plum, wild grape, caragana, dogwood, red haw, Russian Olive, and multiflora rose.

Prices are $17.00 per thousand multiflora rose and pine $10.00 per thousand other plants, except black walnut which will be available from stratified seed stocks at $1 50 per 250 nuts.

Plants secured from the forest nursery may not be purchased for landscaping or ornamental purposes but are available for erosion control and wildlife plantings. Applications will be received up to March 15. Planting stock will be delivered C. O. D. express after notification by the forest nursery.

Jolly Workers Club

The Jolly Workers Club met at the home of Freda Lass Wednesday, January 9th.

Twenty members were present and Mrs. Murl Aries of Waterloo was a visitor. Mrs. Edith Kramer our new President for the new year passed out our club books. We brought old cards that we didn't want anymore and are sending them to Woodward Hospital.

Mildred Gruis read a letter received from Mrs. Palmer thanking the club for the bedding and the other needy things given to them. We are each to bake cookies to send to Mason City to be served to the patients that are donating blood in January.

We are sending $2 to the Polio fund. All members using Butternut Coffee is to save the tin strip off the can so it can be used to buy Christmas toys.

Jennie Nelson gave the lesson on closet spacing. Entertainment was furnished by Edith Kramer and Louise Pearson. At the February meeting we are to bring a .50c gift and a valentine for our mystery friend. The meeting will be at the home of Mildred Gruis with Rieka Green as co-hostess.

Every woman seems to harbor a secret desire to write—checks.

the first time in your life you find you have mistakenly put on your boy's overshoes it does make you stop and think a minute. They wern't even tight!

Set Hearing Date For Ditch Repair

The Hancock and Wright Co. boards of supervisors met at the courthouse in Garner recently to discuss the report of T. F. Matson, Engineer on joint drainage district No. 54-121, with reference to an improvement and repair, petitioned for by Gerhart Krause et al. The improvement involves open ditch and tile line work.

The joint boards fixed Febr. 21 at 1:30 p. m. at the courthouse in Garner, as a time and place for a public hearing on the proposed improvement and repair.

Obituary of Billie Edgar Lewis, 19

BILLIE EDGAR LEWIS was born September 30, 1932 at Panora, Iowa, the youngest of two children born to his parents, Chance A. Lewis and wife, Hazel Elizabeth, nee Clark.

When Billie was 8 months old his father, who was a Veteran of World War I died suddenly with a heart attack. Another tragedy occured when Billie was 7 years old—when his mother died.

The Iowa Soldiers Orphans Home at Davenport then provided a home for Billie and his sister, Charlotte.

A few months later Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ogren, of Kiron, Iowa, noticed the friendly Billie, and asked to take him home with them. The matter was arranged and thus Billie lived with the Ogrens for 9 years. At Kiron he went to school, attended religious instruction, was baptized and became a member, by Confirmation, of the Bethel Lutheran Church at Kiron, Iowa.

At age 16, Billie found employment at the Shell Gas Station in Clear Lake, Iowa. At the age of 17 he enlisted in the Army, and on October 10th, 1951 he died in Korea, age 19 years, and 10 days.

He leaves one relative, his sister Charlotte, (Mrs. Charles Christie, Klemme, Iowa) and many friends.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Sinful Smugness

"THREE YEARS AGO," writes Gerald Fletcher, from Springfield, Mass., "I met the girl of my dreams. The woman, rather, for Isabelle is 26; I am 32. From the beginning a feeling sprang up between us, not only of love—and that was almost at first sight, but of an immense liking, a congeniality, a union of likes and dislikes. Our work brought us much together, Isabelle conducting a department for girls in the big institution of which I am assistant director. These first months of our friendship were the happiest of my life; I am a veteran, not much handicapped by an artificial knee, and have been deeply absorbed in a scientific work which I hope to have published a few years from now.

Happy Engagement

"Our engagement was an absolutely happy time, when I went to my girl's Massachusetts home, met her delightful family, and was warmly made welcome. The engagement was then announced and our plans made for a wedding last June. It was some weeks after that that Isabelle quite suddenly asked me if I had ever had any serious love affairs with other women; she said she must know everything, and that then whatever it was it should be forgotten and forgiven. She said that she had a horror of the immoralities now said to be so prevalent among adolescents, but that she could not remain in the dark about my past.

"I was hurt by her attitude, and told her that it could only disturb her to dig up the past, but she became agitated, and I saw that she had quite honestly thought I had nothing to tell. We had several distressing scenes, after which I told her a true story of one or two episodes of my first college year, and of a genuine attachment I had to a nurse, out in the South Pacific, a heroic, gentle girl who died of an infection from a shrapnel cut.

"Isabelle immediately broke our engagement, wrote her mother that I was not the sort of man that she could ever respect, or that she could wish to have as the father of her children. She returned my letters, the beautiful ring that my father had given my mother when they were engaged.

A Little Anger

Pride and a little anger helped me through this shock and change in my life; I could arrange things so that Isabelle and I did not often meet, and as the months went by I became attached—through loneliness, I suppose, for I never had noticed her before—to my landlady's daughter, a very quiet girl, whose fiance was killed in 1942, and who is a librarian. I have not led her to think I care for her, but some months ago she betrayed that she has come to like me.

"Now for the problem. This morning, while I was reading your article, a letter came from Isabelle. She has experienced a complete change of heart, she is sorry, she says she knows that men's lives are different from those of women, and that since poor little Rosy was killed in the war, I cannot restore my honor, as she puts it, by finding her and making her my wife. Isabelle's letter goes on to say that she is sure a few honest talks will set matters right and restore our old feeling for each other, but she ends with the warning that she must know everything now, and not expect any more shocks and surprises.

My dear Gerald, I say in answer, your letter leaves me no choice. Perhaps you have done Isabelle an injustice, although it does not seem so. But self-righteousness is a detestible thing, and anyone who thinks she has a right to question another about his past, his young mistakes, his natural emotions, will make a difficult wife. The smug serenity with which Isabelle proposes to probe into your soul, presently extending to you her benign forgiveness, indicates that you would always be to her a weak brother, to be helped and guided to her own heights of perfection. Just because a woman does not yield to early sex impulses doesn't mean that she hasn't equally serious faults.

One young wife I knew demanded to know everything her doctor husband's patients told him. When he laughed at her she grew angry, and told him that unless he answered her questions there would never be a baby in the house. They were married 16 years after that, until her death from cancer, and there never was a child. Isabelle would understand this perfectly.

In your place I would write Isabelle that you felt that your seeing each other would serve no purpose, and remain hers affectionately. And then take Goldie to the movies.

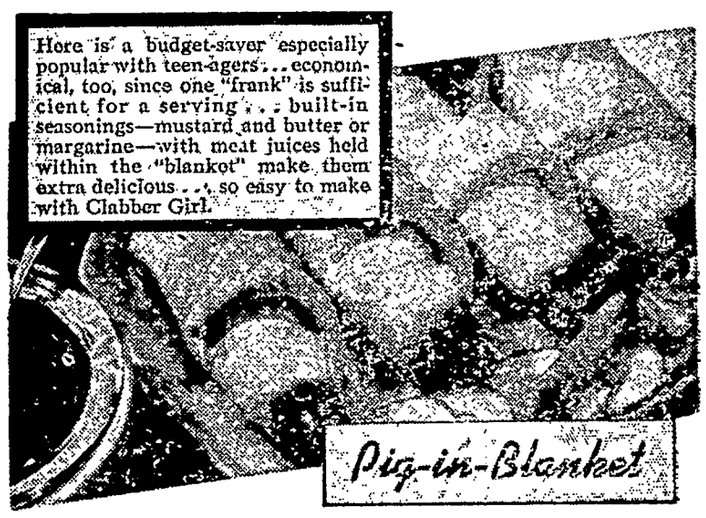
Try this Budget Saver with CLABBER GIRL

Here is a budget-saver especially popular with teen-agers . . . economical, too, since one "frank" is sufficient for a serving . . . built-in seasonings—mustard and butter or margarine—with meat juices held within the "blanket" make them extra delicious . . . so easy to make with Clabber Girl.



Pound for pound, more people use more Clabber Girl than any other Baking Powder.

Here's Why: Clabber Girl's balanced double action takes the guess-work out of baking . . . a uniform rise to mixing bowl lightness; a positive rise to oven perfection in texture and flavor.

1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons Clabber Girl Baking Powder
½ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons shortening
½ cup milk (approx.)
Butter or margarine
Prepared mustard
6 frankfurters

Sift flour, baking powder and salt into mixing bowl. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles corn meal. Add milk and stir to make soft dough that can be handled. Scrape ball of dough onto lightly floured board. Knead slighty, then roll into circle a little less than one-fourth inch thick. Cut dough into six pie-shaped wedges. Spread each wedge with butter or margarine and prepared mustard. Lay frankfurter on end of dough opposite point. Roll up and press point to seal dough. Place point-side down on cookie sheet. Bake 12 to 15 minutes in a very hot oven (450° F.). Serve hot with catsup or chili sauce.

Serve a Tempting Main Dish—Pin Wheel Shortcakes
(See Recipes Below)

Budgetwise Meals

BUDGET MEALS are much in demand currently, but they still must satisfy the family in taste appeal and appetite interest. If the homemaker does the kind of job she should, both in trimming her food budget a few dollars a week, and keeping the family happy with meals served, only she need be the one to be aware of the economy.

Just as it's inspiring to turn out an interesting meal from leftovers, so is it to turn some inexpensive dishes into attractive meals that have color, glamor and eating pleasure.

To trim down costs on dishes as much as possible, make wise use of leftovers so that nothing of value is ever fed into the garbage pail. Another good way is to use canned foods alone or in combination as they will substantially lower the cost of food.

Here's a satisfying as well as handsome main dish that is appealing to the eye as well as nutritionally adequate.

Meat Pin Wheel Shortcakes
(Serves 6)

Part I
- 1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2½ teaspoons baking powder
- 3 tablespoons fat
- ½ cup milk
- 2 small cans deviled ham, liver paste or other potted meats

Sift together flour, salt and baking powder. Cut in fat with a pastry blender or two knives until the mixture resembles coarse meal. Add the milk, mixing to a soft dough; place on lightly floured board and knead for thirty seconds. Roll into a rectangle approximately 12 x 8 inches. Spread with deviled ham or other meats. Beginning at the longer side, roll as tightly as possible. Cut in approximately 1-inch pieces, place cut side down on baking sheet and bake in hot oven (450°F.) 15 minutes.

Part II:
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 1-pound can peas
- 1 4-ounce can button mushrooms
- Milk
- 2 tablespoons chopped canned pimiento
- ½ teaspoon salt

Melt butter over low heat in saucepan; blend in flour. Drain liquid from peas and mushrooms; add enough milk to make 1½ cups. Add to blended flour and butter; cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Add peas, mushrooms, pimiento and salt; keep over low heat until vegetables are heated. To serve, place half of the pin wheels on platter, top with creamed vegetables and remaining pin wheels.

Last-of-the-Meat Loaf
(Serves 4)
- 2 tablespoons melted butter
- 2 tablespoons dry crumbs
- 2 teaspoons grated onion
- 2 cups mashed potato
- 1 cup cooked grated carrot
- ½ teaspoon salt
- Few grains black pepper
- ½ teaspoon poultry seasoning
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
- Sliced meat loaf
- 2 tablespoons melted fat
- 2 teaspoons worcestershire sauce
- 2 teaspoons prepared mustard
- ½ cup raw carrot slices

Combine butter, crumbs and onion. Add potatoes, grated carrot, salt, pepper, poultry seasoning and parsley; place in greased baking dish. Top with meat. Combine fat, worcestershire sauce and mustard; pour over meat. Bake in moderate oven (350°F.) 25 to 30 minutes. Garnish with carrot slices.

Corned Beef Ring
(Serves 6)
- 1 tablespoon prepared mustard
- 1 cup soft bread crumbs
- 2 tablespoons chopped onion
- 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
- 2 tablespoons butter, melted
- ⅛ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
- 2 cups finely diced corned beef (12-ounce can)
- 1 cup milk
- 2 eggs, slightly beaten

Combine mustard, bread crumbs, onion, green pepper, butter, pepper and corned beef; mix well. Combine milk and eggs, add to corned beef mixture, mix well. Pack into well-greased 1-quart ring mold, place in pan of water. Bake about 30 minutes in moderate oven (350°F.) Fill center with creamed peas.

When you're in a hurry, put the pressure cooker to good use by cooking a dinner in it that would ordinarily take much longer. An hour or more of cooking time can be cut down to actual 15 to 20 minutes with this savory dinner:

Quick Chop Suey
(Serves 6-8)
- ½ pound lean pork, diced
- 1 pound round steak, diced
- 1 tablespoon fat
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 1½ cups chopped onion
- ½ cup chopped green pepper
- 1½ teaspoons sugar
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 1 tablespoon concentrated meat extract
- 1 cup hot water
- 1 tablespoon dark molasses
- 1 No. 2 can (2½ cups) bean sprouts
- 5 tablespoons cornstarch
- ½ cup cold water

Brown meats in hot fat. Add seasonings, vegetables, sugar, soy sauce, meat extract, water and molasses. Heat to 15 pounds pressure. Cook 10 minutes. Reduce pressure gradually. Add bean sprouts. Combine cornstarch and cold water; stir into mixture and cook over low heat until thickened; stir constantly. Serve over fried noodles.

LYNN SAYS:

Dramatize Flavor In Serving Vegetables

Whole kernel corn takes on a more appetizing flavor if you crumble into it 2 strips of cooked bacon. Saute the corn in bacon drippings.

To heated, drained green beans, add a small can of sliced mushrooms and let stand until heated. Mix thoroughly before serving.

To heated, drained peas, add 2 tablespoons of mint jelly. Cover, let stand for a few minutes and then serve. They'll be delicious.

When you're using canned vegetables, drain off the liquid and cook until reduced in half. Then add the vegetable and just heat through. They'll have more flavor in this way.

Don't toss away those large outer stalks of celery. Dice and cook them until tender, then add white sauce. Add a few leftover green peas for color, if desired.

Waxed or yellow beans can be both flavorful and colorful if you add to them some chopped pimiento, lemon juice and melted butter.

Crime in America

By ESTES KEFAUVER
United States Senator

Eighteen of a Series

Smashing the Crime Syndicate

During the crowded final hearings of the Senate Crime Committee—or my chairmanship of it, at least—we pried into a situation which smacked strongly of the roaring '20s.

Such were the workings of a vast bootleg ring which is running whisky from Cairo, Ill., into dry Southern states. This was reminiscent of the bloody prohibition era, when trucks were hijacked, liquor shipments disguised as legal merchandise and public officials corrupted on a wholesale scale. But these new-style rum runners boasted an up-to-date wrinkle: They use counterfeit federal and state liquor stamps

Some of the wholesalers involved, we discovered, had been connected with a huge black market liquor racket in World War II Leading distillers have been appealed to both by a conference of Southern state revenue and alcohol commissioners and by our Senate Committee to take steps to remedy this situation.

We also saw in Washington a new type of gambling witness—42-year-old Sydney Brodson of Milwaukee, who told us he is licensed to practice law in two states. Brodson, polite and soft spoken though almost unbearably cocky at times, is a graduate of two colleges. Some years ago he found he had a talent for picking winners. Letting his law practice slide, he set up a small office, describing himself fictitiously as a "food broker," and went into the full-time business of scientifically wagering on football and basketball games across the nation

He estimated that he placed bets with bookies and other gamblers in about 20 states, waged about $1,000,000 per year and netted approximately $80,000 a year. In seven uninterrupted years of this, he said he has amassed a net worth of approximately $250,000.

The smart young man, however, wasn't smart enough. On the heels of his testimony, the state income assessor in Milwaukee announced that the income Brodson had reported over recent years simply did not add up to what he told the Committee he was worth, and that a thorough investigation would be undertaken.

Certain of the bookmakers who handled Brodson's bets also must have wished he had talked less Law enforcement officers in various cities jotted down names and addresses of the individuals with whom he said he placed bets Before Brodson left the stand, they had located and arrested his betting associates in cities separated by thousands of miles.

I opposed continuance of the Crime Committee I realized, of course, there were facets of interstate crime which could have been explored further I felt, however, that we had done the basic job of exposing, the framework of the nation-wide criminal operations.

The job, I felt, should be continued, but through establishment of a permanent federal crime commission, rather than by a committee of the Senate

But the pressure for continuance was overwhelming—letters were pouring in by the thousands—and I was over-ruled. I was prevailed upon to stay with the committee for a limited time, but I insisted that it should have a new chairman. Sen. Herbert O'Conor of Maryland was chosen to succeed me.

The Committee, under my chairmanship, made some specific recommendations to the senate, aimed at crushing big-time crime once and for all. One proposed that an independent Federal Crime Commission be set up.

A Federal Crime Commission, the Committee majority thought, should be composed of three members, "all of whom are prominent citizens and not otherwise members or employes of the federal government." It would be empowered to hear witnesses and conduct hearings, keeping alive a continuing study of the activities of the national crime syndicate The commission would maintain proper liaison between federal, state and local law enforcement agencies and crime commissions, remommended legislation and other corrective policies and act "as a national clearing house of information respecting criminal activities in interstate commerce."

Among other things, the Committee favored the organization of a racket squad in the Justice Department to go after racketeers and organized criminal mobs, and the setting up of special internal revenue fraud squads. This later step was taken by the Treasury Department after the Committee had noted that organized crimesters were defrauding the government on tax revenue possibly running into hundreds of millions of dollars.

"Money is the key to power in the underworld," we observed "It buys protection for illegitimate enterprises and enables underworld characters to buy up legitimate business and to claim respectability by contributions to worthy causes. The large financial resources at the disposal of criminal gangs and syndicates make such gangs and syndicates a serious menace"

The Internal Revenue Bureau should take effective action to stop the continual violation by racketeers of the laws which require all taxpayers to keep adequate records of their income and expenses. Gambling casinos also outrageously flout internal revenue requirements by their so-called "bookkeeping" methods. They should be required to maintain daily records of moneys won and lost and to file these records with the Bureau.

We felt that the biggest farce and effrontery, in so far as the applications of internal revenue regulations to illegal gamblers is concerned, is he fact that the present law permits gamblers to deduct wagering losses and overhead costs as "business expense." Such deduction often include the hidden bribes paid to law-enforcement officials. The Committee recommended an amendment that would prohibit any sort of tax deduction by illegal enterprises

Another recommendation was passage of a bill completely outlawing the state-to-state sending of gambling by telegraph, telephone or other communication facilities, by an outfit "devoted to a substantial extent to providing information used in illegal gambling." The bill is aimed at the so-called Continental Press Service, which keeps alive a multi-million-dollar industry for the underworld throughout the country.

The present law against interstate transportation of slot machines, we decided, should be extended to include the other gambling devices on which individual racketeers and organized crime syndicates thrive — punchboards, roulette wheels and so forth. We noted that "the lowly punchboard has attained the proportion of a major racketeering enterprise."

We asked that penalties be increased against the illegal distribution and smuggling of narcotics, that immigration laws be amended to facilitate deportation of undesirable aliens, including criminals, and to provide punishment for smuggling, concealing or harboring illegal aliens.

A bill which the Committee recommended is designed to prevent racketeering elements from entering the wholesale liquor industry and to eliminate such elements now entrenched in it. The bill would require liquor distributors to secure yearly renewals of their federal licenses.

On the community level, we encouraged the creation of more state and local crime commissions—which, where they are set up, have achieved effective results—more local rackets investigations by unhampered grand juries, and the clearing up of jurisdictional arguments between local law-enforcement officers, which usually result in the law-breaker escaping all punishment.

The answer to the Costellos and the crooked officers and public officials lie in these recommendations. There will be powerful opposition, not only from the national crime syndicate, whose financial and political resources are powerful. There will be a passive opposition, too, from the natural inertia that operates against any far-reaching program of social reform But, with the help of the people, these bills will provide the ammunition for the war against organized crime in America.

Son-In-Law Charged in Theft of Teeth

NEW YORK, N.Y.—"That's one way to keep her quiet," David Ritchie was quoted as telling detectives.

Ritchie, a 35 year old machinist, was booked recently on a grand larceny charge—accused of stealing his mother-in-law's false teeth—taking them directly from her mouth, while sitting on her to accomplish the feat.

The machinist was arrested on a complaint by Mrs. Mary Wood, the mother-in-law, who claimed she lost her molars during an argument with Ritchie.

The argument was reported to have occurred when Ritchie went to his former apartment to visit his three children, who lived there with his estranged wife and her mother, Mrs. Wood.

Born Again

Lesson for January 27, 1952

IN many places one often hears the expression, "born - again Christians". As a matter of fact, there are no other kinds. If a person is not born again he is not a Christian.

The first birth is of the natural self, the awakening, so to speak, to this natural world. The second birth is of the supernatural self, the awakening to the spiritual world, the beginning of "living unto God." Sometimes this new birth comes very early in life. Dr. Warfield, a very conservative theologian, used to think that the second birth might in some cases actually come before the natural birth. (See Jeremiah 1:5).

Dr. Foreman

A man may become very distinguished, may be a great scholar, and still not have been born again. Nicodemus is a case in point. He was a man who had everything, as the saying is; he was a judge in the Jewish High Court, a man both wealthy and respectable. But he had not been born again.

God Is the Life-Giver

THE English translation of John 3:7 has given many persons the idea that being born again is a duty. Now a duty is something that you ought to do, and that by your own choice you can do if you will. It's up to you. But (taking the teaching of the Bible as a whole) being born again is not a duty. It is the act of God.

What Jesus was saying (as the Greek of John 3 indicates) is that it is necessary, it is indispensable, to be born again. There can be no development, no growth, in the spiritual life unless there is somewhere the beginning of that life. You must have been born once in order to see the sunshine. You must be born again in order to see God.

The seed which we sow in field or garden must have the germ of life in it or it will never grow. But no farmer can give life to lifeless seed. God alone is the life-giver, in the first birth or in the second.

Turn; Follow

SOME people get this far in their thinking and then they become discouraged. "If only God can give life," they think, "what is the use of my trying to obey him? If God takes the first step then all I can do is to wait for him. No matter how much I want to be a Christian in my heart, I may not be able to, for God may not see fit to make it possible for me to do what I want to do." This is a mistaken thought.

John Calvin, as is well known, was a very strong believer in predestination. As pastor of a large church, he had numbers of people in his congregation who heard him talking about predestination, the doctrine that we are in God's hands and that spiritual life can come only as he himself begins it in our souls.

They would ask just about this same question: I want to be a Christian, but how do I know that God has chosen me? I want to be a Christian, but how can I know whether I have been born again? Calvin's answer was a simple one: If you really want to be a Christian in your heart, that is a sign, the very best sign, that you have been born again.

Turn; Follow

IN the Bible, the commands are "Turn"; "Follow"; "Believe"; "Obey". If we have not been born again these commands fall on deaf ears. If they stir our conscience, if they make us respond, then that is a sign we have been born again.

Then can't we tell when we are born again? Certainly we can tell; just by being alive. "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren," said the same apostle who recorded Jesus' conversation with Nicodemus.

We wish very much we knew whether Nicodemus himself was ever born again, but students of the Bible have never agreed on this. And the reason for the uncertainty is that Nicodemus never did come right out.

We know Matthew was born again because he turned his back on his former life and followed Jesus. We know that Nicodemus said some kind things about Jesus. We know that after Jesus was dead, Nicodemus came through with a handsome contribution for the funeral. Was that only late, or was it too late?

Garner Girl Weds Klemme Young Man, January 22

BETTY LOU GRIFFEN BRIDE OF HARLAN CAROLUS

Lighted candelabra and baskets of mixed flowers formed the setting for the wedding at the United Presbyterian Church in Garner on Tuesday evening January 22. Miss Betty Lou Griffen of Garner, who has made her home with Mr. and Mrs. John Schroeder, and Harlan Carolus of Klemme.

Before the ceremony, Miss Charolotte Fiero played nuptial music and accompanied Arnette Ter Hark, cousin of the groom, who sang, "I Love You Truly" and "The Lord's Prayer." The double ring ceremony was read at 8:00 p. m. by the Rev. J. Dallas Gibson.

The bride who was given in marriage by her brother, Cpl. Leon Griffen, wore a satin gown lace trimmed with a full train. Her finger-tip veil was held in place with a bonnet of lace trimmed with pearlized orange blossoms. Her rhinstone necklace and earrings were gifts of the groom. She carried an orchid surrounded by white carnations. Mrs. Eldon Pearson, close friend of the bride, was bridesmaid. She wore a pink gown of net and lace and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations.

Miss Betty Clement in a gown of pink organdy was flower girl and Perry Schroeder, nephew of the bride carried the rings on a white satin pillow.

Leroy Carolus served as bestman for his brother. They wore grey and blue suits respectively and had white carnation boutonnieres. John Schroeder and Morris Nuehring were candle lighters and they with Eldon Pearson were ushers.

The brides sister wore a brown suit with brown accessories and the bridegroom's mother wore a grey suit with beige accessories and both had corsages of pink camellias.

A reception was held in the church parlors following the ceremony Miss Betty Schisel was in charge of the guest book.

The bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom. It was baked by Mrs. Art Abele, aunt of the bride who also baked the wedding cake for the brides mother and for the brides sister.

After Mr and Mrs. Carolus had cut the first piece of wedding cake Mrs. Fred Griffen and Mrs. Morris Nuehring finished the serving.

The waitresses were Miss Beverly Pringnitz, Miss Iola Riemer and Miss Harriet Noble of Garner and Miss Sharon Strait of Belmond.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Josten left Monday for the Twin Cities for a few days to purchase merchandise for their store.

A LETTER FROM LEONARD LAU FORMER KLEMME MAN

613 Hamlin St., N. E.
Washington, 17, D. C.
13 January 1952

Mr. Ray Jorgenson, Editor
The Klemme Times
Klemme, Iowa

Dear Editor:

Through Marie's thoughfulness we are most gratified to be back on the Reader's list of the Klemme Times, after a few years of not hearing anything about Klemme except few personal correspondences.

Now we again keep ourselves better posted of such interesting activities of your fair little town. We never forgot that wonderful town's slogan "Little But Lively." The slogan is so matching.

In many instances we are really surprised to learn of the many persons who were once kids while we lived in Klemme. But they are married and have few kids of their own. Some are drafted to armed services.

At present I am employed at one of the leading store fixture makers in the district and enjoyed making different things as well as them keeping me busy around in the shop. I can't entertain myself when compelled to sit and work all day. I'm telling you the truth that I owe a great deal to Mr. Art Wellemeyer and Mr. Paul Grange for giving me a good start in the industry. Another thing to say about the Northco Shop where I was employed is that it is ranked one of the best equipped shops in the whole country I ever trampled.

For social activities here I assume the presidency of DC Cptr. Gallaudet College Alumni Association, the secretaryship of National Fraternal Society of the Deaf for Washington, D. C., the treasurership of National Literary Society of the Deaf, and the membership of Board of Governors of the D. C. Club of the Deaf. These positions seem to keep me in the whirls when I'm trying to serve our deaf friends here, all at the same time. But I enjoy it.

You may recall that I used to deliver the Des Moines Sunday Register on one of Klemme's routes for a while. Our boy (15) got my blood when he served one of the local dailies. On Sunday mornings I puffed lifting his Sunday papers through several tall apartment buildings. We both agree it is a fascinating experience.

With greetings to all and with best wishes for Prosperity and Happiness, I am

Your Ardent Reader,

In Memory Of Corporal Billie Lewis

The night was stormy, the snow blew bold
The train was late and the temperature cold
In flag bedecked coffin tagged, Mason City
Was a brave young Cpl., oh what a pity

Patiently we stood waiting in the station
For a hero to return from serving our nation
Our thoughts were centered on this citizen young and brave
And we wondered what was accomplished with the life he gave

Who had shaped this man's destiny, Douglas, Dwight, or Harry
We just couldn't help but wonder, was this trip necessary
In this land of the brave and the free
Who had sent this man to die for you and for me

What was the cause and was it just
For man to kill man and return to dust
What future is in store for the young decended
Are they really free, or will life be regimented

These questions above, all needless they be
If only the citizens like you and like me
Could feel the sacrifice of a certain few
Whose freedom was taken and to never renew

May we all pledge to give thought, effort and time
To make life more worthwhile, maybe even sublime
May we never forget the great sacrifice made
And pledge to accomplish with the life that he gave.

THE FARM OUTLOOK

By Paul Henderson,
County Extension Director

Hancock County farmers will find this a good year to make a feed budget. We have a record number of cattle on feed—11% more for the nation as a whole than a year ago. Iowa farmers have 5% more than at the beginning of 1951. The Corn Belt is up 6%.

This means more cattle are coming to market than a year ago. Corn Belt farmers now plan to market about 36% of the cattle on feed January 1 within the first three months of the year. This is more than last year. But the U. S. Department of Agriculture doesn't think the number will be large enough to result in material price weakness.

The magor factor in the meat situation, of course, is consumer demand. And there is every indication that the demand will continue at a high level.

Balance Feed, And Livestock

However, Francis A. Kutish, extension economist at Iowa State College, points out that there are large numbers of cattle on feed. Many of them are being fed on soft corn. A bunching of marketings could result in severe, but temporary, price breaks, Kutish warns.

That's why it is a good idea to make a feed budget. Jot down the feed you have. Figure what you will need to carry out the livestock program now being planned. If the two don't jibe, plan adjustments now. It's important to avoid getting into a situation where you run out of feed and are forced to sell cattle on a temporarily depressed market.

Hog Picture

The ticklist labor situation is preventing much strength in the hog market. Most packers don't want to buy any more hogs than they can handle in a day. They don't want to get caught with a lot of hogs and have their labor force walk out on them. As long as this unsettled labor condition exisits, the market is not likely to rise much.

If the labor situation clears up soon, we might see a limited seasonal hog price rise, Kutish believes. But he doesn't expect it to be as much as usual. Because of the heavier farrowings last summer, February and March hog slaughter this year will be heavier than a year ago. And with packers' coolers loaded with pork, we can soon expect to see widening discounts on heavy hogs, says Kutish.

Next Fall's Market

Don't overemphasize the current feed situation in planning future hog production. A bumper corn crop is possible. The odds highly favor a bigger corn crop than last fall. The acreage will be up. And weather should be better.

A record crop in 1952 would change the feed situation drastically. It would cause many Corn Belt farmers to wish they had more hogs on hand. If we have a large corn crop, the hog-corn ratio will be much more favorable by fall.

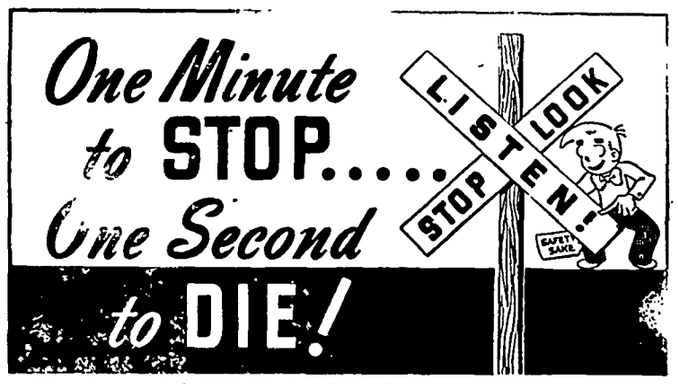
4-H GIRLS LEADERS HOLD MEETING

All the Girls 4-H Clubs in the county were represented at the second 4-H training school held at the C. D. of A. Hall in Garner on Thursday, January 24.

The leaders, 4-H girls, and mothers attending the meeting participated in the discussion on "Dinners that Ring the Bell" & the workshop that was held throughout the day.

The lesson was on cooking meats in dry heat and moist heat, and making desserts. The desserts made were custards, cakes and pie crust.

The leaders will take the information received at the meeting back to the 4-H girls clubs in the county.



This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

NOT MANY PEOPLE DRIVE INTO TRAINS AND LIVE to tell why it happened Perhaps that vacancy of irst-hand information is one of the things that leaves the rest of us with the feeling that motor vehicle train accidents fall in the "impossible" category

Impossible? Fifty-seven Iowans who died at railroad crossings last year didn't find it impossible. In fact, the car-train death is becoming quite probable. This past month, twice as many people were killed in Iowa crossing accidents than in January 1951.

Inattention, disregard for the "neighborhood" crossing, and the closed-in atmosphere of winter driving seem to be major factors in the climbing car-train death rate.

In the way of good advice, your Iowa Safety Congress repeats this recent warning from S. N. Jesperson, chief of the Iowa Highway Patrol:

"When approaching any railroad crossing, slow down. Give yourself time to stop; time to look. Open your car window a crack to give yourself a chance to hear an approaching train."

The second you try to save at a railroad crossing may be the second in which you die.

FLOYD GREIMAN ADVERTISES FARM SALE FEB. 4

Floyd Greiman, who has operated the Chet Moe farm 2 miles east of Garner on Highway 18, will hold a closing out sale on Monday, February 4th. Mr. Greiman has a large ad in this issue of the Times.

He is quitting farming to take over an implement business at Mt. Pleasant, Iowa and will move with his family to that city soon.

A lot of Greiman's machinery is like new, having been purchased new in 1950 and 1951. If you need good machinery it will pay you to go to this sale. Turn to his ad for complete listings.

RABBIT SEASON CLOSES JANUARY 31

The 1952 rabbit season closes at 6:00 p. m., January 31 after what conservation officials have termed the most productive rabbit year since 1939. Best rabbit hunting was in the southern and southwestern third of the state with good rabbit shooting over much of the northern half of the state with high populations in the north-central area. For the first time since 1939 large numbers of cottontail rabbits have been sold commerically & many have found their way into local restaurants and butcher shops.

KLEMME SOLDIER HOME FROM KOREA ON FURLOUGH

S. Sgt. Merle Janssen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Janssen of south of Klemme arrived home last week from Korea to spend a thirty day furlough with his parents and wife.

Sgt. Janssen spent several weeks in a hospital in Japan after being wounded in action in Korea. He had served with the U. S. Army in Korea since March 1951. From Japan he landed at San Francisco, Cal. and from there was sent to El Paso and Dallas, Texas and then on to Fort Sheridan, Ill., from where he entrained home.

He was met at Ames by his parents and wife and is now enjoying a thirty day furlough before being re-assigned to duty. Merle's many friends are glad to see him home and to see that he is improving in health. He made the trip from Japan by ulanse to San Francisco.

WANT ADDRESSES OF KLEMME SOLDIERS OVERSEAS

January 21, 1952
Fulda, Germany.

Dear Friends:

In the last few weeks Iv'e learned that a number of local boys have been either drafted or enlisted into service and sent to this country for duty. How many of them I don't know, but this, I would like to know. How many and the addresses of those that are here, because I would like to visit each of them before I leave here.

Elwyn Etchen and myself have been stationed together here in Fulda for the past thirty three months and we both would like to see anyone who is here from the home town. Unless we have the address of anyone here it is impossible to find them.

I hope you will be able to supply this information in the near future, because Elwyn and myself plan a leave in February and plan to visit anyone we know the where-abouts of.

Thanks, maybe I'll be able to do you a favor some day.

Yours very truly,

GARNER DOWNS CORWITH TO WIN COUNTY TOURNY

Klemme Was Eliminated In First Round By Garner 73-48

Garner stepped into the county basketball championship at Britt Saturday evening by downing runner-up Corwith in a thrilling game 45 to 43. Hayfield took the consolation honors by beating the Britt Eagles 51 to 45

The Klemme Shamrocks lost out in the first encounter to the Garner Cardinals by the score of 73-48, Thursday evening. Crystal Lake, a strong tournament contender lost a thriller to Hayfield, 37-36

On Friday evening Garner handed Hayfield their first defeat in 13 games by setting them back 50 40, while Corwith edged Britt 43-42 and gave them a chance at the championship against Garner on Saturday night.

OPERATION UNITY

Europe Is Weary of Eternal War But Wary of Forming Alliances

By Farnham F. Dudgeon

(Editor's note: This is one of a series of articles prepared by the Editor of Western Newspaper Union while on a reporting trip through Europe and the Near East.)

Weary and wary.

That's a two-word diagnosis of Patient Europe's condition as the war fever mounts, recedes, and climbs again.

These countries are weary of war.

They are wary of alliances that might lead to another war.

Like Americans, these people would like to be left alone to "plow the fields". But unlike Americans, all they need do is look out across their fields, to see the massed forces of the Russian military machine aligned along the Iron Curtain.

In face of such a disheartening picture how has it been possible for the free world to effect any unity whatsoever in its political and military organizations? What force binds century-old nationalistic enemies together?

"Old time religion" is a pretty good answer.

Ike Is the Key

Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, key figure in both the political organization that is the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and its military arm, SHAPE, has been tramping up and down Europe for nine months now with the zeal and much of same spiritual vigor of some of our legendary American evangelists.

In fact, he told us in his European headquarters that he had, indeed, been tagged as "another Billy Sunday". He is willing, he added, to accept the designation because it is his firm conviction that the only way in which the free countries can survive is by creating a unity which is based on a spiritual appeal direct to the hearts of men.

To emphasize this point, General Eisenhower said:

"Military might is the product and not the sum of spiritual strength, economic health and military power. If any factor is reduced to zero, the product of the three becomes zero."

Spark of Hope

Eisenhower's "right-hand", Chief of Staff Gen. Albert M. Gruenther, echoed this same philosophy in his briefings. Lieut. Gen Lauris Norstad, commander of Allied Air Forces Central Europe, told us at his Fontainebleau headquarters, that in the year he had been in Europe he had seen a kindling of "the spark of reviving hope". He believes that the reviving hope is coming from the inspiration Europeans are getting from the feeling of collective security created by the cooperative military and political efforts of the United States. Everywhere in the SHAPE command you find this spirit.

But, of course it takes more than inspiration to mass the forces of the free world. What is the nature of the organization we have in Europe today, and how does it function?

Treaty Is Foundation

Foundation stone of this structure is the North Atlantic Treaty, ratified by the United States Senate in July 1949. In this treaty, the signatory nations agree that an armed attack against one or more of them shall be considered an attack against all. And they pledge themselves to a continuance of self-help and mutual aid for the purpose of developing their individual and joint capacity to resist aggression.

This treaty sets up NATO, which stands for North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Member nations are Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Iceland, Italy, Luxemburg, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, United Kingdom, and United States.

The announced object of the North Atlantic community of nations is to preserve peace through strength—by building up the powers of the free world to a point where no aggressor will be bold enough to strike.

To build up such a power, NATO, of course, had to develop a military force, and at the Brussels conference in December 1950, the members agreed on plans for building this force. The result is the greatest cooperative effort in history to create a joint army in peacetime for the prevention of war.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower was designated supreme commander for the integrated army, and other top positions were filled by officers of the different member nations, who work together as a team.

Headquarters are located near Paris, France, and the command is designated by the initials SHAPE: Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe.

NATO Countries Cooperate

It was at this headquarters that we heard from General Eisenhower and his chief of staff, General Al Gruenther, just what their problems were with regard to the building up of this force, and a summary of some of the solutions which they were using to meet the complicated situations.

All of the countries belonging to NATO are expected to do everything possible to build their own defenses. America's contribution is made through the Mutual Defense Assistance Program—MDAP, which bolsters economical potential and actual military strength with funds, equipment and technical assistance.

These funds and this assistance are not confined to our NATO partners. Other free nations such as Yugoslavia, Turkey, Greece, and Italy share in MDAP programs.

The combined efforts are aimed at building for SHAPE, in the shortest possible time, forces of sufficient strength to deter aggression.

Our strategy then is to attempt to deter aggression with a show of military power. Russia seems to understand that kind of talk. But the big question remaining is whether or not we can build our forces fast enough to create the desired stalemate. A discussion of the problems connected with reaching this objective follows in a subsequent article in this series.

Pilot Lunches at Farm After Near-Miss Crash

SALEM, Ore.—An Air Force pilot, Lt. Clarence Burke, bailed out of his flaming F-51 and then accepted the calm invitation to lunch in a farm home that was almost destroyed by his crashing aircraft.

He parachuted to safety from 3,000 feet and then ran to the spot where the plane crashed. The only damage was done by a wing tip that punched a hole in the roof. The plane exploded in the yard. Mrs. James Jackson calmly invited the lieutenant to lunch—and he accepted.

THE FICTION CORNER

FELIX AND MARY

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

FELIX felt somewhat like the man who said there was no use running after a street car once you'd caught it. Mary Snell, after two years of courtship on Felix's part, had finally given in and said she would marry him. When Mary Snell said "Yes" or "No," she meant "Yes" or "No."

3-Minute Fiction

Felix knew it, too. He knew the battle was won. Mary had said "Yes," and that settled it. Nothing could change her mind.

Mary wanted to set a date for the wedding, but Felix suggested waiting a while. The fact is, he wanted a chance to catch his breath. He wanted, as the story books put it, to have one last fling before becoming a benedict.

So Felix, without saying a word to any one, packed a bag and set off for Cedar Springs. The first Mary knew about it was a letter which she received from the Springs signed by Felix.

In part, the letter said: "I am combining a short business trip with some deep-sea fishing. Please do not worry about me, darling, as I will be home shortly, and we will make plans for the wedding."

Felix did not mention that on the deep-sea fishing trip he had met a party of young folks, including a very attractive red-headed girl named Nan.

In fact, Felix had such a nice time during the next few days that he decided to prolong his visit. Which he did, writing Mary Snell to this effect. Mary replied that she was glad he was having such a good time and getting rested. She, of course, was busy making plans for the wedding. She went on to give the town gossip, including the fact that Paul Strachey was spending a few days in town.

Felix did not mention that he had met an attractive red-head named Nan.

Who, wrote Felix in his next letter, was Paul Strachey?

He could tell by Mary's reply that she was surprised that he didn't know Paul Strachey.

Felix wrote he still didn't know who Paul Strachey was, but wasn't Paul surprised to know that Mary was engaged? He, Felix, incidentally, was spending another week at the Springs, on account, of course, of business.

Mary wrote that she hoped his business wouldn't keep him away too long. The taxpayers had voted to build a new school house, and Paul Strachey was still in town.

Felix replied that he had thought Paul Strachey was only staying a few days, and the weather was not very good at the Springs and he thought he would come home pretty soon.

Mary wrote that she hoped he would come home soon, and Paul Strachey was still in town because he had decided to extend his visit.

THE next day Felix returned to Dalevale.

By the time his train pulled in he had stopped thinking about Nan and was pondering on Strachey

"Oh, Felix!" Mary Snell exclaimed when he phoned. "I'm so glad you've come. I had an appointment with Paul, but I'll cancel it, of course."

Felix immediately rushed over to Mary Snell's house and asked her how plans for the wedding were coming along. Mary hedged.

"Well," she said, "when did you want to get married. Felix?"

Black suspicion leaped into Felix's mind. He controlled himself with an effort. "I was thinking," he remarked casually, "that we might surprise everybody by doing what they don't expect. I mean, let's pop off tonight and get married."

"Tonight!" gasped Mary Snell.

"You mean, you don't want to?' said Felix.

Mary considered. Her face brightened. "All right!" she said. "Let's!"

"Now," said Felix, after the ceremony and they were well on their way to the seashore for a honeymoon, "will you kindly explain about this guy Paul Strachey. Ha! If I hadn't come home I'll bet you would have eloped with him."

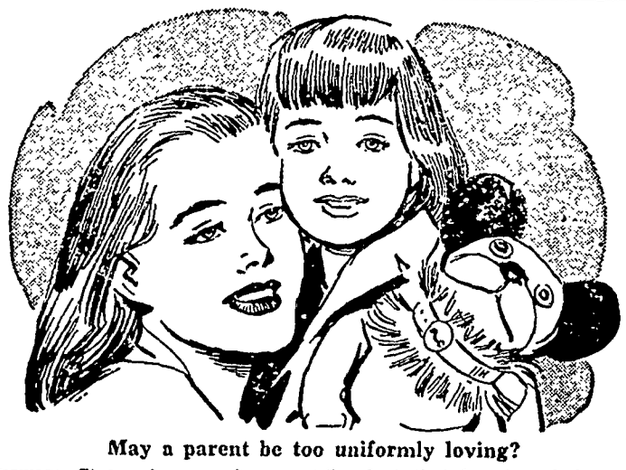
Mary giggled. "Oh, Felix, darling, that was a little joke of mine There really never was a Paul Strachey. I merely wanted to make sure that folks in town weren't disillusioned about me. I mean, when Mary Snell says 'Yes;' she means 'Yes.' See?"

"Life is too short to bear any malice toward Walter Wanger," said Lang of man who reportedly shot him over love of Joan Bennett, Wanger's wife.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

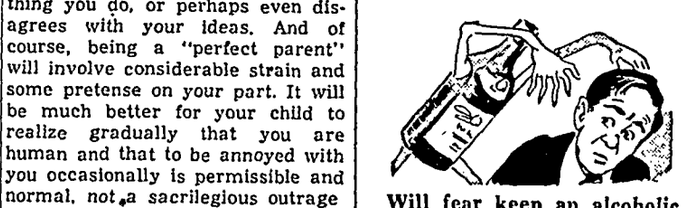
Parents Too Loving

By Lawrence Gould



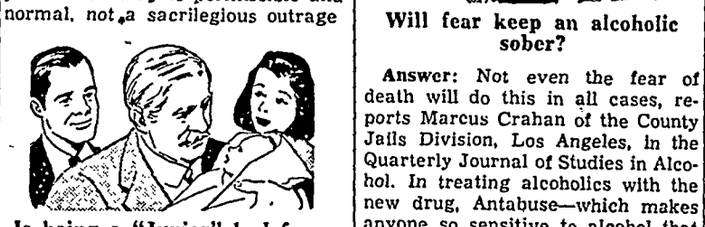
May a parent be too uniformly loving?

Answer: Strangely enough, yes. Since your child's feelings toward you will inevitably be mixed (you cannot give him everything he wants and he cannot help being angry when you say No), if you are invariably kind and loving, he is likely as he grows up to feel he is being disloyal if he resents anything you do, or perhaps even disagrees with your ideas. And of course, being a "perfect parent" will involve considerable strain and some pretense on your part. It will be much better for your child to realize gradually that you are human and that to be annoyed with you occasionally is permissible and normal, not a sacrilegious outrage the fact that bearing their names emphasizes his being the first-born, any oldest child will be to some extent the object of the jealousy of younger children, but will also suffer from the shock of having had to give place to them when they were born. Parents must do what they can to minimize this natural jealousy on both sides.



Will fear keep an alcoholic sober?

Answer: Not even the fear of death will do this in all cases, reports Marcus Crahan of the County Jails Division, Los Angeles, in the Quarterly Journal of Studies in Alcohol. In treating alcoholics with the new drug, Antabuse—which makes anyone so sensitive to alcohol that a single drink produces violent nausea and too many may be fatal—patients are encouraged to try out the results of taking a drink, or when too ill for this, are made to watch others react to a controlled test of alcohol. With many, the object lesson works, but there are others who will go on drinking even after they have been convinced that it may kill them.



Is being a "Junior" bad for a boy?

Answer: That will depend on how much his parents make him feel that it means. I doubt whether merely being named after his father—or even his father and grandfather—would make a boy feel compelled to follow in their footsteps unless other pressures had been brought to bear upon him. As for

GRASSROOTS

Local Government Is as Extravagant as National

By Wright A. Patterson

I WONDER if in your town, wherever it may be, you are experiencing as I am in my town, an ever-increasing tax burden, that is hard to account for. It is an increased burden that comes either in the form of an increased tax rate, an increased valuation on real estate, or a new form of taxes.

I recall the time, not so long ago, when the town gathered up the garbage from the town homes at no cost to the home owners. Then the city officials found they were overlooking a bet. Some other town was charging a special tax for such a service, and a tax of 50 cents a month for each home was added for that service to meet a need for increased revenue. The need has passed, but the tax is still being collected.

The town needed a new well from which to pump the town's water. It needed the money with which to drill such a well. A supposedly temporary water tax was levied for the purpose. The well was long since paid for, but that tax has not been repealed. A town sales tax was added to the state's sales tax, and it is still being collected, though the purpose for which it was levied has passed.

Some years, I feel the county and town assessors, in order to produce the demanded increase, in revenue simply take a selected list and guess at how much increase each will stand without too much of a howl. This year I am sure I was a victim on both lists. With no reason, I was nicked for a material increase on both the county and town tax bills. Because of that, I am howling, but I realize it is voting, not howling that offers the real solution, and at the next county and town elections I, for one, will do the needed voting and register my protest about those tax increases.

We do a lot of complaining about the increased taxes of the federal government, but we do little or nothing about these close-to-home spenders. They are proportionately as bad as Washington. Can we not find those who will find ways to save, as well as ways to spend, or do we try to find them? The tax burden, national, state, county and town has gone far beyond the limit.

If the police would give tickets to the speeding drivers, the fines assessed would help to pay the cost of my home-town government as well as stop the speeding. If the fines collected could go to pay police salaries it might make a difference.

In my town and my county the total of new homes have added heavily to the total of tax valuation, but not enough to satisfy the spenders in both town and county governments.

A few weeks ago I was attending a noon-day luncheon of one of the town's service clubs. The speaker of the day was talking about "Youth Service." He illustrated with a brief story in which a mother of an adolescent son was lecturing him on the need for curbing his activities during his adolescent years. The boy replied by expressing a wish. "Mother," he said, "the one thing I wish for more than anything else, is to get through the adolescent years, and into the years of adultery."

Just at that moment there broke into the room a bevy of high school students, boys and girls of the senior class of the community high school. The girls, all too scantily clad, danced through the room, leaving the imprint of lip stick on the tops of several bald heads, and arrayed themselves on the stage, where they gave that man and boy audience an exhibition of tap dancing and high kicking, much to the edification of both men and boys.

It was an answer to that adolescent boy's wish. We are prone to bewail the delinquency of youth, and then we encourage some of it by such undraped display of the community's daughters as was given at that service club luncheon.

What is there in our high school curriculum that calls for such display? Certainly it is not the teaching of culture or feminine modesty. Whatever it is, it would be well to discontinue the study, and so discontinue the encouragement of at least one form of youth delinquency. Let us get back to grandmother's days and ways.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Some Patients 'Enjoy Poor Health'

By Dr. James W. Barton

PATIENTS and physicians are now realizing that the brain controls the body, but that the body controls the brain at times they are not as willing to admit. As a matter of fact, the brain and body are one and so any part of the brain can affect body reactions and any part of the body can affect the brain and its emotional reactions.

Parents know that at times their youngster may feign illness because he doesn't want to go to school for some reason; at other times when really sick and receiving attention from everybody, he will continue to complain of symptoms after he is completely well. It would seem that many of these children, when grown up, continue to use real or feigned illness as a "defense mechanism" to avoid responsibility.

In New York State Medical Journal, Dr. Alfred Blazer, New York City, states that the commonest neurotic personality of our time uses this defense mechanism as his way of life. Unlike the normal person, he does not meet life in a constructive manner. He holds on to his illness and gets well too slowly or refuses to recognize that he is getting well, because illness is his main asset in coping with people, situations and his attitude toward himself. Such a person is not aware of this weakness.

All overnervous or neurotic, as well as normal persons, want emotional security and satisfaction. If, when young, they have been unable to obtain security and satisfaction in the ordinary or usual ways, they develop methods of obtaining them by "enjoying poor health."

In the treatment of the psychosomatic (mind and emotions controlling body actions), Dr. Blazer states that successful treatment depends upon the relation which the psychiatrist or other physician or technician permits the patient to have with him.

Understanding

Lesson for February 3, 1952

PEOPLE are like books. Some can read them, some can't. You can put a thing down in black and white and still some people will not understand, simply because they can't read. If a person is illiterate it makes no difference how plainly a book is printed or how big the type is or how clear the author's sentences. So a person can be read by some of his neighbors, like a book in plain English; to others who are just as close to him (close, that is, measured by a foot-rule) he might as well be written in Egyptian hieroglyphics for anything they can make out of him.

Strange Dinner Party

TRUE of all men, this was and is true of Jesus. Luke tells of a dinner party where he was a guest, and puts the spotlight on three persons there: Jesus, the host Simon, and an un-named woman.

The woman was not supposed to be there; she just wandered in off the street. Not that she was a stranger, exactly; she was well enough known in the village so that the host knew what sort of woman she was, even if (being a respectable man) he did not know her name.

Like all guests in those days, Jesus had taken off his sandals and was reclining on the couch beside the dinner table. This woman stood behind him and wept. Her tears feel on his bare feet and she wiped them dry with her long hair.

Jesus at first paid no attention, but the host was scandalized. How could Jesus take it so calmly? How could he let such a woman touch him?

The conversation that went on, as Luke reports it, between Jesus and Simon, shows that the poor woman of the street understood Jesus' heart, while the leading citizen, whose house it was, did not understand Jesus at all. One could read Jesus, the other found him a closed book. Why?

A Door Barred

THE MAN could not read Jesus' mind and heart because, for one thing, his own mind was made up as to the kind of person Jesus ought to be He supposed Jesus was the same sort of person as himself—proud, sensitive, careful of his social standing, unwilling to associate with the "lower classes," wanting to be respectable much more than he wanted to be helpful.

In his mind he carried a ready-made pattern of what a "Prophet" ought to be, and so when one who was greater than all the prophets sat at his own dinner table, he could not see him for what he was.

His eyes were blinded, he could not read Jesus, the door to understanding him was closed. He had never learned to read the kind of language which Jesus' life wrote large.

Then there was another reason why this man could not "see" Jesus. It was his own pride, Simon looked down on Jesus so much that he could not even treat him with ordinary politeness.

A Door Open

BUT the woman understood. She did not know all there was to know about Jesus And still she understood the depth of his heart.

The door of his heart opened to her—she could read the clear writing of his spirit. She understood him because she was humble. She did not try to fit him into her pattern; in his presence she knew, as the host Simon did not, that his was the true pattern of life and hers the false. She understood him too because of her love.

And so in spite of the immense difference between them, there flowed the light of understanding, even before a word had been spoken. She could read the bright word FORGIVENESS which to Simon was only a blank.

And So Today

TO this very day, some people can read Jesus while others cannot. And in between are uncounted people who can read him only more or less dimly as through glasses that are not clean, or through the smoke of a city twilight.

But it is still true that pride and prejudice not only keep us from reading the lives of those around us, they keep us from reading the mind of Jesus.

And it is still true that humility and love are the great teachers; they show us how to read the lives of those around us every day, and best of all they teach us how to read the word "Forgiveness" in the mind and heart of Jesus . . . which is the heart of God.

What Happens to Football in 1952?

By GRANTLAND RICE

NOW that all of the bowls have been completed and filled for the year, it seems about time to find out just where football for 1952 is headed.

What about the bowl situation? What about TV? What about scouting and overproselyting? What about spring practice? What about the problem of athletic scholarships in some cases numbering 80 to 150? What about classroom work for football players?

There is no particular rush in overemphasizing the deflation program. We certainly have enough agencies at work, including college presidents and the NCAA.

The college presidents will and should have the final, decisive word, no matter what the NCAA might decide The NCAA is split into too many groups, many of them far apart in their football planning

Grantland Rice

The situation is so badly tangled that little good can be accomplished from any hurried actions which can't be enforced or that would partially wreck the game.

There are sure to be wide divergencies on bowl games, spring practice and athletic scholarships. The Southeast and the Southwest, two powerful conferences, may not stick with many of the others.

I had a long talk with Kenneth Tug Wilson, Big Ten Commissioner The point under discussion was the relationship of the NCAA and the college presidents.

Tug thought the NCAA would follow the recommendations made by college presidents.

The Tower of Babel

We have a feeling that the NCAA and the college presidents will complete a tower of Babel Recently a president of the Southeastern Conference, who is also a college president, came out savagely against all bowl games A few days later most of the other Southeastern presidents voted overwhelmingly for bowl games, more and bigger bowl games.

Now if there is a split in one Conference you can imagine what will happen when rival sections tangle up You may recall what happened to the Sanity Code when it came to NCAA attention. It was completely wrecked, thrown out of the window.

The big crash will come when athletic scholarships come up for a vote. Here the Ivy League and other Conferences are a thousand miles apart. Others are not so far apart, but at least they lack the direct honesty of the Southeast and Southwest who want from 100 to 150 athletic scholarships, where football players are often a group apart from the rest of the college.

I have seen the silver spoon welded to the pewter handle, but I am still waiting to see the NCAA delegates from seven Conferences get blended.

That will be something to see. And even then I won't believe it. We are quite likely to have several breeds of football players, forcing rankings under different playing or paying conditions. There may be the strictly amateur ranking, the subamateur ranking, the semi-pro and the boldly declared pro.

What a pretty dish that will be to set before the football fan! Bowls Ahoy!

Bowls Ahoy!

How many bowls will be operating under Western and Southern skies a year from now—on January 1, 1953?

No one knows, but it is my guess that most of the leading pageants of punt and pass will be doing business at the same old stands.

It is also my guess that bowls and spring practice are not the major evils that affect football. I still think the major evil is this matter of high-priced scouts trailing young stars all over the map and lugging them in with a fervor even the pros can't match. Also while scholarships are a fine and necessary thing, there should be no outright athletic scholarships, or, at least, not so many thousands of them.

Season's Too Long

Football's season runs much too long. Teams are assembled as early as July They play an All-Star game in August And yet they will still be playing around the middle of January with another all-star contest. That's too much.

From July to late January is quite a stretch of time Even the colleges, or many of them, are expanding things quite a bit. Georgia Tech played 11 games this last fall, in addition to a Bowl game.

Certainly nine games are enough for any college player to face, unless they are all pushovers or setups, another form of amusement some college coaches love.

There should acually be no breathers, one who is outclassed, on any college schedule. Not every game should be a championship test but these 81 to 0 or 76 to 7 routs are all out of order.

New Hazard for Dogs Found in Chemicals

It's getting to the place where city dogs just live a dog's life these days.

On top of such routine hazards as speeding motorist and dog impounders, man's best friend now has another problem to contend with.

That's the danger of winter poisoning from toxic chemicals that are used to melt snow and ice from streets and sidewalks.

These chemicals may irritate the dog's paws. Then when the dog licks the irritated areas, it may swallow enough of the chemical to cause a digestive upset.

Effective Cough Syrup, Mixed at Home for Economy

No Cooking. No Work. Real Saving.

Here's an old home mixture your mother probably used, and is still one of the most effective for coughs due to colds. Once tried, you'll swear by it.

Make a syrup with 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup water. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Now put 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This makes a full pint of cough medicine, and gives you about four times as much for your money. It keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

And you'll say it's really excellent for quick action. You can feel it take hold swiftly. It loosens phlegm, soothes irritated membranes, helps clear the air passages. Thus it makes breathing easy and lets you get restful sleep.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its quick action on throat and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if not pleased in every way.

FOR EXTRA CONVENIENCE GET NEW READY-MIXED, READY-TO-USE PINEX!

666 gives fast symptomatic RELIEF

"Hot Flashes" Stopped or strikingly relieved

in 63-80%* of cases in doctors' tests

• If you're miserable from the "hot flashes," and accompanying irritable, restless feelings of "change of life"—you may be suffering unnecessarily!

*For...in tests by doctors...Lydia Pinkham's Compound and Tablets brought relief from such functionally-caused suffering to 63% and 80% (respectively) of the women tested! Complete or striking relief!

Yes! Research has proved these medicines thoroughly modern in action... has shown you where to look for relief from those distressing, nervous, "out of sorts" feelings of mid-life "change"!

So...get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—or new, improved Tablets, with added iron! (Wonderful, too, for the functional pains of menstrual periods.)

It acts through a woman's sympathetic nervous system to relieve distress of those awful "heat waves"!

It's Wonderful the Way Chewing-Gum Laxative Acts Chiefly to REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD

• Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different!

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon... right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes mostly waste, not good food! You avoid that typical "weak, tired, run-down feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self—full of life! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢, or only 10¢.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

I was just driving along. The street was pretty dark. Then I heard a noise and something big flopped on the hood of my car. Then I was looking down at a man dying in the street Then I was running up and down shouting for an ambulance I thought it couldn't be real."

The driver who made this statement after killing a pedestrain couldn't sleep that night or eat the next day. He forced himself to go to the victims home but took along a friend to say the things he knew he wouldn't be able to say He was amazed that the widow had room in her grief for a little sympathy for him

That afternoon he drove to a garage and had the broad dent removed from the hood of his car because he couldn't stand to look at it Two days later he went to the funeral and sat far back in the church and listened to the sermon and heard the rough, irregular sounds of sorrow that came from among the relatives.

He followed the slow group that passed the coffin and gazed at the body for a moment and shook his head as though the dream were lasting too long. "He looked younger," he said "That night in the street I thought he was an old man"

This experience horrified the driver who is a sensitive, thoughtful man. But it is his honest description of his state of mind one month later that is interesting.

"I don't feel guilty anymore and I think it's because I didn't know the man. I'd never seen him before and I didn't know his friends. There was nothing to make me miss him from my own life Awful as that night was, I've begun to forget it I wonder what's made us all such strangers that I could feel like this?"

A COMPARISON OF WHAT HAS HAPPENED TO SERVICE COSTS AND TAXES PER AVERAGE TELEPHONE SUBSCRIBER

	1940	1951	% Increase
Company Taxes	$ 3.12	$10.58	239%
Taxes You Paid	$ 2.97	$12.39	314%
You Paid for Service	$20.41	$37.12	82%

WHEN YOU WONDER why your telephone bills have increased, you probably haven't stopped to consider the most important item . . . TAXES. The figures above show that taxes are indeed a big factor on your "phone" bill.

Our "Cost of Living" has Soared, Too.

The price you pay for good telephone service is based on the cost of providing it ... and the major items of cost are wages, materials and taxes. In the same ten year period that the taxes went up so high, the cost of wire has gone up 129%, crossarms up 208% and poles up 103%. In addition, the company has raised its employees wages 82%. You can see, that like everyone else, we have been caught in the dangerous surge of inflation that threatens us all. And like all other businesses, we have been forced to pass some of these increases to those we serve... or close our doors.

EVERY COMMUNITY SERVED WILL GET IMPROVED SERVICE

A high quality of service is what each customer wants and expects from his telephone company. To assure you of this type of service, Central Iowa has invested large sums of money in plant modernization and expansion. During the past ten years the Central Iowa Telephone Company has invested $2,822,428 in an effort to give you the best possible service, both now and in the future.

Lowly Earthworm Actually Some Sharp Character

FRANKFORT, Ky — You don't have to be too close an observer to know that, as far as the earthworm family is concerned, spring has been around for some time.

This might not sound too interesting unless you are a zoologist, but, in bare truth, no one but the zoologist knows what an interesting specimen Mr. Crawler really is. In fact, he is almost phenomenal.

Zoologists, who know more about the worm than anybody—except, maybe a few fishermen, are becoming more and more confused about the fellow as time goes by. For instance, there are around 1,000 classified species. Size ranges from a bare fraction of an inch to the Australian jumbo special variety that has been known to measure five feet.

Individually the little earthworm is not too important. He grows into adulthood in a period of less than six months and goes about in a century-old manner, eating dirt—or rather seeking the organic matter found in the dirt by taking it into the digestive system and seemingly just boring himself around the earth.

It is through group effort that the worms really make their contribution to civilization. Crawlers, like humans, like to gather in rich areas. In an acre of good soil there might be nearly a million earthworms. As the busy worms go about their usual procedure of taking in dirt to obtain the organic matter therein, their burrows offer the soil room to breathe and also provide drainage for rain. They might be called underground tillers of the soil for they contribute heavily to pre servation of the good earth and the creation of new soil.

And just why are there so many worms? It's simple. Crawlers are hermaphroditic. Every earthworm is both a male and a female, although two worms are needed to produce an offspring.

After fertilization both worms return to their life of eating dirt and later give offsprings. One mating is believed sufficient for a worm's lifetime and is said to produce several groups of young.

In case you have never been able to decide, the earthworm does have two ends. The head is the slim, tapered end and the tail is, of course, the other end.

Although he is equipped with a special reproductive ability, you can kill Mr. Crawler by cutting him into. A full grown worm is made up of little rings or segments, from 100 to 150 in number. If less than 15 rings are whacked off from the tail, the reproductive organism furnishes a new tail and the worm goes about his business. If part of the head is clipped, the reproductive organism still functions, but the part produced is always a tail and the worm eventually dies from starvation, having no way to feed. Whack more than 15 rings from either end and Mr. Crawler is definitely a gone gosling, for part of the reproductive system is lost.

The sometimes quoted belief that it "rains" the worms found on the ground after showers is an untruth. The rain swells the earth and cuts off the oxygen supply and the earthworms simply come up for air. Which is probably what he would like very much to do when he finds himself attached to some angler's hook and several feet under water

Hollywood's Favorite Chimp Victim of Compound Fire

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif.—One of Hollywood's engaging comics, and consistent scene stealer, Tamba, a five year old performing chimpanzee, is dead.

A veteran of scores of movies and television shows, Tamba performed in many pictures. His latest film was "Bedtime for Bonzo."

The chimp was suffocated along with three other apes and a baby kangaroo when fire broke out in the chimp house of the World Jungle Compound, filling the cages with smoke.

Tamba, alias Bonzo, Pierre, Jo Jo and Rollo, understood more than 1,000 words and 500 commands. His salary was $500 a week.

He recently double crossed his press agent by flunking an intelligence test, but psychologists credited him with the intelligence of a three year old child.

Speaker Rayburn Surpasses Record Set by Henry Clay

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Sam Rayburn of Texas has served the longest tenure as speaker of the house, surpassing the record of Henry Clay.

Rayburn assumed the post on Sept. 16, 1940, filling a vacancy created by the death of William B. Bankhead of Alabama. His service was interrupted during the Republican controlled 80th congress in 1947-48.

Congressional library statisticians have figured that Clay served a total of 3,056½ days between 1811 and 1825.

Rayburn has also exceeded the eight year record as speaker chalked up by Joseph G. (Uncle Joe) Cannon of Illinois, 1903 to 1911; and Champ Clark of Missouri, 1911 to 1919.

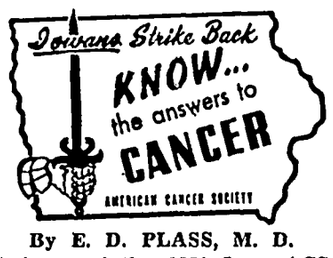
Reporter Dorothy Lacey



By E. D. PLASS, M. D.
(winner of the 1951 Iowa ACS bronze metal for his outstanding contributions to cancer control.)

How long will an untreated cancer patient live

There is no general rule; survival depends on the type of tumor and its location, and to some extent on the age and condition of the host. In fact, it is asserted that certain forms of cancer may rarely undergo spontaneous cure. Such an event, however, constitutes a medical curiosity and invariably raises the question of the correctness of the orginal diagnosis.

A recent case report cited a young man who died from Hodgkin's Disease (one of the blood cancers) fifteen days after the first manifetation of clinical symptoms. On the other hand, certain cancers of the skin may be so slow growing that those afflicted die many years after their appearence from some unrelated condition. Between these two extremes lie the vast majority of malignant tumors which cause death within two to five years after appearance of the first symptom unless they are adequately treated with surgery or radiation.

Generally cancers grow more quickly in younger individuals in whom the growth impulse is stronger than in the elderly whose metabolic function have all been slowed by age. It is also generally agreed that pregnancy, a period of rapid fetal and maternal tissue growth, favors the more speedy growth of malignant growths. Just what factors are responsible for these variations is not known. It is the object of many research problems now in progress to determine the nature of the stimulating or depressing substances in the hope that such knowledge may be translated into effective therapeutic measures that will eventually end the need for surgery or radiation.

JAIL

For tying his twin sons in bed, Carl Rogers of Iowa Falls received a 30 day jail sentence. He said he tied the boys because they kicked off the bed covers.

DIES

A Christmas fire took the life of Arthur Lindsey, Kossuth county farmer, in his hotel room and found that Mr. Llinsey dead of suffocation.

ON THE JOB

91 year old Mary Hunderdeese, of Newbern, is still on the job there as telephone exchange operator She was 37 when she first took the job.

JUMPED

An Eldora high school student, Leon Dougherty, saved himself from becoming one of Iowa's 1951 traffic fatalities recently. When his car stalled on the railroad tracks, Leon jumped out just before a freight train hit the automobile

WAS 103

At Decorah Mrs Emily Stortz, the city's oldest resident, recently observed her 103rd birthday Mrs Stortz, now a partial invalid, came to the Winneshiek county 93 years ago. At Bagley, John Patterson has also joined the "century" ranks observing his 100th birthday December 23. He came to Bagley in 1899.

WAS 99

Iowa lost an old resident last month, in the death of Mrs E. H. Bates of Clear Lake She was 99 years of age, and would have observed her 100th birthday in May. Mrs. Bates had been a resident of Clear Lake for 81 years.

WRONG MAN

When an eccentric passenger tangled with taxicab driver Ralph Brown, at Grinnell, he picked the wrong man Brown, a former combat marine in Korea, after being struck on the head, quickly subdued his assailant and turned him over to the police

72 YEARS

At Winterset, Mr and Mrs. Steve Parkins recently observed their 72nd wedding anniversary Folks there think that must be somewhat of a record. Mr Parkins is 94, his wife 92 years of age. They were married in 1880, in Winterset.

ICE UP

Some pigeons at Sioux Center recently found they needed deicing equipment. After roosting on the town water tower, the birds became encased in the ice that dripped from the tower and about 22 of the birds plumped to the ground when they tried to fly the next morning.

DEATH

When Clyde Salven, 43, of Newell was killed in an automobile crash Dec. 30, nearly every bone in his body was broken when he was thrown out of the car, which then turned over on him. Mr. Salven was one of the last of the 618 persons killed in Iowa on the highways last year.

RETIRES

When Luvern Swift, rural mail carrier, made his rounds at Akron on December 31st, he had reached the retirement point after over 42 years of service as a carrier out of the Akron post-office.

BOUNTIES

Fox bounties in Monroe Co. totaled $512 in the last six months of 1951. County Auditor McCollum, who pays out the bounties, almost added one more fox to the list when it chased a rabbit into the path of his car. The incident proved fatal only to the rabbit, on which there is no bounty.

WATCH PARTY

At Rockwell City, old-timer Mrs. J. T. McComb recently observed that she attended a watch party on Saturday night, December 31, 1899, to watch the turn of the day, week, year and century. And she hasn't been to one since.

Scientist Creates 'Fog' With Aid of Ping Pong Ball

A Cornell psychologist has succeeded in creating a fog with a ping-pong ball

Conducted for the U S. air force, the experiment is designed to test a theory of depth perception new to psychology.

Many psychologists believe that man's ability to see a three-dimensional world is due to a process which is the brain's duty, rather than the eye's. Dr. James J. Gibson, professor of psychology at Cornell, holds another theory—that this kind of perception can be explained in terms of images on the retina of the eye.

Dr. Gibson maintains that texture is the most important property of a surface In fact, he is trying to find out whether a surface without texture can be seen at all.

The ping-pong ball "fog", conceived at Cornell by Dr. Julian E. Hochberg and an assistant, Gideon Seaman, is being used to create a world without any surfaces.

Dr. Gibson has constructed a pair of goggles from the two halves of a ping pong ball. When a subject, wearing the goggles, is placed in a specially-lighted perception room, he can see brightness or darkness but he can't see any surfaces, because the celluloid is so close to his eyes that he can't make out its texture. Because of the absence of texture, he has the sensation of being enveloped in a fog. By this means the Cornell scientist can study what we see when we can't make out surfaces.

Cooperative, Democratic Teachers Most Admired

The nation's school children have their own ideas of what it takes to make an effective teacher And the youngsters' ratings of their teachers are apt to be much different from the ratings of school supervisors and superintendents

This is the opinion of Dr. Paul A. Witty, Northwestern university professor of education, who analyzed approximately 90,000 letters from American school-age youngsters. The letters on the subject, "The Teacher Who Helped Me Most," were written to the Quiz Kids radio program.

Prof. Witty found that the teachers most admired by the first to twelfth grade pupils were those with a "cooperative, democratic attitude."

In one of the letters describing her favorite teacher, one school child said: "Our class is just like one big happy family; I am not afraid of school any more." Another youngster wrote: "She made me feel good and comfortable at school—just like you were home in your living room"

Other teachers who ranked high with their students, according to Prof. Witty, were those who had such qualities as "kindliness and consideration for the individual," "patience," "wide interests," "pleasing personal appearance and manner," "fairness and impartiality," "sense of humor," and "good disposition and consistent behavior."

In Grandma's Day

When grandma kept house some half century ago she and the maid worked hard from the time the sun came up in the east until it set in the distant west. In those gay 90's there was an old saying that a housewife's work was never done. That epitomized the fact that in those days housework was something of real drudgery There were no labor saving devices which the housewife and maid enjoy today These modern conveniences are the electrical harnessed servants that do the work in minutes that in the long ago required hours.

Venezuelan Ore Development

The U S. ambassador to Venezuela said at a recent press conference in Caracas that 'there was prosperity and peace in Venezuela" He added that the country was progressing, supported by the petroleum industry and by the recent development of the iron ore fields It is estimated that Bethlehem and U. S. Steel corporations have invested one hundred fifty million dollars in the development of this industry.

Boost Steel Output

Five western steel producing states made 5.3 per cent of the nation's raw steel in 1948 compared with 2.5 per cent ten years earlier. The tonnage output of these states west of Missouri increased nearly fivefold during the same period Steelmaking furances in California produced 2,013,800 tons in 1948, exceeding the record of the prevous year by 12.3 per cent. Colorado, Utah, Washington and Oregon combined to exceed their 1947 peak output by nearly 5 per cent.

U.K. Hydroelectric Plant

Lock Sloy—a mountain lake 800 feet above sea level and about two miles northwest of Loch Lomond—is the site of the largest hydroelectric development in the United Kingdom. It is the first of 29 such Highland projects to be completed. After centuries of oil lamps, coal and peat heat, Highland homes are now beginning to enjoy the luxury of electricity.

192 DEER KILLED IN 1951

Tabulation of deer cards compiled by state conservation officers show that during 1951 a total of 192 deer were killed in 56 Iowa counties, compared to more than 350 during the same period in 1950. The largest number were killed by automobiles and trucks and totaled 122; 37 were known to have been illegally killed by hunters, 8 by dogs, and 25 in miscellaneous accidents. Pottawattamie County again led in total number killed with 19, followed by 15 in Woodbury, 12 in Plymouth and 11 in Allamakee.

The largest number of deer killed in any one month was 51 in November at the peak of the rutting season. Thirty were killed in December and 19 in October. Illegal hunting accounted for 16 in December and 7 in both November and January.

There is a permenatly closed season on deer in Iowa, but in recent years the population has increased until unofficial estimates reach as high as 15,000. Conservation officials believe that the deer herd in the state is increasing more than one-third and that legal control measures must be adopted in the near future.

DISPLACED

To become residents of Iowa Falls in the U. S. A. was a Christmas present for the Felix Kroeger family, displaced Latvians. The family arrived in the Iowa city on Christmas eve and will reside there.

School News

FIRST GRADE NEWS

We haven't accomplished too much this week because of snow vacation two days this week.

Our teacher was ill Monday and we want to thank Mrs. Art Wille for substituting.

Kathleen Koerner has been absent this week. She and her parents are taking trip to the Gulf of Mexico.

Our room helpers were Natalie Thompson and Virgina Blanchet.

—Mrs. Brinkman

SECOND GRADE NEWS

Billy Renner has been absent the past two days. We hope he will be well enough to come back to school soon.

The following second grade pupils have a perfect score in spelling for the week. Terry Lassahn, Clarice Arnold, Billy Clabaugh, Franklin Neuberger, Joyce Hummel, Leland Barz, Jimmy Clements, Billy Hubbard, Judy Swanson, Janet Murray, Junior Baack, Dickie Green, Keith Christians, Douglas Medin, Karen White, Johnny Juhl, Larry Johnson, Jimmy Bock and James Christians.

Through an error the following names were ommitted from the list of those having perfect spelling scores last week: Jimmy Clements, Dennis Fuller, Inez Neuhring and Judy Swanson. We are sorry we missed them and are happy that we can report their perfect scores.

—Mrs. Proper

THIRD GRADE NEWS

Marcelle Bachman had a birthday Monday and treated us to candy bars. We didn't have much time to play because the school buses came early.

Our teacher has been reading us a good book in the mornings. It is "Henry Huggins" and tells the troubles of a third grade boy has during a year. We enjoy it very much.

Friday we had 10 perfect spelling papers. We had fewer days to study our lessons which accounts for fewer perfect papers.

—Mrs. Barkema

FOURTH GRADE NEWS

Lowell's mother, Mrs. Eugene Greiman was a visitor in our room Monday afternoon.

Jane Renner celebrated her birthday Friday, by treating the class to candy bars.

Only seven people had perfect scores in spelling this week. They were: Donald Anderson, Sharon Blau, Candace Carlson, Sherryle Clabaugh, Lowell Greiman, Jo Anne Jacobs and Craig Wilson.

Last Friday we decided to have a contest for the best homemade valentine. Everyone in our class is to enter a valentine, that he or she made at home, on February 14. There will be prizes given for the three best ones. We discussed this plan early in order to give everyone a chance to think of a clever idea.

U-Delt-Em Club Met

The U-Delt-Em Club met at the home of Mrs. George Lawhorn Thursday afternoon, with all members present. Mrs. Kudje won high and Mrs. Arnold second high. A lovely lunch was served.

Mr and Mrs. Lloyd Lau entertained to dinner Sunday evening the following: Mr. and Mrs. Carl Swanson of Britt; Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Behrens and Mr. and Mrs. Will Hoeft of Garner.

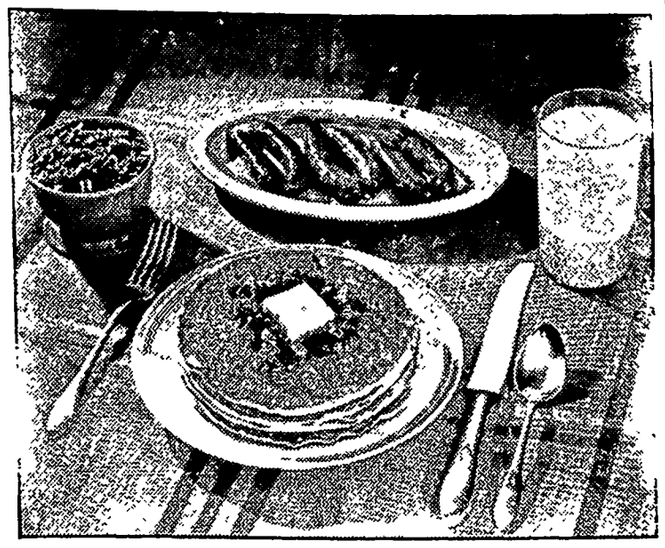
Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Montgomery Bud, Carole Ann and Miss La Von Franken spent Sunday afternoon at the Clarence Bachman farm.

Floyd Friedow & Sons will hold their annual bred sow and gilt sale on February 16th. Mr. Friedow was at the Times office Tuesday making arrangements for the printing of his catalogs.

Deadline February 1 For Auto Plates

Iowa motorists were warned Friday that February 1 is the deadline for purchasing 1952 license plates. Following that date penalities are assessed. Auto licenses may be purchased from the county treasurer's office.

SOUTHERN BUTTERED PANCAKES



If you really want to get the family up in the morning just announce golden-butter pancakes served with a southern topping—and watch them hurry to the table. The tender golden "flapjacks" have a flavor all their own when topped with plenty of butter, brown sugar and pecans. The heat from the pancakes melts the butter and brown sugar to give a delicious butterscotch flavor.

The brown sugar will melt more readily if sprinkled on the pancakes as they are taken from the griddle. The butter may be melted and served from a small pitcher One taste of these pancakes and you will be convinced they are perfect for breakfast, luncheon or informal evening suppers.

3 cups all-purpose flour; 3 teaspoons baking powder; 1 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons sugar; 3 eggs, separated; 3 cups milk; ½ cup butter, melted; brown sugar and chopped pecans.

Sift flour, measure; sift twice with baking powder and salt. Beat egg yolks, add milk and melted butter. Add flour all at once; beat until batter is smooth. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into batter thoroughly. Bake on a moderately hot, buttered griddle, using a scant ¼ cup for each cake. Bake until golden brown on under side; then turn and bake until browned on second side. Turn only once. Serve hot with butter and sprinkle with a mixture of brown sugar and chopped pecans. Makes 3 dozen 4-inch pancakes.

Check Erysipelas By Vaccinating Swine

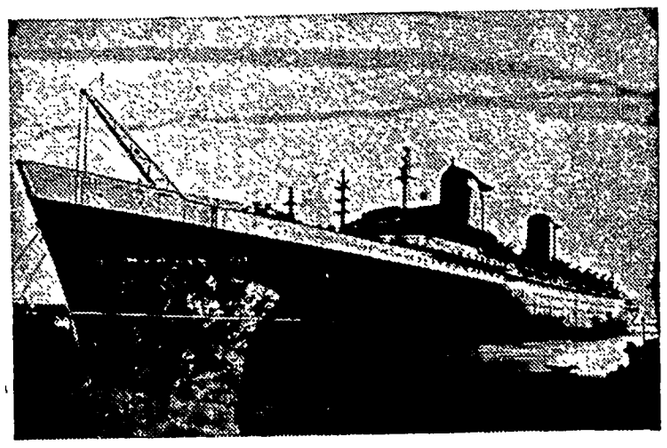
An effective immunization program could give most swine producers the protection they are looking for from erysipelas, the most unpredictable hog disease, says Dr. Maynard Spear, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College This disease can be controlled largely through vaccination and sanitation.

Serum alone will give protection for only a short time while a combination of serum and culture, given simultaneously, will give protection for a longer period of time Since the culture is a live organism and infects humans, only veterinarians may administer it, Dr Spear said

The disease shows itself in many ways with symptoms varying from farm to farm. Most farmers can recognize the swollen joints & unthrifty pigs as probable symptoms of erysipelas However, in the acute types, pigs may die suddenly, somewhat as they do with hog cholera.

With three diseases transmissible gastro-enterits, infectious rhinitis and erysipelas— facing swine producers this coming year, Dr. Spear believes that at least erysipelas can be held down through proper control measures.

Seagoing Beauty is Groomed for Debut



The giant liner United States, largest and fastest passenger ship ever built in this country, looms large against the winter sky at her outfitting dock in the Newport News (Va.) Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Company yard. This new superliner will join the America, present flagship of the United States Lines, in transatlantic service. The new vessel is now 85% completed, with interior installations well under way, and is scheduled to make her maiden voyage from New York to Southampton and Havre early next summer. Her peacetime capacity will be 2,000 passengers and a crew of 1,000, although in wartime she could carry a complete division of 14,000 men a distance of 10,000 miles without stopping for fuel, water or food.

NATIONAL V. F. W. WEEK JANUARY 24-31, 1952

National V. F. W. Week is being observed throughout the U. S. from January 24-31. Edwin Jante Post 5515 is extending its efforts with the State and National to better acquaint the public with the aims and purposes of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, as an organization dedicatedto the national welfare—and the welfare of America's disabled veterans and their dependents.

The V F W organization has doubled and redoubled its efforts and are proud to say that they have a top notch record in securing the needs and claims for its veterans. No claim or need too large or small for the V. F. W. department to handle Hospitalization, care for dependents, earned bonuses, insurance claims and many other services are every day services rendered by the V. F. W

The local post invites the community to participate in its recent service adoption. An envelope rack has been compiled with addressed envelopes to veterans overseas and placed on the wall at Hull's Dining Room. We have contacted the homes of the veterans for the latest addresses in each case. Some of the addresses may change from time to time and more service men may be going overseas as well as those that return. If anyone knows of the change of address in any case or of a serviceman going overseas please leave that address with Hull's Cafe or Dr. Voetberg so that we may keep our rack as accurately as possible at all times. The local Post invites the public and all Club organizations that may happen by this envelope rack to help yourself and as our slogan is, "Let's Write to a Buddy Tonight." Those letters are few and far between on the Korean Front and we feel sure that the future correspondence with the boys on the front will make each and eyeryone of us happy to make them a little extra happy. Do it now—"Let's Write to a Buddy Tonight,"

E. F Bock and Ray Jorgenson, Jr. of Garner were in Klemme on business Tuesday morning.

Steel For County Hospital

Erwin L. Buck, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Hancock Memorial Hospital at Britt advises that on the week end he received from the federal government an allocation for steel and other scarse materials that will go into the construction of the hospital. Mr. Buck has been in touch with Architect Charles Altfillisch and expects that within a week he will know when contracts can be let.

KATHLEEN NORRIS' Dishwater Ache

"I'M A VICTIM of what I call dishwater ache," writes Penny Vickars, from Uniontown, Pa. "I think lots of American housewives have it, and I want to know if there's a cure. Let me tell you of myself, because I've an idea I'm typical.

"I worked in a nursery apron factory before I was married, 12 years ago. Johnny wanted a family, and a family we have, three lovely girls, whose ages now are 10, 9, and 5. We wanted Pamela, the youngest girl, to be a boy before we saw her, and then we wanted Pam. Pam is now in school, and the other girls are helpful and normal and a great delight.

Every Day Tasks

"You know what I do every day. I make beds for people to muss up in a few hours, I clean bathrooms so that they can be strewn with soapsuds and wet towels again, I sweep floors to make room for more dust and scraps, I go to market to buy supplies that only last a few days, and I wash dishes that aren't cold before I have to lift them off the shelves for the next meal. I have a group of Scouts, we belong to a country club, and in our eight-room house, which we own, is every convenience and luxury that we Americans take for granted.

"My dishwater ache is because I know I can do better than this. My apron designs are still on the market; my color patterns are still framed in one of the offices. They want me back, at a good weekly salary, but truly it isn't the money. It's the chance for self-expression, even if only through nursery aprons! I don't want to go to Hollywood, or into the legislature, I'm not television material. But I want to hold my own in the business world, and while cotton clothes for children may not sound thrilling, my working at it may free some other women for the nursing or teaching they say we need so much.

". . . I can do better . . ."

"Johnny won't hear of it. To employ my loved old Mandy regularly, instead of one day a week, would mean a well-managed home. The older girls would take on Pam until I got home at half-past four. And I would have all the thrill of really working again. But my dear kind Johnny disapproves.

"What is your solution? You must have had this problem presented to you before."

Indeed I have, Penny. You are quite right in thinking that dishwater ache is a common disease. But there are two ways of putting this question, and yours is the rational, reasonable, and even highly desirable way. Many a Johnny would be relieved of his most pressing anxiety, many a Johnny's life would actually be prolonged, if he could feel that the woman at home could take care of herself and the children should he die or be incapacitated Johnny doesn't know how lucky he is!

Failures

The women I advise to stay at home are the failures. They are the women who can't run the affairs of five rooms and one child and one man with any success, and yet who feel that they are quite capable of sensational exploits in the field of movies, art, letters—anything that gets their names and pictures into the magazines and papers.

Not long ago a pretty, restless, discontented woman did get her name into the papers. She won a dance contest in a rather low type of roadhouse and afterward went home with the man—up to that evening a stranger to her—with whom she had danced.

The police and the man's wife brought charges against the pair the next day, charges that included drug taking, drug peddling, reckless driving, car stealing, drunken driving, infidelity, and, in her case, criminal neglect of children and manslaughter. She had her moment of fame—of a sort. Her three small girls, aged 6, 4 and a few months, were in a damp basement room; she said the only place for which she had a key. The older child was feeding raw vegetables to the younger; the baby had found eternal peace.

Once a pretty, lively woman, with a hard-working engineer husband now in Japan, she explained that she wanted a movie contract as a dancer, and had always hated housework and children. She also pleaded poverty, but it was proved that her husband's pay ran well over $400 a month and she got most of it, and got affectionate letters from him too—and perhaps the saddest note of the whole sordid story was the four-year-old's tearful cry of "Mother!" when the sodden parent went with the officers to the cold bleak home.

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS WASTE

When kidney function slows down, many folks complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Don't suffer longer with these discomforts if reduced kidney function is getting you down—due to such common causes as stress and strain, over-exertion or exposure to cold. Minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or wrong diet may cause getting up nights or frequent passages.

Don't neglect your kidneys if these conditions bother you. Try Doan's Pills—a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While often otherwise caused, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief from these discomforts—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

Spiced Pastry Makes Delicious Tarts
(See Recipes Below)

WHETHER YOU MAKE individual tarts or a single pie to serve several people, you know that pastry makes a special kind of dessert, bound to be pleasing to anyone.

The crust should be melt-in-your-mouth tender, of course, and it might be lightly spiced for added appeal. The filling, whether a custard type, fruit or berries, delicious to taste, smooth as satin on the tongue.

For a heavier dinner, try one of the tart fillings like lemon to give the meal proper contrast. For lighter dinners, the rich custard fillings fill the dessert role perfectly.

At your next luncheon or dinner party, something new in the way of pastry would be spiced pastry for the tart shells and a lemon filling, swirled with peaks of meringue.

Lemon Meringue Tartlets
(Makes 4)

Spiced Pastry:
- 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- ½ teaspoon baking soda
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- ¼ teaspoon ginger
- ¼ teaspoon cloves
- ⅔ cup shortening
- 1 tablespoon vinegar
- 3 tablespoons orange or citrus juice

Sift dry ingredients together. Cut in shortening. Mix together vinegar and fruit juice and add to dry ingredients. Mix lightly with a fork. Roll dough ⅛ inch thick into four rounds. Line 5-inch pie pans, making a fluted edge. Prick shells well. Bake in hot oven (425°F.) 10 to 12 minutes.

Lemon Filling and Meringue:
- 1 package lemon pudding
- 3 egg whites
- Pinch of salt
- Pinch of cream of tartar
- ½ cup sugar

Prepare 1 package lemon pudding as directed on box. Cool slightly and pour into baked pastry shells. Beat 3 egg whites until foamy. Add pinch of salt and pinch of cream of tartar. Beat until stiff but not dry. Gradually beat in ½ cup sugar. Continue beating until stiff and glassy. Spread over filling. Bake in hot oven (425°F.) 5 to 7 minutes or until lightly browned.

Rich Lemon Tarts
(Makes 5)

- 5 baked tart shells, 2 inches in diameter
- ½ cup butter
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 whole eggs
- 2 egg yolks
- ½ cup lemon juice

Melt butter. Stir in sugar. Beat whole eggs and yolks well and add to butter-sugar mixture. Stir in lemon juice. Stirring constantly, cook until thickened. Let cool. Spoon into tart shells. If desired, garnish with whipped cream or lightly browned swirls of meringue.

Peaches and Cream Pie
(Serves 6-8)

- 1 baked 8-inch pie shell
- 2 packages frozen peaches
- 1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
- 2 tablespoons cold water
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- ½ cup sugar
- ½ cup heavy cream, whipped

Place peaches, in packages, in warm water to thaw (about 45 minutes). Soften gelatin in cold water. Drain peaches and measure 1 cup juice. Heat peach and lemon juice to boiling. Add softened gelatin and stir until dissolved. Add sugar. Force peaches through colander. Add to juices. Place in refrigerator to chill. When partially set, fold in whipped cream. Pour into baked pie shell. Place in refrigerator until set (about 2 hours). If desired, flute edge with whipped cream.

Apple Crumb Pie
(Serves 6)

- 6 tart apples, peeled and sliced
- 2 tablespoons butter, melted
- ¾ cup sugar
- ½ teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 unbaked 9-inch pie shell
- ½ cup brown sugar firmly packed
- ¼ cup all-purpose flour
- ¼ cup butter or substitute
- ½ cup chopped nuts

Mix apples with butter, then with sugar mixed with nutmeg, cinnamon and salt. Arrange evenly in pie shell. Combine brown sugar and flour; cut in butter and add nuts. Sprinkle this mixture evenly over the apples. Bake in a moderate (350°F.) oven for 50 minutes or until apples are tender. Serve warm or cold with the following custard sauce: beat 2 eggs slightly, then add ¼ cup sugar and ¼ teaspoon salt; mix well. Add 1 pint of scalded milk gradually while stirring constantly. Cook over low heat or in double boiler until mixture coats spoon. Cool and blend in ½ teaspoon vanilla or a few grains of nutmeg.

Cottage Cheese Apricot Pie
(Makes 1 9-inch pie)

- 1 unbaked 9-inch pie shell
- 1 cup dried apricots
- 2 eggs, beaten
- ¾ cup sugar
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1½ cups creamed cottage cheese (12 ounces)
- ½ cup milk
- ½ cup cream
- Cinnamon

The pie crust should be rolled thin, less than ⅛-inch thick. Trim and flute. Wash apricots well and dry thoroughly. Cut apricots in small pieces and spread over bottom of crust. Combine eggs, sugar and salt; beat until well blended and foamy. Add cottage cheese, milk and cream and stir until well mixed. Pour this mixture over apricots and sprinkle the top with cinnamon. Bake in a hot (450°F.) oven for 10 minutes, then turn oven down to slow (370°F.) for an hour.

LYNN SAYS:

Add Flavor Contrast To Your Menus Daily

Spanish rice makes an excellent cold weather supper dish, but it can be enhanced with the addition of bulk pork sausage blended with the rice. Serve spinach as a vegetable, apple-raisin salad and fruit and cookies.

What does one serve with chili for a well-balanced meal? Vienna bread, warmed and buttered is tasty. Follow with a fruit salad and ice cream for dessert.

Spareribs give a hearty dinner and are properly contrasted with mashed potatoes, lima beans, crisp relishes and a tart lemon pie.

Family like meat balls? Team them with mashed or boiled potatoes, serve stewed tomatoes, apple-celery salad and cherry pie.

Nothing's easier to prepare than macaroni in which you've folded some chunks of frankfurter. Add to this main dish buttered beets, apple-banana-chili salad and some vanilla pudding and the meal's complete.

Eisenhower's Political Statement Causes Stir in Republican Circles

POLITICS—Gen. Dwight Eisenhower has made a statement that many political observers say clarifies his political intentions. It has also caused a great stir in Republican circles. The general said, in effect, that he would not make any pre-convention fight for the GOP presidential nomination. He added, however, that he has always been a Republican and that he would probably accept a draft as political assignment which is the duty of every American.

Eisenhower's statement was made after he was put on record in a spot during a recent news conference by Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge, during which the senator announced he was making the general's name in the New Hampshire Republican ballot.

GENERAL EISENHOWER

Before Lodge's news conference, Eisenhower had repeatedly refused to make any comment on his political intentions. By withholding silence, he would have it be known, in a negative manner, that he was willing to take the Republican nomination. While his statement was not as clear as some would have liked, it was known that he general did not request his name be taken out of the New Hampshire ballot. Eisenhower has assumed a neutral, if somewhat wavering, position as American voters in the event of the average home town man.

Almost as fortune is Senator Lodge's maneuverings and Eisenhower's statement, was the announcement by The New York Times, one of America's most and most influential newspapers, that it would support the general "enthusiastically" if he becomes a candidate for President. The newspaper has supported GOP presidential candidates only twice in the last 20 years.

Said The Times in an editorial, "We have given our support in those occasions to the Democratic candidate essentially because we were reluctant to trust the Republican party on issues of foreign policy and because we believe these issues to be the decisive issues of the campaign, towering high above all domestic issues—for the clear and sufficient reason that without a sound and courageous foreign policy the safety the prosperity, even the very independence of this nation would be endangered.

"In General Eisenhower we have a man who shares this conviction. We are confident that he would be able to lead even the laggards among his fellow Republicans away from isolation and toward world responsibility."

KOREA—The Korean peace talks settled down to a series of name calling, bitterness, and increasing suspicion. Although some progress has been made toward peace during the long months of talking, it is becoming more evident that a final and lasting peace can not be secured in such an atmosphere.

The Russians, meanwhile, indicated they wanted a greater voice in the talks to settle a war they don't even recognize, by asking for a meeting of the United Nations security council to consider the armistice negotiations. The proposal was rejected at once by the United States, Great Britain and France. American officials said such a session—where Russia has a veto—would worsen the prospect of peace in Korea by bringing political issues into the negotiations.

ECONOMY—Charles E. Wilson, director of defense mobilization, has predicted a severe pinch in civilian goods for the first three months of this year. The prediction was made in Wilson's annual report of armament under the national emergency program.

He predicted: 1) Materials for consumer goods in general in the first three months of 1952 are sharply reduced from the levels of the first quarter of 1951. On the basis of present calculations the second quarter allotments will be even tighter. 2) Requirements of the military and atomic-energy programs for most materials will either continue at the same levels throughout 1952 or rise slightly. 3) After military and atomic energy needs are met in such strategic materials as steel, aluminum, and copper, the material remaining will be divided between industrial expansion, consumer goods, public services, limited export requirements, and stockpiling.

As for the past year Wilson termed it one of great progress, but said more could have been accomplished.

CHURCHILL—Winston Churchill, who will go down in history as one of the great men of our times, arrived in the United States for a series of huddles with President Truman and top military brass. Mr. Churchill's agenda was almost as magnificent as his personal appearance. It included everything from economic aid to plans for joint defense of the west.

The key to the talks was quickly revealed when President Truman met the 77-year-old Prime Minister at a Washington airport. Said the President, "I can't tell you when I have had more pleasure than I have this morning in welcoming you as a visitor to the United States of America." Replied Mr. Churchill with the force and clarity of the Roosevelt days: "We have only to go along together each doing loyally his best to understand the other's point of view and we shall find ourselves safe at the end of the road."

There followed a series of meetings between the President and Mr. Churchill, and Mr. Churchill and top military brass. The complete results of these talks may not be known for years, but it is evident they have resulted in closer cooperation between the two countries. Churchill no doubt, has received assurances of economic help so sadly needed by Great Britain. Whether or not Britain will join in the European defense army with greater enthusiasm than previously indicated has not been announced. Most observers believed that was one of the Prime Minister's bargaining points.

WINSTON CHURCHILL

SCANDALS—The second session of the 82nd congress had been in session just a few hours when it became evident the nation is in for more months of spectacular investigation.

In the senate and house there were committees and subcommittees in every corner screaming for more investigations of corruption in high places, income tax frauds, murder, and underworld activities. It was evident, too, that there would be more investigations of Communists in government and defense industries.

Meanwhile, Attorney General J. Howard McGrath continues his new offensive against organized crime in the nation. McGrath's drive started after Treasury department agents swooped down on suspected narcotic offenders and arrested more than 300 persons.

It was evident the two drives were a part of the administration's announced plan to clean up crime and graft. But in the eyes of most home towners, the administration's campaign is a little like locking the barn door after the horse has been stolen.

FARM ELECTION STRATEGY

Democrats May Stand Pat on Farm Policy

According to reports circulating around Washington, the administration is unlikely to change its farm policy in the face of the approaching presidential campaign. The strategy, observers are reporting, will be to concentrate on the claim that a Republican victory in 1952 would endanger existing benefits of the farm program, and sidetracking any controversial issues that might arise.

Democratic advisors point out that the plan worked well in 1944 and 1948. In 1949 the administration pushed the Brannan plan which would have made much greater use of federal subsidies to maintain agricultural prosperity. Various farm organizations put up stiff resistance to the plan and it failed to get approval of the congress.

BUILDERS OF POWER EQUIPMENT FOR THE FAMILY FARM

This Illinois Farmer Says:

"I CAN ALWAYS DEPEND ON FIRESTONE OPEN CENTERS TO TAKE ME THROUGH"

"I farm 240 acres of black loam, and I've found that there are times when I need that extra traction to get my work done. Choose Firestone Open Centers for my farm, because they have the traction that will always take me through. In my opinion they're the best tractor tires a farmer can use."

LAWRENCE O. LARSON
CHILON, ILLINOIS

There's only one sure way to tell the difference between tractor tires, and that is to put them to work. On any job, you can soon see that the Firestone Champion Open Center outpulls all other open center tires.

From the tractor seat you'll soon see why it outpulls all other tires. It's the only open center tire with Power-Arc traction bars, tapered and curved to take a full-traction bite deep into the ground. And it's the only tire that is designed to cup the soil for a stronger grip and give positive cleaning as well.

Of course if you are one of the million or more farmers who prefer a traction-center type of tire, be sure to get the only traction-center tire ever built . . . the Firestone Champion Traction Center.

Buy Firestone Champions for your tractor. You'll find them the best tires you can use.

THE GREATEST CAR EVER BUILT IN THE LOW-PRICE FIELD

The big 1952 FORD

Out-rides them all!
The '52 Ford gives you riding comfort such as you have never before experienced in a car in the low-price field. With front springs tailored to the weight of each model, longer rear springs and diagonally mounted shock absorbers, Ford's Automatic Ride Control gives you the smoothest, easiest ride of them all—a level ride on straightaways, an even keel on curves.

Out-sizes them all!
The '52 Ford has longer wheelbase, wider front tread and greater length. It's big outside and big inside, with spacious seating for six and the largest luggage locker of them all.

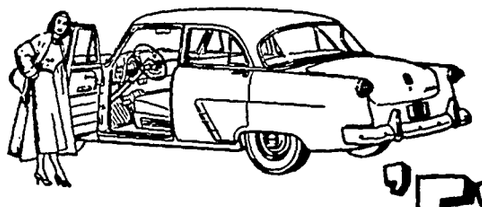
Full-Circle Visibility!
With narrower corner pillars, picture windows all around and a rear window that's 48% larger you have "all-direction" vision that adds to your enjoyment and your safety.

Out-performs them all!
Ford's completely new 101-h.p. high-compression, low-friction Six, with free-turning overhead valves, is the most modern Six in the industry. And Ford's high-compression V-8, now 110 h.p., is the most powerful engine in the low-price field. Both are available with performance-proved Fordomatic Drive.

Exclusive Power Pilot Economy!
Both the new Ford Mileage Maker Six and the Strato-Star V-8 have the exclusive Ford Automatic Power Pilot. This completely integrated carburetion-ignition-combustion system gives you high-compression "go" on "regular" gas.

New Coachcraft Bodies!
Ford's new Coachcraft Bodies are longer, stronger . . . distinctive in their modern beauty. They offer new hull-tight construction which seals out dust, weather and noise. And Ford has more color and upholstery combinations than any other car in its field!

Out-values them all!
With such modern design and engineering features as new Flight-Style Control Panel, new Power-Pivot Clutch and Brake Pedals, new Center-Fill Fueling, and new counterbalanced hood and deck lid, Ford adds up to more dollars and cents value than any car in its price class!



You can pay more but you can't buy newer or better!

DITCH OK'D BY BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

The Hancock County Board of Supervisors tentatively approved the report of the engineer and final estimate of Stille and Greiman, Garner drainage contractors, on the construction of lateral A-3 of Hancock County Drainage District No. 13.

A date for final hearing on the project will be fixed later. The contract totaled $2,585.43 of which a final estimate of $517.09 remains due the contractors on the project.

Wm. Henschen of Garner was construction engineer on the project.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

This is a story of 17 men who didn't know what to do. They were men of many ages, of many degrees of life, experience and education, but none of them knew what to do.

It began with a driver who didn't know what to do as he approached a bridge one winter morning. He failed to slow down in case the bridge might still hold a patch of ice from a previous storm. It did.

Out of control at high speed the car slammed back and forth between the walls of the bridge Somewhere along that short path of violence the driver was thrown out, and left slumped against the bridge like a half-filled sack.

Within minutes, five cars stopped and 16 men gathered around the injured driver. They stood in a hesitant semi-circle, each one feeling a terrible urge to "do something." But no one knew what to do.

Finally, one man reached out and picked up the victims wrist, feeling for a pulse. Yes, he was alive.

Then two men took the victim under his shoulders and lifted him to his feet. They stood him against the wall of the bridge and everyone moved anxiously to look into the dazed eyes that opened slowly.

For seconds, the injured man stood. He seemed to try to speak but no sound came. Then he began to fall forward into the arms of the 16 men, everyone of whom reached to catch him. His back was broken and the movement of lifting and standing killed him.

If you don't know how to handle the injured, don't handle them. If you don't know first aid, join a class in your community today.

Klemme Creamery Will Hold Annual Meeting Saturday

The annual meeting of officers and patrons of the Klemme Cooperative Creamery Co. has been scheduled for Saturday February 16th at the Klemme Grade School basement. There will be a good speaker for the occasion.

HANCOCK COUNTY SPELLING CONTEST

The Hancock County Spelling Contest will be held in the Garner High School Gym. Saturday morning, March 15, 1952, beginning at 9:30 A.M. Contestants should be there by 9:00 A.M

Two contestants may be entered from each township group or three contestants from two townships, and one from each town school with an alternate from each unit. Township chairmen should plan to have their respective contest before March 10, 1952.

There will be a written test in which each contestant will spell 100 words, 10 at a time. The pupil missing the fewest words will be declared the written champion.

The words for the written tests will be taken from Horn-Ashbaugh Spelling. We use workbooks, first 24 weeks, grades 3, 4, 5, and 7.

The ten best spellers in the written test will spell orally to determine the oral champion. The words will be taken from a prepared Horn-Ashbaugh list until the word list is exhausted, or until the pronouncer chooses to use the Eaton Contest Speller, 1948 Edition.

The written and oral champions will spell orally to determine the County Champion.

The Garner Lions Club is again offering $10.00 in cash to purchase awards for the top 5 winners.

Ribbons from the County and certificates will be given to all contestants.

Iowans Strike Back KNOW... the answers to CANCER

AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY

By E. D. PLASS, M. D.

(winner of the 1951 Iowa ACS bronze metal for his outstanding contributions to cancer control.)

Does cancer follow a bruise?

It seems probable that a certain kind of bone cancer may rarely result from a single severe injury but, otherwise, the answer is "no."

It is widely believed by the uninformed that a single injury to the breast may precde the appearance of cancer, but surgeons generally believe that it is not a cause-and-effect relationship. The breasts are naturally subject to physical bruises, and women who develop cancers in the area can usually recall some such injuries, but recall some such injures, but that does not prove that the cancers were produced by the injuries. The fact that there is no established time relationship between the injury and the new growth, and that the site of the cancer does not usually correspond to the point of injury, argues against a cause-and-effect sequence Moreover, there is a good reason to incriminate the hormones which have the mammary glands as their end organ.

In the skin, which is more subject to physical injures than any other tissue, cancers do not appear at the sites of such single injuries, but rather tend to follow prolonged irritation from other than mechanical factors.

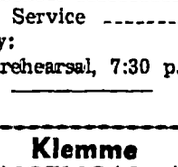
HELLO FOLKS



Mr. and Mrs. Audrey Griggs, Avery township are the parents of a baby girl born January 27 at the Steele Memorial Hospital in Belmond.

Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Schle are the parents of a baby boy, born Wednesday, January 30th, 1952 at the Mercy hospital in Mason City, Iowa. They also have one other boy, "Punky," in their family.

THE FARM OUTLOOK

By Paul Henderson, County Extension Director

A closer study of the USDA figures of the number of cattle on feed January 1, 1952, indicates that large numbers of fed cattle will be on the market during the first 6 months of 52. If farmers follow through on their January intentions, February cattle slaughter will be unusally large; but receipts in March and later spring months will be little different from last year. This will help to swell the tonnage of beef.

Already we are seeing the effects on increased numbers of heavy cattle coming to market. The New York dressed meat report for the week ending January 24 tells of "an overabundance of weighty carcasses in the total tonnage" received in New York. "Over 800-pound carcasses and wholesale meat cuts derived therefrom, carried uneven prices within as well as between grades."

Under such conditions, Kutish sees little prospect that fat cattle prices will improve over the next 5 or 6 months — unless general business conditions imenough to send the general price level moving upward. However, downward pressure on prices may be less of a burden after February. Barring unusual events which might cause farmers to dump large numbers of fed cattle on the market in a short time, prices of fed cattle would be expected to work gradually lower from now until May.

Hog Runs Let Up

The movement of last spring's pig crop is well past the seasonal peak in the states east of the Mississippi River. West of the river, there are signs that the runs are easing up. Average weights of hogs sold continue to climb. But weights remain lighter than at this seacon during the last several years.

In general, prices are relatively higher east of the Mississippi River than in the western corn belt. As the runs let up out here, we probably can look for some improvement in the hog market. But Kutsh points out that the late winter seasonal price rise is likely to be limited. The reason: Our big farrawings of June, July and August pigs last summer.

Record Turkey Crop Planned

There will be more turkeys raised this year if farmers follow through on their January plans. In mid-January they were planning on raising 11% more birds than a year ago. That will be a new record.

Turkey profits are not likely to be as good as last year—if raisers go through with these plans for larger production, Kutish says. Feed will cost more than last year. And there will be more beef available for competition in the last two months of the year than there was in 1951.

Early hatched poults are likely to prove most profitable. The short feed supply will reduce the amount of competing pork and beef on that market in the early fall.

Contract Let For Hancock County Ditch Cleanout

Sylvan C. Oleson, Forest City contractor, was the successful bidder on the cleanout of an open ditch in Hancock Co. drainage district No. 114 at a letting held at the courthouse last week.

Oleson was awarded a contract by the Hancock county board or supervisors on his bid of $2,832.68. The improvement was petitioned for by Laurice Larson et al. William Henschen Garner drainage engineer, was appointed as construction engineer on the project which will get under way as soon as soil and weather conditions permit.

Funeral Services Held On Tuesday For Lester Stille

Twin Lake Ladies Meet

The lesson on Rug Making was held at the home of Mrs. Martin Burrs on Tuesday, January 29. Mrs. Burrs gave instructions on how to make the braided rug with safety pins. Mrs. Amos Hanson showed how to make the rug with a tooth brush handle. The ladies felt the safety pin rug was the easier to make. This was the first meeting this year. The subject of Pen Pals was discussed, along with ideas that we thought we would enjoy studying in 1953. The group voted to bring their donations to the next meeting for the scholarship fund and Pennies for friendship. Seventeen ladies were present. The hostess served lunch at the close of the meeting.

HUNSLEY RE-APPOINTED WEED COMMISSIONER

Ray Hunsley of Britt was reappointed Weed Commissioner for Hancock County for the period of March 1, 1952 to Nov. 1, 1952. The appointment was made by the Board of Supervisors in regular session.

Mr. Hunsley has served Hancock County as Weed Commissioner for a number of years.

(Editor's note: This is going to be another rough year for this writer. Ray will again be exploring our back yard to see if we have exterminated those Canadian thistles yet!)

Local Company Sets New Power Record

New high records in electric power production were revealed today by the Iowa Electric Light & Power Company in figures covering its operation for 1951.

The maximum demand on the system occurred on December 19 at 5:40 p. m. when, according to Duane Arnold operating vice president, the system load totalled 171,410 kilowatts. This was an increase of 9.6% over the maxium demand for 1950.

The company generated a total of 773,492,000 kilowatt hours during the year. Of this total 94.9% was generated by the steam plants, 4.2% by oil and 0.9% by hydro, Arnold said. The kilowatt hour generation for the year exceeded the 1950 total by 11.3%.

RETIRED FARMER DIED AT HIS HOME FRIDAY NIGHT

Services At Methodist, Graveside Services By American Legion

Funeral services for Lester Stille, prominent retired farmer, and citizen of this community, were held at the Klemme Methodist Church at 2:00 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in charge of the Wellemeyer Funeral Service, with Rev. E. M. Egeland delivering the funeral sermon.

Mr. Stille, who was 55 years old at the time of his death, had spent all of his life in this community. He was prominent in community affairs and held numerous offices during his lifetime.

He died at his home in Klemme after an illness of several weeks, part of the time in a hospital.

Graveside services were conducted by the Adam-Schaefer Post of the American Legion under the direction of Claude White Commander. Mr. Stille was carried to his final resting place in the Ell Township Cemetery by members of the American Legion: Benn Coobs, Lloyd Sherwood, J. C. Thomas, Paul Grange, Ernest E. Lewis and Dr. A. H. Dulmes.

The story of Mr. Stille's life appears elsewhere in this issue.

GOODELL E. U. B. CHURCH HELD ELECTION

The Rev. G. M. Talbott, pastor of the Goodell E. U. Church, conducted the annual conregational meeting preceded by a potluck supper at 6:30. A. G. Ruka was elected trustee, J. J. Cook, Sunday School superintendent; Gene McNutt, secretary of the Sunday School; Virginia Veldhouse, treasurer; and Henry Nolte, class leader.

Following the election Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Pringnitz entertained with slides, which included 40 pictures taken in Korea by Stanley Pringnitz, who is in service there.

The group voted to hold family night the second Friday evening of each month.

LORETTA NORTH, 19, of Sydney, Australia, is touring 32 American cities to publicize 20th Century-Fox's "Kangaroo"—quite a tour, as she is accompanied by two young kangaroos, a chaperone, for her, a keeper for the kangaroos and a publicity man. She won out over 80,000 of her countrywomen in a contest because of her personality, charm, looks and education. The tour is semi-official, as she bears a letter of greeting from Prime Minister

SHOPPER'S CORNER

By DOROTHY BARCLAY

FULL SAIL AHEAD

CALL 'em what you will—post-holiday, pre-inventory, clearance or inventory, there are sales going on you can't afford to miss. Now's the time to restock your home, your children's wardrobes, your man's clothes-locker, and, yes, your own clothes-rack. For your stores are advertising all manner of bargains in things you need.

A MAIN STREET FEATURE

The reason for all this is that the manufacturers are slashing their inventories and cleaning house, to prepare for the next seasonal surge And retail stores all over the country are buying those stocks, and offering them to you at prices well within the budget

So hunt those bargains, lady, but call 'em good buys rather than bargains. Avoid those crowds around certain counters, where it would take a football-player to grab first choice. Make out your list, with the ads on one side, and the needs on the other Jot down what you, or your home, or individual members of your family need with one hand, with the other, study and compare the ad for those same things. Check place, price, and make your shopping plans accordingly. On that list, be sure to mark sizes and preferred colors, to save both you and that popular clerk time and trouble, when you do get near the counter. If it's draperies or curtains, or sheets, jot down measurements. And then, fully armed with all the necessary information, go to town, and good buying!

That man of yours getting low on socks? You'll find wool hose in all sizes and colors at drastically reduced prices at your store—just watch those ads for sales. Underwear? The finest broadcloth shorts, plain and fancy, are on your store-shelves for the asking, and a low asking-price at that! Slacks, in sizes to suit all the men and boys of your household, are slashed in price, just when they need them to start the early spring. And sportcoats, wool-lined and rayon-sheathed, are down 'way below what you paid for that Christmas present

The children wearing out those snow-suits and corduroy pants? Get 'em new ones, at almost two for the price of one. If you're an early bird, you'll be lucky in finding 'em in every size you need.

CAREFUL WASHING

And if you're washing little Mike's snow-suit some day when he's indoors, here's a tip from a textile expert: stretch the woolen areas while the garment is still wet.

Most woolen snow-suits, says this authority, have a cotton outing flannel lining Because of the different shrinking of the two materials, one must be equalized with the other.

Use lukewarm soft water and mild soap Squeeze the suds through the fabric, and avoid rubbing, which tends to shrink and harden the woolen material Rinse well in water of the same temperature as the wash water, and squeeze the water out gently, without twisting. If you have a mechanical wringer, by all means use it. And, to little Mike's great admiration, the pressing job is already begun.

Lippy Looks to Coming Season

By GRANTLAND RICE

WHEN big Don Newcombe was officially announced as definitely heading for the army, we ran into Leo Durocher.

"Naturally," Leo said, "losing a pitcher with Newcombe's stuff isn't going to help any team. It wouldn't help us to lose Maglie, Jansen or Hearn. But this isn't going to break the Dodgers, either. They have too good a ball club to have any one man wreck them. But Chuck Dressen must rustle himself a pretty fair pitching staff. He has a good starter in Preacher Roe. There's a pitcher—a great one."

Grantland Rice

Durocher didn't care to comment on how Branca, King, Labine, Erskine, Podbielan and the others would make out.

Certainly Newcombe's absence gives the Giants a much better chance to win. Newcombe has never quite worked to his potential ability as his career down the hot stretch proved late last summer. But he could be good and might have found himself this year.

"What about Willie Mays?" I asked Leo.

"Not a word about him," the Giant manager said. "But we'll have a good ball club," he said. "You were right in saying our ball club was in fine condition when we left St. Pete. I never had a ball club in better shape. We were rearing to go on the side. Our pitchers were all set. I was dead sure we'd get away flying. And then we drop 11 straight and almost fall out of the league. How can a ball club drop 11 straight in April and May and then win about 80 per cent of its games to come from behind in August and September? When you see things like that happen you get afraid to make any predictions."

I asked Leo which of the Giants he expected to have a big year.

"Just about all of them," Durocher said. "I mean by that they'll play up to their ability. We have a real hustling club. You don't have to needle them. I know Maglie, Jansen and Hearn will have good years. I expect to have two more good working pitchers to help out. We'll miss Eddie Stanky, but we'll have a good man in his place. The rest of my infield is pennant material. So is our outfield. Watch Monte Irvin. There's one of the best."

The Modern Ballplayer

In the course of a fanning bee Durocher brought out one important point. It concerned handling ballplayers — the ballplayers of today.

"The old-time rough-riding managers couldn't have gotten away with their stuff," he said. "They would very soon have run into mutinies and near riots with the bunch today.

"In the old days managers were handling ballplayers getting from $2,000 to $4,500 a year. Lajoie jumped the Phillies when he asked for a raise from $2,500 to $3,000. Joe Jackson and Ed Walsh, two of the greatest, got $4,000 or $4,500. But the good average player was far cheaper. You could bawl those fellows out—or give them a ride.

"You can't do that with fellows getting from $15,000 to $75,000 or $90,000. How is a $40,000 manager going to ride a $90,000 ballplayer? These fellows today, many of them, are well fixed with comfortable homes, an automobile, nice clothes and various luxury items. And the ballplayer today is also a higher type. Many of them are college graduates. Few old roughnecks break in any more."

"I only wish they did," I suggested. "So do I," Leo said. "But not too many of them. I could stand a few like Waddell, Sherry Magee, Mike Donlin, etc. But this is a different bunch today. Just a few years back and you could see Al Dark scoring touchdowns for L.S.U.; Allie Reynolds doing the same for Oklahoma A. & M., or Kluszewski for Indiana. Ballplayers today are serious minded, working hard at their jobs. You can't handle them like galley slaves. Maybe they live better than you do."

Who said 'Over'?

"Now that the football season is over," a writer starts his piece. Over for how long in many places? About three weeks and then "spring practice" will be under way again. It's not over.

We have never felt that spring practice, held under correct supervision, is wrong in any way. It is the overindulgence in this part of football that cuts in too heavily on a student's time.

Spring practice wouldn't be harmful if limited to 20 or 24 days, with each practice session held to an hour and a half. But in many places it runs on for two or three months and often uses up three hours of an afternoon.

From 20 to 24 days, held to an hour and a half, could produce no damage. It is the only part of football that isn't overpublicized. The average young college player can use this spring instruction to certain advantages. Naturally the coaches want it. But there are times when everyone wants too much.

SPORTSMAN'S HORIZON

By JIM RHODY

Good Tackle Pays

A "believe-it-or-not" story about the Ocean City reel and Montague rod (pictured), inseparable companions for nearly 30 years, is told by a famous Hollywood cameraman who fishes along the lower coast of California.

One day the cameraman and a friend were fishing side by side, using anchovies for bait. The cameraman's friend put his rod and reel down on a piling, headed for the bait shack to get hot coffee. The rest of this exciting tale follows in the cameraman's own words:

Rod Goes Overboard

"Suddenly something hit his line, and before I could grab his rod, the darned thing went overboard and started for China.

Both good as ever.

"We dragged the bottom for hours, but couldn't find it. My friend was furious and blamed me for not saving his gear About three months later a terrific storm hit Redondo Beach . broke up homes, tore up streets and demolished many piers. After the storm it was hard to do any surf fishing because of the huge quantities of kelp. However, I decided to give it a try I made a cast way out and started to reel in. I had snagged on to something . . . and in came the rod and reel we had lost.

"Of course the reel was full of sand, verdigris and marine encrustations. My friend took one look at the reel and said I could keep it.

Reel Performance Excellent

I later soaked it in a full can of kerosene for a week. Then I took the whole thing apart and scrubbed every piece. I reassembled the reel and it has worked normally through all the years. Only adjustment was made 15 years ago when I sent it back for new washers You'd never guess how much use and abuse that reel has taken and how many fish it has pulled in.

"The rod has been rewrapped, but even after all these years it still will match anything of its kind. Last job of this combination was in August, when it brought in a 27 and 33 pound chinook salmon off the Farallones."

Start Right

Before you try stunt shooting, learn how to hit the bull's eye of a stationary target. You'll make greater progress.

That advice comes from Charles Edward Chapel, a top authority on guns and shooting, in his latest book, "Simplified Rifle Shooting."

In a chapter on moving targets and fancy shooting, Chapel tells how the graduate marksman can accomplish some of the best-known stunts of the exhibition shooters Line drawings detailing several of the stunts were supplied for the new book by Winchester Repeating Arms Company

Wait For Apex

"Beginners shooting at a moving target make the mistake of following the target back and forth with the rifle," writes the author of seven standard books for shooters

The correct procedure, Chapel continues, is to catch the swinging target at one end of the swing at the point where it reverses direction.

Nymph? No Sinker

Don't use a sinker fishing a natural nymph unless you have to. The sinker interferes with the action imparted by the current and makes it harder to feel a strike. Don't let your nymph sink to the bottom and lie there. Keep it moving, fairly close to the bottom, and if it settles down, lift it up and start it again.

All lies in riffles are good spots to fish a nymph. The spots behind bars, rocks, in breaks and in the current eddies are good.

Truman's State of Union Speech Termed Friendly; Conciliatory

STATE OF THE UNION—Was it a wiser or politically minded President who delivered the state of the union message to the second session of the 82nd congress? Was his conciliatory and friendly mood dictated by the fact that 1952 is an election year, or was it an effort to consolidate the majority behind the defense program and the nation's foreign policy? These questions have been in the minds of every American since the President's speech.

For the first time in five years, President Truman, who is beginning to show the strain of his years as chief executive, did not go all-out for welfare-state legislation. He made it clear, however, that he was not abandoning any of the things he has advocated since 1946. Rather, he would have the country concentrate its full efforts to defense and keeping economically sound.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN

In this respect he said the stabilization law was shot full of holes at the last session and "it will be one of the main tasks before congress to repair the damage and enact a strong anti-inflation law". As for defense, he warned that the situation in Korea remains dangerous and that "the Soviet Union is increasing its armed might." The world still walks in the shadow of another world war, he said.

But his approach to taxation, compulsory health insurance, civil rights, and other controversial issues was so amiable that it left many Republican critics speechless. In fact, Republicans, who obviously were all set for a field day of criticism, found little about which to demonstrate.

The main criticism, when it was all over, was the charge that the speech was just a rehash of past messages Generally, Democrats praised the message. But from the opposition came such statements as: "The same broken record . . ." "The President's speech could be characterized as follows: spend more, waste more, socialize more, give more away, control more, talk more, and blame the other fellow for all the ills of the United States and the world."

The fire and stubborn fight of the Truman of old was so obviously lacking that it seemed almost apathetic to many home towners who heard the address.

PRODUCTION—Production of civilian goods for the second quarter of 1952 has been cut back sharply. Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson announced the government has ordered home building slashed by 23 per cent for the months of April, May and June. Automobile output was slashed by 7 per cent and other consumer goods using scarce materials were trimmed 10 per cent.

This is the general picture for the second quarter:

Construction—Home building, now at a rate of 850,000 a year, will be slashed to a rate of 660,000. Only factories vitally needed for defense production will be built, and little material will be available for office buildings, stores, and other commercial construction.

Autos—The industry will get enough copper and aluminum to make 800,000 cars and enough steel to make 900,000.

Civilian Goods—Most consumer goods, including refrigerators, stoves, washing machines, television sets, and radios, will be cut by about 10 per cent from the first quarter.

Railroad Equipment—Freight car production will be reduced about 14 per cent below the 20,000-car output for the first quarter.

Roads—Only the most urgent road building will be permitted.

Ships—Allotments to the Maritime Administration will be increased.

TAX EVADERS—The Treasury department has launched a new policy that should receive wide approval of the average home town tax payer. The Treasury will no longer let tax evaders escape criminal prosecution if they voluntarily confess their fraud and pay up.

The department also took steps to speed up its prosecution of tax evaders, including: (1) Reducing the number of conferences with taxpayers about their cases, although taxpayers still will be heard when necessary to develop actual facts; (2) The only persons who can represent taxpayers in these conferences must have duly certified powers of attorney to speak for the taxpayer.

The new policies are expected to reduce the lag in prosecution from an average of 292 days to about 100, it was estimated by the Treasury department.

PEACE TALKS—The Korean peace talks remain deadlocked over the question of whether or not the Communists be allowed to build airfields in North Korea during an armistice. The Reds insist that any ban on rehabilitation of combat airfields would infringe on North Korean sovereignty by interfering in internal affairs. On the other hand, the United Nations says it will not make a peace that gives the Communists the right to build up military forces and installations for further aggression.

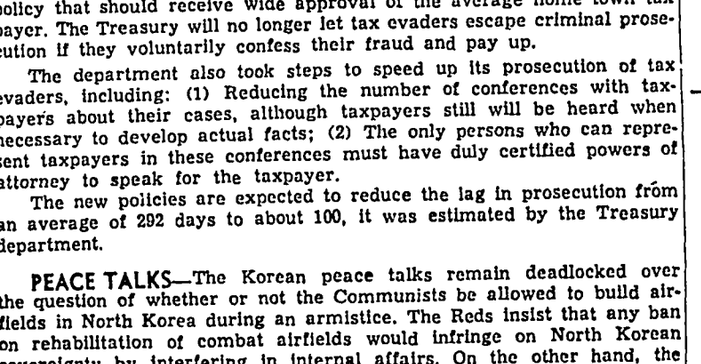
At home, Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, reports he is hopeful for a workable truce in Korea, but there is one price we won't pay—appeasement.

CLEANUP—President Truman's long awaited plan to clean up graft in government is under way, although it drew considerable fire from Republican critics

The President dropped his plan for a special commission and handed the job to Attorney General McGrath. Republicans immediately began their criticism The general charge was that "a whitewash is coming".

The President did not indicate how extensive the clean-up measures will go. A number of administration leaders are known to want action which would remove the corruption in government issue as far as possible from the approaching presidential election campaign.

Truman first asked Federal Judge Thomas F. Murphy of New York to head a cleanup commission. Murphy withdrew before his appointment could be announced officially. What caused him to change his mind has not been made public.



One of Russia's newest twin jet planes is depicted in this drawing, released by Aviation Age. The trade and technical magazine said it was either a twin jet fighter, night fighter, or ground attack aircraft, recently developed by the Red air force. Its exact designation is not known.

THE NATION'S SCHOOLS

Rearming Brakes U.S. School Gains

The nation's schools are again facing a serious crisis, brought on by four major factors: increased enrollments, inflationary costs, lack of building materials and an acute teacher shortage.

Educators, however, contend that the nation's economy is strong enough to support the defense program and the schools. And they insist that schools are the first line of our defense.

A recent survey revealed that 3,500,000 elementary and high school children—one out of eight pupils in the public schools—are suffering an impaired education because of inadequate facilities.

An estimated 400,000 boys and girls are not getting a full school day—some are attending school on triple-session schedules.

Easily Mixed. Needs No Cooking.

Cough medicines usually contain a large quantity of plain syrup—a good ingredient, but one which you can easily make at home. Mix 2 cups of granulated sugar with 1 cup of water. No cooking! Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get from your druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This gives you a full pint of wonderful medicine for coughs due to colds. It makes a real saving because it gives you about four times as much for your money. Never spoils, and children love it.

This is actually a surprisingly effective, quick-acting cough medicine. Swiftly, you feel it taking hold. It loosens phlegm, soothes irritated membranes, makes breathing easy.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a most reliable, soothing agent for throat and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Obituary Of Lester Stille

LESTER STILLE, 55, a lifetime resident of this community, died at his home in Klemme, Friday evening, February 1st, 1952.

He was born on the Stille farm two miles west of Klemme, Iowa, March 27th, 1896, the first of four children born to his parents, William F Stille and Sarah (nee) Koerner. As a boy and man, he continued to live on this farm for over a half century.

He completed his common school education in a rural school nearby; attended Ellsworth College at Iowa Falls, and then completed his business training at the Capital City Commercial College in Des Moines, Iowa.

In April 1919, at the age of 23, Lester Stille and Helen Hartzell were married at Eldora, Iowa. They commenced housekeeping on the Stille farm two miles west of Klemme, and continued to live there until retirement in June 1949.

They were the parents of three children. One son died in infancy, and two daughters survive.

Mr. Stille is a Veteran of World War I, and a Past Commander of Adams-Schaefer Post of the American Legion.

Mr Stille was baptized, attended religious instruction, was confirmed and became a member of the Liberty Methodist Church. Later Lester and Helen Stille transferred to the Klemme Methodist Church.

Mr. Stille was an active man, and besides his farming operations he took time to be helpful as a Public Servant. He was a Trustee and School Director in Liberty Township; and at present is on the Board of Directors of the Klemme town schools. He is a member of the Klemme Methodist Official Board. He is a member of the Board of Directors for the Hancock County Memorial Hospital at Britt, Iowa. Mr. Stille is Secretary to the Board of Directors of the Klemme Co-Operative Grain Company; and is the P. M. A. Committeeman for this community. And thus, for many years, Mr. Stille gave much time and effort toward the welfare of our community.

Mr. Stille became seriously ill in December, 1951. A short stay at a Mason City hospital gave only temporary relief, and a few weeks after his return home his life's story ended on February 1st, 1952 at the age of 55 years, 10 months and 5 days. He leaves of his immediate family: his wife, Helen Stille, two daughters Ruth (Mrs. Lavon Tue,) and Lois Stille.

He also leaves his father, Mr. Wm. F. Stille of Mason City, Iowa; two brothers, Harvey Stille and Donald Stille of Los Angeles, California, and one sister, Elvira (Mrs. Lee Anderson) of Charles City, Iowa, and other more distant relatives, and friends.

TWO LAMBS BORN VIA CAESARIAN AT GROESBECK FARM

Here's one for "Ripley's Believe It Or Not." Out northeast of town at the Mervin Groesbeck farm Wednesday 2 lambs were born after a Caesarian operation.

Groesbeck had two ewes that were lambing. One of the ewes got sick and appeared ready to die, so Mervin called in his neighbor, Curtis Grieman who then surveyed the situation and decided the best thing was to put the ewe out of her misery, so he killed her. Then with a sharp knife he ripped her open and removed two lambs, a male and a female.

At last reports the lambs are coming along fine under "Doc" Greiman's care. The loss was not too great as the two lambs were saved and the ewe's wool was salvaged also. Resourceful farmers, what?

On motion and second the contract assignment on D. D. No. 114, for clearing, between Walter E. Peterson and A. A. Matson and P A. Hanson is hereby approved,

On motion and second the letting on construction of D. D. No. 157 is hereby adjourned to a future date by reason that C. F. Merten, Engineer, proposes to make changes in his report and file an amendment to his report approved October 22, 1951 and said date of letting to be fixed upon the filing and approval of said proposed changes and amendment to said Engineer's amended report.

WHEREAS T. F. Matson was appointed Engineer as commanded in Chapter 457, Code of Iowa, 1950, on Angust 20, 1951 to make a survey, investigation and report on the necessity and feasibility of the construction of a sub-drainage district of Jt. D. D. No. 54-121, petitioned for by Gerhart Krause, et al and said Engineer did file his report on December 11, 1951 which report states that he has investigated and surveyed the lands in said proposed sub-district of Jt. D. D. No. 54-121 and finds the present system of drainage inadequate and recommends that said sub-district be constructed as prayed in the prayer of the petitioners with the additional proposal that a tile lateral be constructed in Wright County, Iowa, and that such improvement will be conducive to the public health, welfare, convenience and utility and that the benefits to be derived will be greater than the cost thereof.

WHEREAS it was Resolved by the Joint Boards of Supervisors of Wright and Hancock Counties in a meeting held January 10, 1952 at the Courthouse in Garner, Iowa, that the report of the Engineer be and the same be hereby approved as a tentative plan and may be amended before final action thereon and said report of the Engineer and plans shall come on for further hearing at the Courthouse in Garner, Iowa, and a tentative date has been fixed for February 21, 1952 at 1:30 p. m.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the County Auditor be and he is hereby directed to cause notice of hearing on the report of the Engineer and plan of said improvement to be published in The Kanawha Reporter, a newspaper of general circulation published in Kanawha ,Iowa, advising all owners, occupants, lienholders and encumbrancers of record in the proposed sub-district of the petition on file for the proposed construction, the favorable report of the Engineer, thereon, the approval, of the Joint Boards of the report of the Engineer as a tentative plan and that same may be amended before final action thereon and that all claims for damages and all objections to such construction shall be in writing and must be filed with the County Additor of Hancock County, Iowa, at or before the time set for hearing thereon.

The foregoing resolution was offered and read by Supervisor Daniels who moved its adoption, was seconded by Supervisor Bird, whereupon the Chairman, F. J. Schoun, placed the motion of its adoption and upon roll call the vote thereon is Clint Daniels, Clarence Bird and F. J. Schoun, ayes. Nays, none. Whereupon the Chairman declared the resolution duly adopted.

This being the 14th day of January, 1952, a date heretofore fixed for a letting on the cleanout of D. D. No. 114, Hancock County, Iowa, the hour for said letting having arrived, the proof of publication being on file and the Board being fully advised, said letting was held as scheduled,

The Chairman of the Board proceeded to open all bids on file and after duly considering all bids on file, the bid of Sylvan O, Oleson of Forest City, Iowa, was found to be the lowest and best bid on file for labor,

BE AND IT IS THEREFORE RESOLVED by the Board of Supervisors acting for an in behalf of D. D. No. 114, that the bid of Sylvan C. Oleson of Forest City, Iowa, be and the same is hereby accepted as the lowest and best bid on file for labor on D. D. No. 114, Hancock County, Iowa. All other bids are hereby rejected.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that a contract is hereby awarded to Sylvan C. Oleson of Forest City, Iowa, and F. J. Schoun, Chairman of the Board is hereby authorized to execute a contract in behalf of Hancock County, Iowa.

The foregoing resolution was offered and read by Supervisor Bird who moved its adoption, was seconded by Supervisor Daniels, whereupon the Chairman, F. J. Schoun, placed the motion of its adoption and upon roll call, the vote thereon is Clarence Bird, Clint Daniels and F. J. Schoun, ayes. Nays, none. Whereupon the Chairman declared the resolution duly adopted

On motion and second Wm Henschen is hereby appointed Construction Engineer on D. D No. 114 and his bond as such is fixed at $250.00

On motion and second the contract of Sylvan C. Oleson of Forest City, Iowa, on D. D. No. 114 is hereby approved

On motion and second the transfer of $2000.00 from the Bovine Tuberculosis Fund to the General County Fund is hereby approved as authorized by the office of the State Comptroller and the County Auditor is hereby directed to make said transfer of funds.

On motion and second the Board adjourned to January 21, 1952 at 9 o'clock A. M.

OPERATION UNITY

Europe Wants War Goods Faster, But Armament Is Enormous Job

By FARNHAM DUDGEON

(Editor's note: This is one of a series of articles prepared by the Editor of Western newspaper Union while on a reporting trip through Europe and the Near East.)

In the current build-up of strength against Russia, two major considerations project themselves into the thinking of the NATO leaders who are charged with the awful responsibility of meeting this threat to the peace of the free world. They are:

(1) Are supplies from the arsenal which is the United States reaching the "front" fast enough?

(2) Are the free Europeans functioning to the full extent of their abilities in terms of "self-help" in building up their defenses?

Finding the answers to these vital questions is not an easy job. In the limited time our group of observers had been granted for our survey, we had to rely for the answers on briefings by U. S. military and diplomatic personnel stationed in the countries through which we traveled, and on the official government viewpoint of the nations we visited. We got the latter viewpoint from their top-flight officials.

Progress Being Made

Sifting through the evidence presented by these sources, and supplementing it with our many off-the-record conversations with foreign newspapermen and just plain Mr. Foreign Citizen, we came up with the general feeling that, "all things considered," there is much positive progress being made toward the over-all objectives.

Without attempting to evaluate the current U. S. domestic controversy on the adequateness of military supply schedules, there is no secret about the fact that our leaders in Europe and the Near East would like to get materials at a faster clip.

However, on this point our military leaders are realistic. They are doing the best they can with what they have and can get. A year ago there were probably six fully and properly equipped "free-country" divisions in Europe. Today there are between three and four times that many.

Considering the situation in Korea, the long period of time required to switch production lines from tractors and plows to tanks and planes, and balancing these factors against the ability of certain of our allies to absorb mechanized warfare equipment, these leaders are inclined to describe the rate of incoming supplies as being "adequate in tone."

There seems to be no single item which is needed more desperately than the others. Everything needed to fight a modern war is in demand tanks, planes, communication equipment, etc. But the record of deliveries already made by United States under the Mutual Defense Assistance Program is impressive

To attempt a generalization on the strength and vigor of effort of the countries which we visited would be foolhardy, yet you come away from the continent with the net impression that the effort being put forth is far better than might be expected.

Production Is Up

Industrial production is considerably better than it was in the period immediately before World War II. Best figures indicate that production is about 130 per cent of 1938. Military forces are growing in those countries not restricted by treaty regulations.

If the fighting broke out tomorrow, all of the countries we visited, France, Italy, Turkey, Greece, Western Germany, Yugoslavia and The Netherlands, would give good accounts of themselves with their limited military establishments. Not necessarily because of NATO ideals, but surely to defend their own countries.

Unstable governments have hindered arms production and held down military training in some of these countries, of that there can be no doubt. France is usually offered as Horrible Example No. 1 in the non-cooperative sweepstakes. Europeans like to say that the Frenchmen are "dragging their feet." SHAPE leaders recognize France as a special problem but they do not share the dismal viewpoint of the French military effort often attributed to that country by other Europeans.

France is fighting a man-sized war in Indo China. Much of her military strength is being diverted to that sector and while some critics will characterize this as a "Colonial" war rather than a struggle for the freedom of suppressed peoples, the hard fact is that 48,000 of her commissioned and non-commissioned officers are engaged on that battle front.

Our military leaders think the Frenchman will, and has the ability to put up a good fight if called upon. The French economy is rocky and the government is shaky, but when the chips fall, France is expected to do its part.

Italy can't do much about building up her forces until she is released from the restrictions of the World War II peace treaty.

Greece has just finished a horrible and bloody civil war against Communists and is ready to fight Communists again, if necessary. But the Greeks too want peace.

Yugoslavia Will Fight

Yugoslavia will fight Russia if necessary, but she won't fight communism. This country is itself communistic to the core. In fact, the "Jugs" claim a rather superior kind of communism. A good tough partner to have on your side but certainly not a partner to get enthusiastic about when you come to consider idealism and an appeal "to the hearts of men." It is still a police state despite Tito's assurances that he is opening the gates to all types of inquiry and investigation of his country's affairs.

Looking beyond the possibility of immediate war, the people we visited sense that their fate is closely tied to ours. They believe that the only language Russia understands is power. They know that the power Europe has to offset Russia without American help is not enough to deter the aggressor.

From this fact they conclude that there can be no turning back in present efforts to build up Western forces. While the 1951 goals for a unified armed force were not met, they agree with our SHAPE leaders, who contend that 1952 will be a crucial year.

It is upon us, and goals formerly set for 1953 must be met in the next 12 months. This is the year in which the strength of German industrial production within the Soviet zone will make itself felt in the struggle for increased arms.

This too, is the year in which the American people will decide how much further they are able and willing to keep the arsenal running and the checkbook open.

THE CORNER FICTION

SO NICE

By Helen Langworthy

BRUCE WHEELER looked across the restaurant table at his daughter Avis. He hadn't realized how much he missed her since he had sent her to Grand River to school. "Are you really glad you're going to Grand River? At the time you were determined to stay in Northville with me. Remember?"

3-Minute Fiction

"Remember!" Avis said with fire-alarm emphasis. "I was just a 15 year old baby then. I didn't know about the big wheels at Grand River, and that I'd be a main spoke. You're scrimgrangorgeous!" Avis' eyes grew large over the fried chicken placed before her.

"We don't seem to talk the same language," Bruce said slowly "Please interpret. What's a 'big wheel' and a 'main spoke'? That scrim-something word, is it good?"

Avis smiled. "Dad, I forget you're of the vintage of the terrific twenties! 'Big wheel' is someone important around High. And I'm important—a 'main spoke'! 'Scrimgrangorgeous' is swooning good." Avis turned to the chicken.

Bruce decided he wasn't hungry. For the thousandth time he wished Avis' mother could have lived . . . To avoid bringing up Avis in a woman-less household he had sent her to Grand River.

Avis finished the chicken and whispered, "Can I have a float?"

"Sure," Bruce answered, "but what is it?"

"This is the $64 business! A float is ice cream and coke mixed. Yummy!" Avis continued, "What are we doing after dinner? Frankie Martin's in town . . . Frankie's a sax man! Can we go, Dad? I mean, can we?"

Bruce nodded and felt dizzy. Maybe a show with Avis listening would give him time to impress the new language onto his mind.

Bruce was glad when Jim came to their table.

AVIS openly applied lipstick (her mother would never have done that!) as Bruce saw a familiar face across the restaurant. It was Jim McKinnon, son of an old friend. Jim returned Bruce's nod casually then Jim's eyes widened. Jim was 20. Bruce was glad when he came to their table.

Bruce pulled out a chair and began pelting the boy with questions about his father and about business. Jim responded that his father was well, business was fine, the football games had been won, but all the time his eyes were on Avis.

It hit Bruce like a wallop. Jim hadn't come for man-talk . . . it was Avis!

And Avis!—Bruce squirmed. Her eyes were downcast. The sparkle was gone. Bruce knew that bashful ten year old's had more personality Plainly Avis was mentally swooning over Jim.

Jim asked her, "How do you like Grand River High?"

"Nice," Avis said softly.

"Do they have a good football team?"

"It's—it's nice," Avis answered. She raised her eyes as far as Jim's hands like it was a terrific effort.

Bruce clenched his teeth. Didn't she know anything! If she put one tenth of the gayness of her conversation five minutes ago into talking with Jim, he would be interested.

"Do you like having dinner here," Jim asked, already searching the room for an escape.

Avis took a long time to answer, and managed to raise her eyes to the level of Jim's. "It's so-so nice here," she said.

Bruce knotted his hands. Jim sighed, with disappointment and politely asked Avis to dance. He probably expected her to say she couldn't push one foot ahead of the other. As they walked away Bruce closed his eyes—probably she would fall! If only her mother had lived Maybe she could have taught Avis how to talk!

Then they were back and Avis was drawing on her coat and Jim was walking away.

"He's peachy!" Avis breathed.

Bruce began, "There's something I should tell you. If you want a man to be interested you have to be alive—."

Avis interrupted, "Jim? Oh, we've a date for tomorrow night, another for the fraternity party and he asked me to go to the Fall Prom too! Not bad?" she asked with lifted brows

"You'll do," Bruce whispered.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Don't Urge Man To Come Back

By Lawrence Gould

Should a girl urge a man to "come back"?

Answer: Never If she is reasonably sure the basis of his leaving her was a misunderstanding, she may try to clear this up, though even here she should be careful not to appear to be putting any kind of "pressure" on him. But if the man seems at all reluctant or is "not sure how he feels about her," all that she can do is wait until he makes up his mind, or try to "forget" him. Her attempting to persuade him to come back against his will will either make him angry or give him the feeling that he is acting from a sense of duty rather than because he wants to, and no man can love a woman on that basis

Are skin ailments psychosomatic?

Answer: Most of them have at least an important psychic (mental) factor says Dr D. E. H. Cleveland of Vancouver, B.C. The emotional disturbance is not the sole cause of the ailment, but provides the fertile soil on which skin trouble may grow. The physician should study his patient's emotional life and explain to him that medicine alone cannot cure him, so that he will not attribute his recovery to it if he gets well. Any medication that is used should be chosen only to relieve the symptoms, since it is psychotherapy that the patient really needs. Itching and scratching may be basically "rage reactions."

May silence be cruel?

Answer: Yes In certain situations refusing to speak to someone may hurt more than harsh words or blows Being ignored in this way is the same as being "rejected," which is the most painful of emotional experiences. Again, refusing to speak to a person leaves him without any hint of what you are thinking, or planning to do, and if he is inclined to be imaginative, this uncertainty will be worse than the most painful knowledge. There are times, particularly if you are angry, when it is wise to "stop and count ten (or 1,000) before you speak, but don't use the "silent treatment" as a form of punishment, especially with a child.

Republicans Ignored Nation's Home-Town Voters

By Wright A. Patterson

IN THE 1948 political campaign Herbert Brownell of New York, the manager of the Dewey-Warren campaign, was so confident his candidates would receive the farm vote that he entirely ignored the media of greatest influence with the farm vote, the home-town newspapers.

He confined his efforts to secure votes to the metropolitan centers. As a result the votes of the farm states turned to the President, and that vote re-elected President Truman by a small margin. Dewey and Warren were deprived of a victory that they might easily have had as a result of either ignorance or gross mismanagement on the part of Herbert Brownell.

The farm vote can never be counted in the ballot boxes for Republican candidates, regardless. That vote must be sought, and the one most influential media through which to seek it is the farmer's home-town newspaper. He knows the home-town editor, and has implicit confidence in his political judgment.

He looks to that hometown paper as his source of political leadership When it is silent, the farmer must turn to other sources for political information and leadership. In many cases the home-town paper editor is sufficiently interested in the result of an election to take an active part in a campaign without any urging, but in many hundreds of cases they do not do so unless the party asks for his local support, and indicates that he has a local influence.

Brownell did not ask for support from these local papers, or indicate that he thought of them as having local influence. The confidently expected victory on the part of the Republican candidates was turned into defeat by the farm vote in the farm states.

Normally the farmer does not read, or follow the political leadership of the newspapers from the metropolitan centers. The farmer does not know, nor has he that same degree of confidence in the editor of the city as is true of that of the home paper, whose leadership he will follow.

American farmers as a class do not believe in socialism as an American policy. They are not willing to divide their two goats or two cows or acres for which they have worked and thriftily saved; but they can take the socialistic medicine with less of a grimace than they can take being ignored. The farm voter believes his vote is wanted when those opposing socialism, by any name, or in any form, are supported by the home-town papers

Such support was not asked for by Brownell in the 1948 campaign, and the electoral vote of the northern farm states largely went to the President, on his personal appeal to the farmers and his promise of continued subsidies.

Will the Republicans and the opponents of socialism make the mistake Brownell made in 1948 by again ignoring the home-town papers, through which to appeal to the farm vote? Should they do so, I am placing my money on the President as the victor in his race for a third term.

If those in charge of the Republican campaign invite support for their candidates, the chances for success will be much improved, and the chances for the President again succeeding himself greatly lessened. Should that be done, socialism as a political issue will be dead.

Candidates seeking the nomination of either or both parties will do well to realize that the home-town papers can materially aid in securing delegates to the nominating conventions, as well as in providing votes at the November election. In the towns and on the farms, the home-town newspaper exerts a powerful influence as a collective media The answer is up to the candidates, and to whoever may be named to conduct their campaigns

"Birds of a feather"—It would not be fair to indicate that President Truman is lacking in integrity and honesty because some of his cronies of former years, whom he appointed to government jobs, proved themselves to be crooks

Healthful Treatment for the Elderly

By Dr. James W. Barton

NOW THAT 20 full years have been added to the life span during the past 50 years there is, as stated often before, a very large number of men and women past 50 years of age The lengthening of the life span means that these elderly folk need attention not only for the ailments common to the young and middle-aged, but for the ailments that come on with old age. It can thus be seen that the geriatrician must know diseases and symptoms common to all ages

One of the important factors in preserving the health and preventing ailments in the elderly is nutrition and food

Generally speaking, the dietary of the geriatric patient should fulfill the following requirements: Food intake must maintain normal weight with 1 gm. protein (meat, fish, eggs) daily for every two pounds of weight. There should be sufficient vegetables and dairy products to yield the necessary vitamins and minerals, and then enough carbohydrates (bread, sugar, potatoes, cereals) to round out a meal. Fats should be reduced greatly in amount.

One of the helpful forms of treatment is gland extracts which are being used with excellent results Just as women have change of life, so also do men, and the gland extracts ease men and women from middle-age into old age without the terrible shock and other symptoms at this period of life. It is the gradual wasting away of the sex glands that cause symptoms during change of life. Preventive care, not treatment of existing diseases of symptoms, is the aim of the geriatrician who, in most cases, has been and is a general practitioner

As we grow older, we all appear to need reassurance about our health. The elderly patient may be given ideas on how to improve eating habits, how to get extra sleep, and the need for exercise.

People won't buy preventive care unless it's wrapped up in an appealing package.

It's Wonderful the Way Chewing-Gum Laxative Acts Chiefly to

REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD

• Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different!

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon . . . right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes mostly waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, run-down feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self—full of life! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

Serve Yeast Breads For Delicious Variety At Family, Party Meals

LIKE TO ADD something special to any menu, family or party style? There's nothing more tempting than a home-made yeast bread that's feathery light but simply made, and crusted with a delicious topping.

Even the plain rolls can make a simple main course more interesting, and some of the sweet rolls and coffee cakes are so delightful and appealing, they can easily be used as desserts.

The recipes given here today are a new version which combines yeast with baking powder, with their best features, thus giving you an extraordinary lightness, quick action and wonderful flavor.

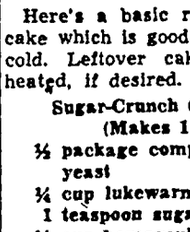
Here's a basic recipe for coffee cake which is good either warm or cold. Leftover cake may be reheated, if desired.

Sugar-Crunch Coffee Cake
(Makes 1 cake)

- ½ package compressed or dry yeast
- ¼ cup lukewarm water
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- ½ cup homogenized shortening
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 egg, unbeaten
- 2 cups sifted, all-purpose flour
- 2½ teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup milk

Crumble or sprinkle yeast in lukewarm water in small bowl; add 1 teaspoon sugar and mix well. Let stand until yeast is thoroughly dissolved (5 to 15 minutes). Combine homogenized shortening, ½ cup sugar, and egg and beat until smooth. Sift flour with baking powder and salt; add half of homogenized shortening mixture, beating well. Add yeast mixture, then milk, then remaining flour mixture, beating each addition until smooth. Spread ½ of batter in greased deep 9-inch round layer pan. Sprinkle ½ of Sugary Nut Filling over top of batter, cover with rest of batter, and sprinkle with remaining filling



Bake in moderate oven (350°F.) 40 to 50 minutes If desired, the batter can be baked in a 9x9x2-inch square pan or 7½x12x2-inch oblong pan in moderate oven (350°F.) 40 to 50 minutes

SUGARY NUT FILLING. Mix 1 cup firmly packed brown sugar, 3 tablespoons sifted flour, and 1 teaspoon cinnamon. Cut in 3 tablespoons butter. Add 1 cup chopped nuts and mix.

VARIATION. Omit the Sugary Nut Filling and put all the batter in a greased deep 9-inch round layer pan. Sprinkle with a topping made as follows: Mix ½ cup brown sugar, ¼ cup sifted flour, add ½ teaspoon cinnamon. Cut in 3 tablespoons butter. Add ¼ cup chopped nuts and mix. Bake as directed.

Candied Apple-Top Twirls
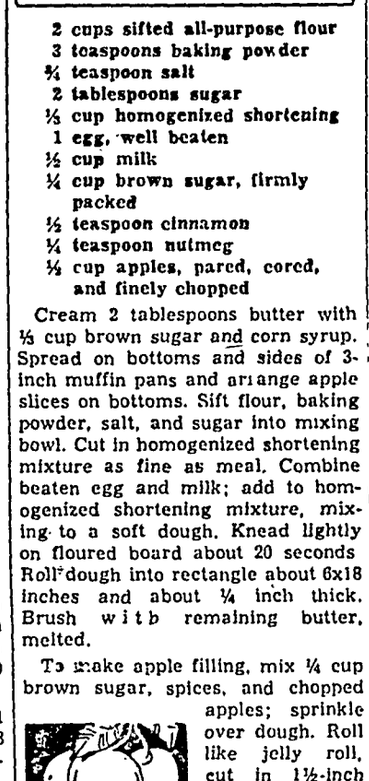
(Makes 1 dozen)

- 4 tablespoons butter
- ⅓ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
- 1 tablespoon light corn syrup
- ½ cup pared, cored, thin apple slices



Want to wake the family easily for breakfast? Just prepare this delightful sugar-crunch coffee cake that's the last word in breakfast treats. It can be easily and quickly made at home and will be thoroughly appreciated even by those who like to skip the important first meal of the day.

*Recipe Given

- 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- ⅓ cup homogenized shortening
- 1 egg, well beaten
- ½ cup milk
- ¼ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- ¼ teaspoon nutmeg
- ½ cup apples, pared, cored, and finely chopped

Cream 2 tablespoons butter with ⅓ cup brown sugar and corn syrup. Spread on bottoms and sides of 3-inch muffin pans and arrange apple slices on bottoms. Sift flour, baking powder, salt, and sugar into mixing bowl. Cut in homogenized shortening mixture as fine as meal. Combine beaten egg and milk; add to homogenized shortening mixture, mixing to a soft dough. Knead lightly on floured board about 20 seconds Roll dough into rectangle about 6x18 inches and about ¼ inch thick. Brush with remaining butter, melted.

To make apple filling, mix ¼ cup brown sugar, spices, and chopped apples; sprinkle over dough. Roll like jelly roll, cut in 1½-inch slices, and place cut-side down in muffin pans. Bake in hot oven (425°F.) 25 to 35 minutes.

Poppy Seed Supper Rolls
(Makes 2 dozen)

- 2 packages compressed or dry yeast
- ¼ cup lukewarm water
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- ⅓ cup homogenized shortening
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 cup scalded milk
- ¾ cup water
- ½ cup bran cereal
- ½ cup yellow corn meal
- 3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 3 tablespoons butter, melted
- 4 tablespoons poppy or sesame seeds

Crumble or sprinkle yeast in lukewarm water in small bowl; add 1 teaspoon sugar and mix well. Let stand until yeast is thoroughly dissolved (5 to 15 minutes). Put homogenized shortening, salt and 2 tablespoons sugar in large bowl and add scalded milk and water. Stir until shortening is melted and cool until lukewarm. Add dissolved yeast and mix well. Add bran and corn meal, then add flour gradually, beating thoroughly for 3 minutes. Cover and let rise in warm place for 1 hour, or until light and spongy. Stir down and let rise again until very light (about ½ hour). Drop dough from spoon into greased 3-inch muffin pans. Let rise in warm place until very light (about 20 minutes). Brush with melted butter and sprinkle generously with poppy seeds. Bake in very hot oven (450°F.) 15 to 18 minutes. If desired, poppy seeds may be omitted.

Serve an interesting variety of hot breads for family or party meals when you want to make a really fine impression. Seed "tops" are flavorful, fruit twirls are interesting, while frosted rolls, corn bread and coffee cake are guaranteed to please.

LYNN SAYS:

Add Protein to Enrich Hot Supper Dishes

Ready-to-serve meats and sausages added to any of your meatless dishes add flavor appeal and protein enrichment to them, and are especially appetizing during cold weather.

Sandwiches for a supper or snack? You'll like frankfurters which are heated or broiled. Serve on toasted buns or bread and pour over them a creamy mustard or cheese sauce.

Pork sausage balls or cubed pieces of bologna are excellent with your macaroni and cheese or macaroni and tomato sauce casseroles.

Highly seasoned sausage meats can be ground and used as the stuffing in green peppers, tomatoes or onions. This provides a very savory flavor.

Any of the ready-to-serve loaf type of meats may be heated in the oven with tomato or mushroom soup and a leftover vegetable right in the same pan with the soup-sauce and meat.

SCRIPTURE: Luke 18:18-30; 19:1-10. DEVOTIONAL READING: Mark 10: 23-31.

Two Rich Men

Lesson for February 10, 1952

EVERYBODY knows that Jesus took an interest in the poor. But there is another side of the picture: Jesus took just as keen an interest in the rich. Some of his most famous and penetrating sayings were spoken in conversations with wealthy men. The truth is, Jesus was interested in people, as people. Whether they were rich or poor was, for him, a side issue. And still he knew that a man with money has both temptations to evil and opportunities for good that the poor man never has.

Dr. Foreman

Two Rich Men

JESUS met two men of means who were quite different from each other.

One, who remains nameless, had much to recommend him. He was rich, but perhaps that was the last thing people thought about when they saw him. He was young and vigorous; when he came to Jesus for an interview he did not walk, he ran. He was a man of executive ability, for the story calls him a "ruler." He was good, at least he claimed to have kept all the Ten Commandments, and Jesus did not contradict him.

Furthermore, he was eager in the right direction. His principal ambition was not to have more money but to have eternal life. On top of all this, Jesus loved him. You would certainly think that a man like that couldn't miss. But he did.

On the other hand was the man Zacchaeus. Being a publican, and rich, it is perfectly obvious that he couldn't have been either honest or generous, for it was only the greedy and the dishonest in those days who could amass fortunes by collecting taxes. He was no doubt middle-aged, for it took time to rise to the top in the publican game. As for eagerness for spiritual things, he seems not to have felt a bit of it.

We may guess that Jesus was not the only one who loved the rich young ruler; but if Jesus loved Zacchaeus, and he must have, he was perhaps the only person then in Jericho who did. No community loves a man who bleeds it white. Yet, strange as it seems, it is this rich man, this bad rich man, who comes out in the end with a higher rating than the "good" rich man.

Money the Master

THE last thing we see of the good rich man is his turning his back on Goodness. He had a chance to follow Christ—the same chance that Peter and Matthew had, the same command, Follow Me!

What great service Christ had in mind for him we shall never know. All we know is that he made the great refusal. Perhaps he thought better of it and came back later on; but it is not likely. The last we see of him is his back, as he "went away sorrowful."

Jesus never said of him what he said of Zacchaeus. Salvation never came to his house. He never inherited the eternal life he wanted When it came right down to a choice: money, or eternal life, he chose money He was willing to be a Christian, but not a sacrificing Christian He only wanted to be an inheriting Christian. He thought of himself (no doubt) as master of his money; instead, money was his master His money talked so loud he could not hear well what Jesus said. His money talked so fast that it made what Jesus demanded sound like nonsense.

Money the Servant

JESUS did not ask all his followers to get rid of every penny they possessed. Zacchaeus, for instance, did not renounce all he had. What he did was to give back all that did not belong to him, and give away a good deal that did. Jesus did not ask this man to do more.

A doctor does not always prescribe the same operation for every one. For some men, an appendix is a source of danger and must be removed at once, for others, an appendix may safely and most wisely be left where it is.

Jesus could see that the younger man was at the point where money was about to be his master; so indeed it was for the older man. But the first could not shake off the tyranny of his wealth, his own wealth; the other man could.

For the servant of Christ, money is not in itself a sin. It is a root of sin when its voice is louder than the voice of the Master. It is the means of sin when it stops the ears to a cry of need. No one can call himself a Christian when he refuses his money in the service of Christ.

God Knows Best

"In the synagogue I heard men praying," said the puzzled young boy. "It must be awfully hard for God."

"Why?" asked the rabbi gently.

"The woodcutter was praying for cold weather."

"Naturally," the rabbi said. "He makes his living cutting wood for our stoves. The colder it is, the more wood he sells."

"But the fruit seller prayed for mild weather."

"Well," said the rabbi, "he stores autumn fruit to sell in the winter, and severe cold would freeze his stored fruit."

"The farmer prayed for rain, and the bricklayer for dry weather. They are godly men. How does God know how to answer all their prayers?"

"How is the weather now?" asked the rabbi.

"Dry . . . and mild."

"And last week?"

"Let me see . . . on Monday and Tuesday it rained . . . and on Thursday it was cold."

"See?" said the rabbi.

Annual School Election To Name Three Directors

ANNUAL SCHOOL ELECTION WILL BE HELD MARCH 10

The annual school election will be held Monday, March 10th. Three directors are to be chosen.

The board has appointed Ray Barz to serve in place of Lester Stille, deceased until his succesor is named at the election. The terms of Glen Terhufen and Dr. A. H. Dulmes also expire, so there will be three directors named at this election.

Anyone who aspire to the office of director must have their petitions filed with Secretary, A. J. Kudje by February 29th, which is 10 days before election.

KLEMME SHAMROCKS BEAT KANAWHA TWICE

The Klemme Shamrocks evened the series with Kanawha at a game a piece here last Tuesday night with a 32-29 triumph after sailing to a 21-12 lead by halftime. Larry Stille led the Shamrocks with 13 points while Lyle Zeigler hit 8 for the Bulldogs. The Klemme girls won 37-29. Miriam Priebe notched 18 points for the winners with Jo Ann Kurtz topping the losers with 23.

FLOYD FRIEDOW & SONS WILL HOLD PURE BRED SALE

Floyd Friedow & Sons will hold their annual pure bred Poland China Bred sow sale at their farm 7 miles west and ½ mile south of Klemme on Saturday afternoon, February 16 beginning at one o'clock.

The Friedows are offering an exceptionally fine lot of gilts on this sale. Not only do they have desirable stock for the professional breeder, but they feature bred gilts for farmers who want to build up their herd at a minimum of cost, as well as bred sows for 4-H and F. F. A. members.

If you are looking for herd improvement, attend the Friedow sale this week Saturday.

Birthday Celebrated

Mr. and Mrs. Menno Albers entertained to dinner Sunday in honor of Menno's mother's birthday. She was 79 years old on Monday February 11. The following were present: Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ruben, Kanawha; Mr and Mrs. Bernard Tofety and Rodney, Kanawha; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. J. Arnold, Secretary

Rockets Lost One, Won Two

Coach Juhl's "Rockets" lost to the Thornton team 32-20 in a very close game.

On Feb. 2 the boys went to Corwith and won over a taller team by the score of 21-12. This was one of their best games this year. Denny Haefner was high with 13 points. Warren Terhufen starred on defense.

Last Wednesday evening the boys traveled to Kanawha and won 33-32 in an overtime. David Waddingham's basket in the last minute of the overtime provided the winning margin.

The halftime score was 10-12 in Kanawhas favor and was tied at 28 all when Dennis Haefners 2 baskets in the last 35 seconds tied it up.

Kramer and Haefner were high with 8 each. Brinkman 7 and Larson 6. "Butch" Terhufen again starred on defense.

Our record is 5 wins-7 losses.

Rockettes Lose 2, Win 1

Coach Bob Juhl's Junior High "Rockettes" won one game while losing two in the past 2½ weeks. The first loss came to a strong freshman girls team from Thornton. The score was 43-28. This broke our seven game win streak.

A week later the girls came back to defeat the Corwith girls 25-8 at Corwith. This was the first time in 4 years we have beaten them. Bridges was high with 15 points while Margaret Haefner was outstanding as a guard.

Last Wednesday nite the girls traveled to Kanawha in an attempt to stop Kanawha's 12 game win streak. The final score was Kanawha 26 Klemme 17. The game was a rough one and both Bridges and Haefner were lost via the foul route in the 3rd quarter.

Our record to date is 9 wins as against 3 losses.

Liberty Go-Getters Met

Iowa children are learning to live safely Each week, teachers lead some 260,000 Iowa school children in classroom safety discussions provided by the Iowa Safety Congress.

This is the Congress' unique safety lesson plan supported by subscriptions to the stop sign poster service. Each lesson plan is accompanied by the week's safety poster, so the children see, hear, and discuss a specific safety message every week.

Endorsed by the Iowa Department of Public Instruction and classroom teachers throughout Iowa, the school lesson plan is made possible by the merchant displaying the stop sign poster.

Duncan Will Build New Communtity Hall Soon

CONTRACTS LET FOR COMMUNITY HALL AT DUNCAN

"From the ruins of yesterday rises a better tomorrow." This fact has been clearly demonstrated again by the thrifty people of the Duncan community in rebuilding their little village following the terrific destruction caused by last summer's tornado.

A building committee consisting of John Jakoubek, Frank Zrostlik, Vincent Nedved, Frank Formanek and Vincent Kopecek, announced this week that contracts were let recently for the construction of the new community hall to replace the one destroyed by the tornado. Davis and Keith of Clear Lake were the successful bidders on the general contract, Pratt Electrical Company of Algona was awarded the electrical contract; E. L. Secory & Son of Clear Lake the plumbing contract and C. J. Schneider of Garner the heating contract.

The building will be a one story brick veneer construction, 121 by 60 feet in size and will cost approximately $70,000. Additional land has been purchased and the building will be built on a site south of the present location. This will allow for better landscaping and provide ample parking facilities. Construction will get under way when materials are available.

With the letting of the contract on the construction of the community hall, most of the buildings destroyed are assured of being rebuilt. A contract was recently awarded for the construction of the parsonage and church of St. Wenceslaus parish, construction of which is under way at present.

RAINBOW FOR GIRLS PUT WORK IN INITIATORY DEGREE FOR THREE

The Rainbow for Girls held their first meeting for initiatory work for the new year at the Masonic Temple in Garner Monday evening, with Miss Marie Blank as their new Mother Advisor.

Girls who were initiated into the Rainbows were Susan Habercamp, Kay Whitney and Sharon Schaper. Klemme girls who are officers and took part in the work were Lois Ann Jacobs, Delores Thieman and Janice Swanson.

All of the girls did a masterful job of putting on their work, which is very pretty and colorful as the girls wear formals and make a very attractive appearance.

Mrs. Chas. Whitney, Mother Advisor for the past year was honored and presented with a nice gift from the girls. Mrs. Fred J. Arnold was installed as a member of the Advisory Board.

Young ladies from Klemme who attended were Neva Anderson, Janice Swanson, Delores Thieman, Sharon Ward, Joan Bacon and Joan Lemke. There were a few Masons present and quite a number of Eastern Star members.

AID PAID FOR TRANSPORTING PUPILS IN 1951

Public schools in this county received 30,648.52 in state aid for transporting pupils for the school year 1950-51. There were 13 claims paid to public schools in the county by a limited appropriation which meant that the claims had to be pro-rated.

The "Transportation Aid" claims in the state are pro-rated from a $3 million appropriation by the 54th General Assembly and was made available to pay claims for the 1950-51 school year.

The amount pro-rated and received by the several school districts in this county are:

REPORT RABIES IN BRITT AREA

A Bingnam township farmer, Harm Eden, lost a cow by rabies recently. The cow had been sick and under the care of a veterinarian. After the cow died the head was sent to Ames for posting. Word was received later that the cow had died from rabies.

Mayor D. J. Quist and Fred Gerdes, Chairman of the Bingham township trustees, immediately called the trustees and councilmen together and issued a proclamation warning of the danger of rabies and notifying dog owners to either have them vaccinated or tie them up.

This is the second cow in Bingham township that has died of rabies recently, the first one belonging to Dave Sonius. Both cows' heads were posted at Ames.

To prevent further spread of the disease all the people living in the area are urged to look after their dogs and to shoot civet cats.

GARNER CARDINALS BEAT KLEMME 49-26

The Garner Cardinals had little trouble beating the Shamrocks 49-26 here Friday after leading 31-15, at the half. Rich Koolbeck topped the Cardinals with 17 points while Goll hit 10 for the Shamrocks.

PLAN TO RECONSTRUCT HIGHWAY 18 IN BRITT

A preliminary survey for the reconstruction of Highway 18 through Britt was being taken last week. The stretch to be reconstructed would be from the Britt Creamery west to the corporation limits of Britt, near the Cabin Camp.

C. E. Cox, resident engineer of the Iowa Highway Commission, said that possibly the reconstruction work would be done this summer.

Eggs, Pork, Beans Plentiful This Month

Pork and navy beans, bacon and eggs—you'll find these foods abundant at the market this month, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture marketing specialists.

The outlook on egg prices is that they'll stay at relatively low levels for a while now. Farm laying flocks were larger at the start of the year than a year ago. and flocks were laying more eggs per hen.

As for pork, there were 359 million pounds of it in cold storages thruout the country at the start of the year. In addition the number of hogs coming to market continues to be large. Be on the lookout for navy beans to serve with that pork, for they're a good buy and supplies are large.

Prices are up on the less abundant broiler-fryer chickens, but there's lots you can do with a good stewing hen. There's a large stock of these older birds on hand in cold storage, and with the drop in egg prices many farmers are marketing some of their hens. Many homemakers are getting set to serve creamed chicken and chicken a la king, as well as to put some up for home freezer or locker.

About the fruit outlook for February, both fresh oranges & canned and frozen juice are plentiful at reasonable prices—thanks to a record Florida orange crop. The dried fruit picture continues bright, especially for prunes and raisins.

Fish buyers will find ocean perch fillets and canned tuna among the best buys for the money. Plentiful dairy products include dry skimmilk, cottage cheese and buttermilk. And there'll be lots of honey, rice, pecans and almond for your market basket.

Much smaller supplies of cabbage, potatoes and onions explain the higher prices we've been paying lately for these three vegetables. Prices and supplis of these will continue at about an even keel, say marketing specialists.

Funeral Services For Mrs. Sarah Behringer, Thursday

PLAN BRUCELLOSIS CONTROL PROGRAM

DR. J. B. HERRICK

Dr. J. B. Herrick, Iowa State College extension veterinarian and County Extension Director Paul Henderson met with Hancock County veterinarians the past week to discuss a county wide Brucellosis program. A number of good ideas were brought out and everyone agreed that every producer of livestock should have his herd on some kind of approved Brucellosis control program.

Another meeting of Veterinarians will be called later to formulate a more detailed program and plans before launching the county wide educational program . Dr. Herrick pointed out that the success of the program will depend unon the cooperation of the practicing veterinarians in the county. Present at the meeting were: Dr. D. G. Quist, Woden; Dr. D P. Anderson, Klemme; Dr. C. B. Wilson, Britt and Dr. H. G. Voetberg, federal veterinarian of Garner.

THE BIG SHOW

Chicago's 'Cow Barn' Will Be Site of Political Conventions

By Walter B. Smead

WNU Washington Correspondent

To some from the rural areas Chicago's "Cow Barn" will be a familiar sight as it welcomes a throng of visitors to the national political conventions next July. The 1952 setting for the presidential nominations may seem unrealistic.

For the site of the two national conventions has been selected from the traditional Chicago stadium to the windy City's west side, to the International Amphitheatre at the Chicago Stock Yards, home of the famous International Live Stock Exposition and other big agricultural shows. This year's conventions add up to 2 national political conventions held in Chicago 12 of them for the Republican party and eight for the Democrats.

Republicans will convene on Monday, July 7 with the Democrats following them into the amphitheatre two weeks later on Monday, July 21. There will be 1,206 Republican delegates, 104 more than were registered at the 1948 convention in Philadelphia while the official Democratic congregation will be 1,230, four less than the 1948 total.

International Amphitheatre, Chicago's great convention, exposition and sports building is the site for the Republican and Democratic national conventions in July, 1952. The arena of the huge structure is now air-conditioned for greater comfort of those who occupy its 12,000 seats.

Despite the fact that the stock yards amphitheatre seats 4,000 less than the stadium, there are several compensating factors which led to selection of the new site. One particularly good reason is that the amphitheatre is air-conditioned and that in itself is computation when the heat factor on a Chicago July day is taken into consideration. Other factors included the fact that adjacent to the convention hall itself are four large rooms for housing committees and other essential activities of the convention and air conditioned pie stage exhibition room to serve as workrooms for the press and radio, the necessary equipment for telegraph, telephone and teletype machines, here rooms for photographers and other work necessary to such a big show as a national political convention.

While television received its first big workout at the Philadelphia convention, four years ago, television this year will play a larger part and will have a total of coast audience whereas four years ago the audience was confined to the east coast. Another factor here into consideration is that there is lighted space adjacent to the amphitheatre big enough to park 4,000 automobiles. A first class hotel, good restaurants also are immediately adjacent.

HAROLD BECKLEY and William Donaldson, superintendents of the senate and house press galleries, respectively, and other members of a press committee who represent editors of the Republican and Democratic national committees already have worked out seating arrangements to handle approximately 1000 reporters for newspapers, periodicals, magazines, radio and television. These temporary stands must be built from scratch, using and entirely new arrangement than heretofore used either at Chicago or Philadelphia.

Members of a joint committee from the two national committees also have worked out their arrangements to handle the delegates' seating and temporary stands, the two committees to share the expense jointly. About the only difference will be that when the Republican convention adjourns, pictures of Republican leaders will be taken down and Democratic pictures will be hung in their places.

Even though the seating capacity does not measure up to the 20,000 which have been crammed into the old stadium, those in charge of the convention are delighted with the better facilities.

DOROTHY LAMOUR is going to give us a most unpretty look when Cecil Beaton is the lens master in New York. "The Lady and I" she has been appearing on television more and more frequently. Now she has been time off to run to Hollywood and make a picture. That could be merely the preparatory to appearing on the screen in the role she used to play on Broadway in "The Lady and I" which had magnificent show vehicles for singers, only by no one could be a better than she was.

Margaret Truman's ability to be her unbiased even RCA Victor recording executives will be "Down Deep" Margaret Truman's first album for a new long album.

They'd expected her to be stiffly proper. She removed her shoes between takes, sipped coffee from the thermos jug she'd brought from home, and sent out for hamburgers when a long break permitted.

Nobody was at all surprised when the George Stevens production for Paramount, "A Place in the Sun", was voted the best motion picture of 1951 by the National Board of Review. It's a leading contender for the Academy Award.

THE FICTION CORNER

NOT A GOOD RISK

By Maud McCurdy

3-Minute Fiction

JANET said flat, "I'm not going to marry you, George!"

He had bought a run-down mansion at the edge of town, which he'd had converted into apartments.

The place was surrounded by meadows. Janet and George were out on the ground looking over the patios, the tennis courts, and the lily pond. There was still space left over for playgrounds of most any size.

This was where the trouble started. Janet said, "Think what this will mean to children who've never had room to run and play."

George looked startled. "We can't take children, Janet," he said.

She was astonished. "But this is such an ideal place for them."

George shook his head and Janet looked angrily. "I don't believe you even like children. What else would you do with all this ground?" She hesitated a moment, then added, "I'm not marrying you, George. You wouldn't be a very good matrimonial risk."

George tried the best he could to defend himself, explaining that children were destructive. He argued, but Janet only looked at him in bewilderment.

"If you feel that way," she whispered, "you really are not a very good matrimonial risk." She left him standing there still trying to defend himself.

George tried to see her. He called her every day at the newspaper office, but she was out. It was plain Janet didn't want to see him again and there seemed to be nothing he could do about it. No matter what he tried, he could not get to see her.

Finally the apartments and grounds were complete. Peter Bolton, his partner, put a full page advertisement in the newspaper.

George looked startled. "We can't take children, Janet," he said.

WITHIN an hour after the paper came out people began coming, prosperous-looking young couples, every one with children. They were excited over the place, anxious to sign leases at once.

George was bewildered. He asked Peter what on earth had he put in the ad. "Only couples without children," Peter said firmly.

George began to feel a little desperate. There was one pretty young mother, with violet eyes, almost the color of Janet's, who said feelingly, "Mr. Hartley, the mothers of this town will call you blessed."

"But I . ." George started to say a mistake had been made, but was stopped by another young couple shaking his hand and saying, "This is wonderful. It's like a dream."

George was perspiring. He found a moment, and took a look at the ad. There it was in bold type, "Only couples with children need apply."

Leaving Peter in charge, George drove to the newspaper office. Before he could get to the advertising department a reporter button-holed him. "Mr. Hartley, the whole town is talking about what you've done. You've really made news. This will make every newspaper in the state."

George pulled away from him, hurried to the advertising department. A voice said, "Yes?" and a pair of violet eyes looked up and met George's. A quick flush came to her face. "George, they only put me on this desk yesterday and I—I made the mistake. I'm sorry."

George stood there looking at her as if he never wanted to stop. "Look, Janet, I was looking at the matter in a cold-blooded, business way." He drew a long breath and went on, "You didn't make a mistake. I did. The place is just like you said, a natural for children. And they're there already, about a dozen of them with their parents."

"George, you mean that?" Janet asked. "You're not just saying it to get me to change my mind?"

"I never meant anything more," George answered.

"I'm glad," Janet said. "You know I must have had my mind on the children. I didn't make the mistake in your ad on purpose. I really didn't, George, and don't you ever say I did."

George just smiled. The whole office force might be looking, but he didn't care. He bent his head and kissed her.

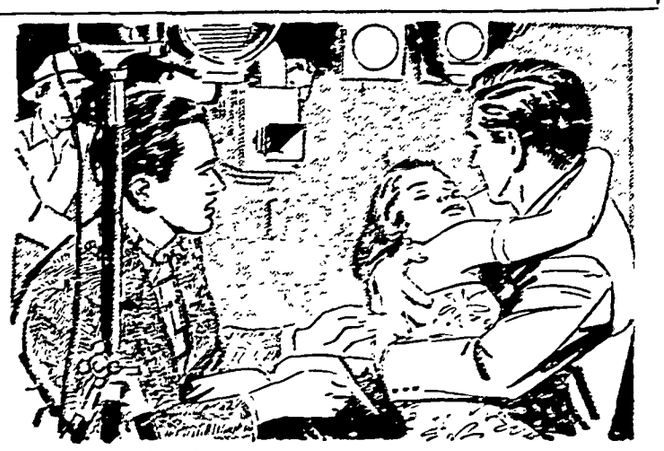
MIRROR Of Your MIND

Learning May Replace Acts

By Lawrence Gould



Does knowledge insure performance?

Answer: No, write Drs. David G. Ryans and Norman Fredericksen in a symposium on "Educational Measurement." One of the most common mistakes in the field of measuring people's abilities is to assume that someone who knows all the facts and principles involved in a task will therefore be able to perform it. From the standpoint of employing anyone, it is "performance tests" that count. There not only are a lot of people whose fears or repressed resentments will not let them put what they know into practice, but learning and studying can become substitutes for action, especially for someone who has a neurotic fear of failure.

Are "forgetting" and "repression" the same?

Answer: Not quite. What you repress because it is "too painful to think of" is indeed forgotten so completely that you cannot bring it back to mind by any effort of will, and even the fact that someone's name has painful associations (perhaps because it is the same as that of a person you dislike) may make you forget it. But many things are forgotten because they have not enough emotional importance to make you recall them. It is the need to justify feelings of anger or self-pity that makes you "unable to forget" an injury, and it is good psychology to dwell as little on such memories as you can.

Will deafness make people avoid you?

Answer: No, writes Mrs. Grace E. Barstow Murphy, who is deaf herself, in her recent book, "There's Always Adventure." Other people rarely mind your being deaf. What they mind is "a bad approach to deafness." If you are ashamed of being hard of hearing and try to conceal it, you will cause others much more inconvenience or annoyance than if you accept the fact and ask them to go half way in establishing communication with you. While there are exceptions, the idea that deafness will make you a "social outcast" is mainly the product of the tendency to be suspicious, which is often a deaf person's chief emotional problem.

Household Hints

Removing Grease

Do you have spots that still show a grease where the dress has been let out? If so, take a cloth, run it over a piece of soap, then rub the cloth along the crease on the skirt. Wipe off excess soap, press with a warm iron, and your crease is gone.

Ironing Hint

You'll leave no lint when you're pressing out the crease in a let-down skirt if you use tissue paper to iron on instead of a damp cloth.

Sharpening Scissors

Scissors, forever getting too dull to work with, will become sharp enough in a jiffy if you cut a few strips of sandpaper with them.

Cleaning Spoons

Egg stains on silver spoons are the bane of many an existence. Keep silver shining between regular cleanings by sprinkling dry baking soda on a damp cloth and rubbing stain lightly. Soda is safely non-abrasive, just right for treasured flatware, sterling or plate.

T.V. Hint

It is not safe to slide a magazine into the space between the bottom of the table model television set and the table. This shuts off air from the vents in the under side. Accumulating heat is dangerous so allow for free ventilation.

Last Six Years Cost US More Than 160 Previous

By Wright A. Patterson

FROM THE FOUNDING of this republic as a government, with George Washington as its first President, down through all the years—more than 160—to the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt, this government spent $160 billions.

That covered all the cost of all our wars since the Revolution. It included the cost of our second war with England, the Mexican war, the Civil war, the war with Spain, the first world war, and practically all of the Second World war, as well as all the lesser wars.

It included the cost of conquering the West, the building and rebuilding of the national Capitol. It included all the costs of our vast internal improvements, and the construction of the Panama canal, the purchase of the Panama railroad, the building and rebuilding of our navy, and the vast fleet of merchant ships built during World War I.

It included all the welfare expenditures of the Roosevelt administration. That $160 billion included every dollar paid out by the United States treasury over those years, down to the inauguration of Harry S. Truman, approximately six years ago. During those approximately six years of the Truman administration the treasury has paid out the staggering total of $160 billion.

A large portion of us, as tax payers, howled our heads off at what we considered the "wild" spending of President Roosevelt in his efforts to restore prosperity, to undo what World War I had done to us, but we know now that as a spender he was but a "piker" compared to President Truman.

The record of the six years of Truman is so unbelievable that when radio commentator Fulton Lewis, Jr., saw the figures he would not believe them. He took them to the treasury department for verification. From its records, the treasury department verified the figures. It was all true. In approximately six years Harry S. Truman had spent more than all the presidents who had preceeded him through a period of 160 years of our national history.

The President was not responsible for spending that vast sum of $160 billion. He did not ask for all of the appropriations made by congress. Members of Congress, imbued with the idea of spending, provided some considerable sums on their own account in addition to meeting the requests of the President. Among the items of expense for which the President is responsible is the cost to the nation, year after year, of that army of bureaucrats he has built.

The President still has in his hands, as appropriations by congress some $40 billion that has not been spent, but which presumably is to pay for our re-armament, for planes, tanks, artillery, and additional naval vessels, that have not yet been ordered.

After all the wild spending we have witnessed during the past six years, we are still not prepared to meet Russia, if, as the President has so repeatedly warned us, Russia should thrust war upon us. Should the spending continue we will be as bankrupt as England, because of the socialistic experiments of the Attlee Labor government.

Incidentally some $35 billion of the $160 billion of Truman spendings went to England to finance those socialistic experiments. Similar experiments in this country are demanded by the President. It is certainly time for us to call a halt, not alone on the President, but also on those members of the Congress who vote appropriation for the fantastic, needless, utterly senseless projects that have been asked for. If they are not stopped we will soon be in a position where we cannot defend ourselves should Russia attack which is not impossible, but hardly probable.

It is well that we not forget that $160 billion spent during the past six years as compared with the $158 billion through all the years of government operations from the days of Washington to the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

For the Republicans it is a long shot between a nomination and an election as was proven by Dewey and Bricker, and again by Dewey and Warren. They had, and there will again be, a handicap of close to 10 million job paid-for votes to overcome.

The weather man could win praise by a more even distribution of rain or snow.

How Exercise Strengthens the Blood

By Dr. James W. Barton

I WRITE OFTEN about the "friendly force" behind mankind and of how nature is always ahead of man's needs in supplying him with extra blood, extra blood pressure, extra white corpuscles to fight off invading organisms and increased amount of adrenal juice to strengthen him in an emergency.

I have also pointed out how nature meant that man should use the hundreds of muscles in and on his body to keep him strong physically, give him an appetite, help his digestion, regulate the bowels, enrich his blood and maintain blood-pressure. By simple physical work or exercise, man obtains all these helpful services. And should man engage in regular physical training or exercise, if only five to 15 minutes daily, he becomes faster in his movements. This applies to all forms of games or athletics, and a fraction of a second may make the difference between a win and a loss.

An interesting experiment showing the value of work or exercise to man's physical make-up is recorded by Dr. B. Gabraoui, Cairo, in the Journal of the Royal Egyptian Medical Association.

One of the juices very valuable to man's strength and speed of action is histamine as manufactured by the adrenal glands, situated one above each kidney. It is this juice or extract that enables man to do his best if he has to fight or flee in an emergency.

Dr. Gabraoui made observations on healthy volunteers to learn if work, exercise (muscular movement), affected the adrenal glands.

In all experiments it was found that muscular contraction (work, exercise) in man is accompanied by a flow of histamine into the blood. The blood plasma collected after contraction of muscles contained three to four times more histamine than the control plasma sample.

Kidney Slow-Down May Bring Restless Nights

When kidney function slows down, many folks complain of nagging backache, headaches, dizziness and loss of pep and energy. Don't suffer restless nights with these discomforts if reduced kidney function is getting you down—due to such common causes as stress and strain, over-exertion or exposure to cold. Minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or wrong diet may cause getting up nights or frequent passages.

Don't neglect your kidneys if these conditions bother you. Try Doan's Pills—a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While often otherwise caused, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief from these discomforts—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

SAILER IN TROUBLE . . . Somewhere in the North Sea off England, according to S.O.S. messages this sailing ship, the Pamir, a West German craft was in serious trouble in heavy waters. The struggling vessel carries 79 men and passengers, including 49 who are merchant marine cadets. They are receiving their naval training, part of which must be the handling of this old type of ship. Tugboats were dispatched to the aid of the vessel which sent word it was at the mercy of the wind and the waves and near foundering. There was no word whether or not any of the men aboard had taken to the lifeboats.

Ike's Chances

UNLESS Gen. Dwight Eisenhower repudiates his statement of January 8, taken by his backers as a "go" sign, and returns to this country in time for a pre-convention campaign, the chances against his obtaining the GOP presidential nomination must be something like a 100-to-1 shot.

For despite all the organization work his enthusiastic supporters can do for him and his personal popularity throughout the country, the convention machinery, even down to the keynoter will be in the hands of his opposition. Convention nominations are made by the politicians and NOT by the voters. And if General Ike means what he said in his statement he will not lift a hand to obtain the nomination. Here is what he said:

"Under no circumstances will I ask for relief from this assignment in order to seek nomination for political office and I shall not participate in the pre-convention activities of others who may have such an intention with respect to me." The only loophole he leaves is that he will accept the nomination next July which he considers would be "a duty that would transcend my present responsibilities."

The only manner in which General Eisenhower would get "relief" from his present assignment would be for him to ask for relief, which he says he will NOT do under any circumstances, or for President Truman to recall him, which the President said he would NOT do unless the general asks to be relieved. So there we have an impasse.

Will He Return?

The hope of some of his backers that the general will return to this country probably in March, is born of what will be a determined effort to recall him for some such reason as testifying before a congressional committee, in an attempt to stampede him into making a definite commitment. However, those who know him best declare he will sidestep any such attempts to get him to return here in violation of his determination to stick to his job in Europe.

Indications today are that the keynoter at the GOP national convention may be none other than Gen. Douglas MacArthur, staunch supporter of Senator Taft, and no friend of General Eisenhower. Thus the convention may be treated to the spectacle of one national hero, MacArthur, pitted against the other national idol, Eisenhower, with MacArthur seeking to electrify the convention in favor of Senator Taft.

The Senate Lineup

One bit of evidence as to how the GOP politicians, who will control the convention, are lined up behind Taft and Eisenhower was the vote on the successor to the late Kenneth Wherry as GOP senate floor leader. Twenty-six senators voted for Sen. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, backed by Senator Taft, and 15 voted for Sen. Leverett Saltonstall, backed by the Eisenhower forces, led by Senator Lodge of Massachusetts and Duff of Pennsylvania.

Sen George Aiken of Vermont has raised the question of just where General Eisenhower stands on such questions as labor, agriculture, health, education, conservation and the St. Lawrence waterway And Senator Aiken is one who could be presumed to be in the Eisenhower camp. This query from Senator Aiken is likely to grow into a chant before many days have passed and General Eisenhower if he does come home, will face a veritable barrage of brickbats or, as President Truman suggested at a press conference, the rotten egg and tomato throwing of partisan politics.

Reluctant to Run

President Truman at this same press conference didn't make it any easier for Eisenhower, and fed fodder to the Taft camp when in answering a query, he opined, with a mischievous grin, that he had always thought the general was a Democrat until he read his formal January 8 statement So the general's backers have a grim campaign ahead of them without any help from their candidate, unless he reconsiders and nullifies his formal statement; unless he decides his job in Europe is ended prior to July and asks to be relieved.

More Taxes Asked

President Truman, in his annual economic message to congress, asked for a tax increase of about $5,000,000,000. However, administration leaders in both the house and senate expressed the opinion that there was little likelihood of him getting it. The President also asked for tighter price controls, a check on private spending, greater productivity, and a return to pay-as-we-go government financing in the coming year.

Two Couples Doing Great in Sports

By GRANTLAND RICE

ALONG the road known as "the cash and glory trail" there are two couples out California way who will very likely get by financially through the year ahead. They should break better than even

One is Leo Durocher and Laraine Day. The other is Ralph Kiner and Nancy Chaffee Kiner, his bride.

Durocher, the Giant leader, is picking up in the general neighborhood of $50,000. The chances are his wife, Laraine Day is doing even better. The two have been offered a fancy handout for a television skit, working together which they can't use at the moment In addition to which taxes would leave them working practically for nothing except exercise Exercise is important but a poor substitute for cash.

Grantland Rice

The two Kiners, Nancy and Ralph, are riding the top waves

Ralph is picking up $65,000 a year as the home-run hitter of both leagues. He is practically the only reason Pittsburgh fans have been coming to the Pirate park. It can be different a year or two from now when Branch Rickey begins to use his magic

Nancy Chaffee is one of the better younger tennis players we have around She happens to be an extremely charming and attractive young lady, just as Laraine Day is

The Kiners have also been offered a well-paying TV spot, but have decided to wait until next year Ralph has been building a new home at Palm Springs and it won't be any hut. The Durochers can look forward to a big season Leo is defending the National League pennant won in a miracle finish Laraine Day has all the TV engagements one young lady can handle

The Case of Ralph Kiner

Ralph Kiner is a rather remarkable young man. He is now only 29 years old He will be 30 next October He came to the Pirates in 1946 direct from the Navy Air Force and has led his league or tied for leaderships in home runs ever since He has been baseball's main slugger ever since he really got warmed up

In the last six seasons Kiner has contributed 257 home runs to the list. He will never approach Babe Ruth's total of above 700, but he should continue to lead both leagues for several years. In the last five years he has averaged between 47 and 48 homers, which isn't feather duster swinging.

Kiner is something more than a good hitter. He is also a 75 golfer and a pretty good tennis player He still can't quite handle Nancy in a tennis duel, but he is improving week by week. For that matter Nancy can't hit as many home runs as Kiner can. This should be the ideal American couple. They are young, good looking, healthy, strong and deeply interested in sports, where both excel along certain lines.

If Nancy can have the same influence over Ralph that Laraine has had over Leo, Kiner should hit 700 home runs this next season. The motion picture star and TV vision has done something of an incredible nature to Durocher since he played with the Yankees many years ago. Fiery, reckless, but still smart, almost beyond control, always a great field leader, Leo Durocher has turned into a smooth, controlled, hustling manager who has the respect and affection of his team. He gives his men all the credit—a lesson I think Chuck Dressen has learned for 1952. And I happen to be a Chuck Dressen supporter for future delivery

New Champ Under Way

Australia's Davis Cup victory was expected and it will be expected again next year as long as Frank Sedgman is hanging around the tennis premises

Just as Sedgman was on the point of leaping into pro arms, Australia got smart by giving their star a $10,000 wedding present, tax free, and also by getting him a good job in the government The twice-beaten U S will still have Trabert, Savitt and a few others next year, but they still won't be good enough to handle Australia

It can be different around two or three years from now We have just finished looking at a young kid who may easily be the best in the world, given just a little more growth.

He is close to being magnificent today His name is Michael Franks, of Beverly Hills What about Mike Franks? In the first place he has just turned 15 But a short while back, still in his 14th year, he beat the 18-year-old champion of California, regarded as a sure thing, in a morning match In the afternoon on that same day young 14-year-old Franks whipped the 18-year-old Junior Champion Why all this ballyhoo? In the first place the young star has considerable power already stored away in his youthful system. He can really powder a tennis ball In the second place he has amazing control of every stroke He can put the ball just about where he wants it. He has almost perfect style even now.

"Even in the toughest competition he is amazingly cool and calm," Feltrop says "If Mike Franks isn't world champion before he is 20, I'll never make another tennis prediction. He has everything it takes. Everything."

It's Wonderful the Way Chewing-Gum Laxative Acts Chiefly to

REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD

• Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different!

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon . . . right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes mostly waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, run-down feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self—full of life! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

Our "Cost of Living" has gone SKY HIGH, too

UP, UP and Up . . . that's the way our cost of living is going, too. The cost of wire, poles, cable and other necessary equipment has been advancing regularly by the year, and even by the month. It takes good management to handle the situation.

Taxes Are Another Major Factor That's Up

Since 1940 the taxes paid directly by Central Iowa have gone up 239%. The state and federal taxes paid by you, the customer, for telephone service have risen 314% during that same period. These sharply rising taxes are perhaps the biggest problem faced by Central Iowa.

Inflation Threatens Everyone

Everyone wants good telephone service, and they know that the price for such service is based on the cost of providing it. The figures above show how much our material costs have increased. In addition, the company has raised its employees wages 82% in the same period. Like everyone else, we have been caught in the dangerous rise of inflation that threatens us all. And like other businesses, we have been forced to pass some of these increases on to our customers, or go out of business.

EVERY COMMUNITY SERVED IS GETTING IMPROVED SERVICE

A high quality of service is what each customer wants and can expect from the telephone company serving his area. To assure this type of service, Central Iowa is investing large amounts of money in plant modernization and expansion. During the past ten years the company has spent nearly 3 million dollars in an effort to give you the best possible service, both now and in the future.

SCHOOL NEWS
This Weeks' and Last Week's

KINDERGARTEN NEWS
Merrie June Reinhart has returned to school after having the measles. Joyce Ann Bock, Janette Greimann, and Gregory Smith have been absent this week with the pink eye.

We work in our work books each day, and we like it very much. We have been working on words which start alike and words which end alike.

For Valentine's Day we have made a Post Office in which to put our Valentines. Also in our room we have some pictures of Lincoln and Washington which we have cut out.

Last week we started in our first workbook. The name of our book is "We Read Pictures." Our wookbook is about Dick, Jane and Baby Sally; their family, friends and pets. We like our workbook a great deal and enjoy working in them.

Billy Schubert has moved and is now attending a country school. We enjoyed having Billy with us and we miss him.

Roger Schmidt and Willard Netland have returned to school. Merrie June Reinhart has been absent all week.

FIRST GRADE NEWS
We are making our Valentine box. It is a valentine lady with a large heart for her head

We made hatchets and cherry branches for Washington's birthday which will be soon.

James Hrubes celebrated his 7th birthday Wed. by treating the boys and girls to candy bars.

Our room helpers were Janice Greiman and Harley Nuehring

We are making a farm in our room. We made a barn, chicken house and a house Those of us who live on a farm drew pictures of our places.

Our middle reading group has just finished their primer and will be ready to start their basic reader Monday.

Mrs. Verner Priebe was a visitor in our room Wednesday morning during reading classes.

Our room helpers this week were Jerry Evans and Nancy Guth.

Natalie Thompson has been absent this week while on a trip with her parents.

SECOND GRADE NEWS
This week a butterfly emerged from a chrysalis that Collyn Bridges brought to school when we were studying about butterflies and moths. Mrs. Proper took it home to mount it, then we compared it with pictures of butterflies in a book that Karen White brought for us to use. We found that our butterfly is a Black Swallowtail.

Jimmy Bock had a birthday this week. His mother visited us that day and brought treats for all of us.

The boys and girls having perfect spelling scores this week were Tommy Burgess, Jimmy Bock, James Christians, Collyn Bridges, Johnny Juhl, Billy Renner, Douglas Medin, Karen White, Keith Christians, Billy Hubbard, Judy Swanson, Janet Murray, Junior Baack, Leland Barz, Linda Meinders, Jimmy Clements, Jerry Murray, Terry Lassahn, Clarice Arnold and Billy Clabaugh.

The carrots in our dish garden are growing and there is a blossom on one of our narcissus bulbs. We find it very interesting to watch them grow.

The "Faries" reading group has started a new unit in reading. It is about work the year round. We are planning a bulletin board to show the work that people do in the different seasons.

THIRD GRADE NEWS
We have a new bulletin board in our room We are very happy to have it because we can use it to show our art work for special days in each month. This month we have valentines and Patriotic emblems for Washington and Lincoln.

Friday we had 12 perfect papers in spelling

We completed 3 books on Eskimos this week. We enjoyed learning Eskimo ways of living but decided we didn't want to change places of living.

Friday we completed our study of Dairy Products. We put our booklets together. On the cover we had a picture showing cows and we put the words "Dealing With Dairy Products. We had pictures and stories about milk, cream, butter, cheese and ice cream. The last page of our book was a picture of what we saw at the creamery.

Wednesday we visited the creamery and watched the work of churning butter, pasteurizing milk, washing bottles and cleaning cream cans. We learned many interesting things and we were also treated to chocolate milk. We brought some cream back to school and in Geography class we churned it into butter. Thursday we had butter on crackers in Geography class.

In Science class we have been reading about birds migrating during the seasons. We have our bulletin board full of bird pictures which we brought to show the class.

FOURTH GRADE NEWS
We have a new bar graph for arithmetic to keep scores for arithmetic tests that we take every Friday. We hope to make our graphs show an improvement each week.

Nancy Blau was a visitor in our room last Thursday.

Miss Franken began to read a new book for reading time. The name of it is "Red Feather's Adventures".

Our fourth grade made a big improvement in spelling last Friday. Twelve people received perfect scores. They were Roxanne Back, Candace Carlson, Sherryle Clabaugh, William Evans, Lowell Greiman, Miriam Hartbeck, Jo Ann Helps, Jo Anne Jacobs, Maurine Johnson Jane Renner, Roger Sobek and Richard Swalve

Monday we began studying the Sahara Desert in geography. This is the first time we studied in another continent besides Europe.

Friday for Art we began making our valentine boxes Each one of us will have our own box. We are making a heart train with our boxes and there will be 18 cars.

The B-Bar-B reading group has begun a new unit in reading. The name of the unit is "The Great Outdoors." The Eagle Feather group will begin a unit called, "Young Citizens of Other Lands."

"What a nightmare! You turned out to be Robert Taylor's uncle—and that meant he and I couldn't get married!"

KATHLEEN NORRIS

Eternal Problem

"I AM a successful business woman who wants to get married," writes Katherine Rich, of Portland, Oregon. "I'm 33, goodlooking in a lifeless sort of way, and independent. My mother, at 54, married again last year; I live with a cousin, her four little girls, her mother, her sister and the sister's little girl. And in the kitchen we have Lula and Lula's Emmy. A household of women, and I get so tired of it!

"I don't want to live alone; no smart bachelor girl stuff for me. I've tried that. My hope was to meet interesting men and make men friends, but it worked down in a few months to one man, dull, with money enough to bring ducks, caviar, wine and mushrooms up to my flat, and to smoke there in great comfort while I cooked dinner. Once when I protested that I'd like to go out now and then, he amiably asked me how often? I said, angrily, once a week, to see what he would say. He asked, what night? In a fury I said Friday, and after that he came dressed and ready on Friday, with flowers. We never went out any other time, and I never had gardenias except on Fridays.

Angry Experience

Finally, I was the one who suggested marriage. I said that we might as well be married as dine together five times a week, and feel obliged to account to each other for any nights we missed And to my lasting humiliation he was grab me in his arms . . ."

shocked beyond words. No, that would spoil everything, he said, he had been married years before, as I knew He said he wouldn't ever marry again; simple comfortable friendship for him Well, I was raging, and what I really raged at, I suppose, was that I wasn't in love with him in the least, and had felt that my suggestion was extremely generous. This experience influenced me in breaking up my apartment and joining the family.

"My cousin has been married twice once widowed, once divorced. My other cousin is divorced, and has a heavy beau. Even Tam, the oldest girl, has serious beaus at 15 They don't know, I don't let them know, that I'd almost rather have an unsuccessful marriage than be the way I am!

"You don't know how I long for a man. Doesn't that sound ridiculous, doesn't that sound like the frilled and feminine ladies of 100 years ago? But it's true. I want a man's companionship, I want to sit opposite him at breakfast, in my prettiest house dress, with sunshine coming in on the silver coffeepot. I want him to love me, grab me in his arms when he comes in at night, tell me his troubles, plan holidays with me. I want to hear him say 'my wife,' when he introduces me to his friends I want some day to tell my family that there's going to be a baby

Missed the Bus

"The years are rushing by me. How have I missed the 'bus'? At what point along the road have I put myself into the category of the superfluous smart business women? Help me In 10 years I will have reached an age when this sort of happiness is often out of reach. I've a lot to give; no woman could have had the office discipline I've survived, or have reached the position I have without developing a good deal of common sense. My relations in our mixed family have always been harmonious; I'm nice looking Here's my picture, weeding in the back yard, with a seven-year-old niece. What's the matter with me that I can't seem to find, much less interest, the right man?"

And Kate includes a snapshot of a really attractive, intelligent-looking woman in a sweater and slacks, laughing, in a garden, with a laughing small girl. Her problem is an old one, and an eternally unanswered one. What is it, in certain completely worthless young females, girls who are selfish and cold and domestically incompetent, girls who never heard of a budget, never liked a baby, girls who have made marital failures before, who have shown no affection for their families—what is it that they have that Kate hasn't?

The girl who wins a man is usually charmingly attentive and flattering when she first meets him. She may not mean it; she probably does not, but she follows his dullest lead with pretty enthusiasm She leaves him, even after that first casual meeting, with a warm sense that he really has made quite an impression on her. She tells him how domestic, how trusting, how love hungry she is, and he believes her For a long time he believes her Even when he ought to know, if he has wits at all, that marriage for her is only a springboard.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Let Family Enjoy Simple Meals in a Dish
(See Recipes Below)

WHETHER YOU'RE A PART or full time homemaker, there are many days that call for short-cut meal preparation. Perhaps you work, or perhaps you are going to be busy at club or church. Maybe you've planned to give up almost a whole day helping out a neighbor or relative.

These occasions call for meals that can be made ready in the least possible time. Simple meals, you'll find, take the least time. Meals that can be prepared in advance also help cut down last minute flurry and preparation.

Desserts for these meals can be well chilled canned fruits with cookies, provided you keep that jar well stocked.

Golden Ham Casserole
(Serves 5-6)

- 1½ to 2 cups diced, cooked ham
- 1 tablespoon vinegar
- 1 cup milk
- 2 eggs
- Salt, pepper
- 1 cup grated cheese
- 2½ cups uncooked noodles
- 1 tablespoon grated onion
- Choice of ½ cup sliced, stuffed olives, mushrooms, peas, or sliced celery

Combine milk and vinegar and let stand for a few minutes. Combine ham, slightly beaten egg, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, cheese and noodles which have been cooked in boiling, salted water until just barely tender. Add vegetable. Pour mixture into greased casserole and top with buttered crumbs. Bake in a moderate (375°F.) oven for 35 minutes.

Eggs En Casserole
(Serves 3)

- 1 can of cream of mushroom soup or
- 1¼ cups medium white sauce
- ½ teaspoon celery seed
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon black pepper
- 5 hard-cooked eggs
- 1½ cups cooked noodles
- 12 stalks cooked asparagus
- ¾ cup shredded sharp cheese
- 1 teaspoon celery seed
- Paprika

Heat soup: add salt, pepper and ½ teaspoon celery seed. Cut eggs in half lengthwise. Arrange noodles in the bottom of individual casseroles which have been buttered. Place eggs in center of noodles and arrange asparagus at the sides. Pour soup over eggs. Combine cheese with 1 teaspoon celery seed and crumble over the top; sprinkle with paprika. Bake in a moderate (350°F.) oven for 20 minutes or until heated through.

Kraut Ring with Frankfurters
(Serves 4)

- 1 No. 2½ size can sauerkraut
- 2 tablespoons melted butter
- 1 cup grated American cheese
- 1 tablespoon chopped chives
- 4-6 frankfurters

Drain juice from sauerkraut (use for vegetable cocktail, if desired) Combine sauerkraut, butter, cheese and chives. Press mixture into a greased 1-quart ring mold. Cut frankfurters crosswise into quarters and place in a baking dish Bath both the sauerkraut ring and the frankfurters in a moderate (350°F.) oven for 20 minutes. Unmold sauerkraut ring on platter and serve frankfurters in the center. If desired, make this sauce for the frankfurters combine 1 can of tomato soup, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon grated onion, 2 teaspoons parsley and ½ cup water in a saucepan. Simmer for 5 minutes and pour over frankfurters to serve.

Creole Liver and Noodles
(Serves 4)

- 2 slices bacon, cut in 1-inch pieces
- ½ onion, sliced thin
- 2 tablespoons cooking fat
- ¾ pound sliced liver, cut in 1-inch squares
- 1 tablespoon flour
- ¼ cup chopped green pepper
- ¾ cup diced celery
- 1½ cups tomato juice
- 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper

- 8 ounces noodles
- ¼ cup melted butter or substitute
- ½ teaspoon salt

Brown bacon and onion lightly in fat. Remove browned pieces from pan. Dredge liver with flour and brown in fat. Add bacon, onion, green pepper, celery, tomato juice, pimiento and seasonings. Cover and simmer for 20 minutes. Cook noodles in boiling, salted water for 10 minutes. Drain and combine with melted butter and salt. Arrange noodles around the edges of a platter and fill center with liver mixture.

*Individual Kidney Pies
(Serves 4)

- 2 beef kidneys
- Flour
- 2 tablespoons fat
- 3 cups water
- Small piece of bay leaf
- ½ cup diced celery
- 4 carrots
- 4 onions, sliced
- 4 potatoes, quartered
- 2 teaspoons salt
- Pepper

Remove fibrous tubes from kidneys; cut kidneys into 2-inch cubes. Soak ½ hour in cold water to cover. Drain well; dredge with flour and brown in fat. Add water and bay leaf. Cover and bring to boiling, then cook slowly for 25 minutes. Add vegetables, salt and pepper and cook for 20 minutes longer. Thicken gravy with 3 tablespoons flour blended with 3 tablespoons cold water. Divide into four casseroles. Cover with the following pastry: 1½ cups sifted flour sifted with 1 teaspoon salt. Cut in ½ cup shortening and add 3 to 4 tablespoons of water to hold mixture together. Bake casseroles 25 minutes at 450°F.

LYNN SAYS:

Keep Sandwich Spreads Full of Flavor

Simple tricks can make any sandwich, no matter how small or large, more tempting and easy to eat.

If you like an all-vegetable filling as a sandwich start with ¼ cup of salad dressing and add to it 1½ cups of one of the following: carrots, beans, peas or lima beans. Then blend in ⅓ cup of one of these: parsley, watercress, celery leaves, onion or green pepper.

If you're a bit shy on meat for sandwiches, add some chopped hard-cooked eggs to the filling to extend and flavor it.

Roast pork is bland in flavor but it makes a good sandwich when you spread it with a small amount of barbecue sauce.

Cooked salad dressing can be used as a base for meat and vegetable fillings. To ½ cup of dressing add 1½ cups of coarsely chopped meat, fish, fowl, cheese or eggs. Then blend in ½ cup of chopped vegetable.

Homes for Christ

Lesson for February 17, 1952

WHAT is a Christian home? It is no solemn place, for "solemn" is not another word for "Christian." It is not an "American" home because while Christians can be Americans, and vice versa, the two words do not mean the same thing Sending off the little ones to Sunday school every Sunday morning, or even piling the whole family into the car and going to church 52 times a year, will not quite do it. For church-going is only one part, and the easiest part, of being Christian. What about the rest of the week?

Does Jesus Get Beyond the Front Door?

THE home of Mary, Martha and Lazarus, where Jesus often visited, we can think of as in many ways a Christian home Jesus was welcome there, he dropped in any time, he felt at home

Now Christ is most at home (as any one is) where people are congenial, where the attitude to the things men live by—work, play, love, worship—is the same as his attitude.

Also in the Bethany home they listened to Jesus. It is well to have a Bible in the house, but that alone will not make it Christian. Is it read? Do the children when growing up hear the words of Jesus from the Gospels? Do they hear his voice as often as they hear the voice of Mr Cassidy or the Lone Ranger?

How the Home Can Serve

THERE are three ways in which the home of today can serve Christ. One is in connection with the church. Except in rarest cases, every Christian home should be an actual part of some Christian church. A church which has no cooperation from the homes in its community will be a dying church.

The livest churches, on the other hand, are those where homes and church do the best team-work. To take only one example: Does your home work together with your church in the recruiting of ministers?

Ministers have to come from somewhere, and the best ministers don't all come from preachers' homes by any means. How about the boys in your home? If one of them felt an urge to be a minister or a missionary, would the rest of you laugh him out of it?

Another way for the home to serve Christ is in treatment of strangers. When strangers move into your community, or live there for a short time as school teachers sometimes do, is your home open to them? Is your house a "home away from home" for lonely people?

When you have a party, do you invite always only those who can invite you back, or do you (as Jesus suggested) include people who will probably never be able to repay you? A home that prides itself on being "exclusive" has forgotten Jesus' words—"I was a stranger, and ye took me not in."

Serving the Children

A Christian home, moreover, will serve its own children in Christ's name. In it children will hear about Christ, not as a past figure in history but as a Living One. Parents will teach them Christian patterns of living.

This will not be merely something they hear about in Sunday school, it will be the pattern of life in which they are trained from day to day, beginning even before they can remember. This home, if it serves its children as it should, will show them how to help Christ. The children will know about the church ("His body," said Paul) and what it is doing in his name around the world. From their earliest years they will be helpers in this work. They will not grow up thinking of "missions" in some vague way, but they will know and be thrilled by the great story which that single word carries

And the children in a Christian home will be helped by Jesus far more than they help him. Even at the beginning of childhood they will learn to say "Dear Jesus, help me," when the mean word or the angry act are just almost exploding. Even as children they will learn something of what in older years will mean much more, the "practice of His presence."

But no one can learn from the ignorant. And children will never learn these things at home without help. A home does not begin to be Christian with the children, but with the parents. Whatever good the children learn, father and mother must learn it first.

Truman Submits Record 'Peacetime' Budget of $85 Billion to Congress

THE BUDGET—"A heavy burden . . . the price of peace" With these words President Truman attempted to describe his proposed budget of $85,444,000,000 for the fiscal year which begins July 1. This amount does not include a five to six billion dollar atomic energy expansion program which the President said would be sent to congress in the near future.

This proposed budget is an increase of almost $15,000,000,000 over the current fiscal year which ends June 30. And it is not far from the record World War II spending of $100 billion in the 1945 fiscal year

As outlined by the President, more than three-fourths of the total would go for national security programs, including $51,100,000,000 for the armed forces, $10,800,000,000 for foreign aid, $1,700,000,000 for atomic weapons, $811,000 000 for defense production and economic stabilization, and $339,000,000 for civil defense.

The military expansion program, as outlined by the President, would include increasing the armed forces from 3,600,000 to 3,700,000 men, the Air Forces from 90 wings to 143, increase the Army's 19 divisions to 21, add another 16 major combatant vessels to the Navy's 392, build up to 16 large carrier air groups, and increase the Marine Corps from two to three divisions.

All of this, of course, is the proposed plan, depending upon approval of congress. At this point that approval is unlikely, because it would mean another increase in taxation.

Adoption of this budget would mean a deficit of $14,446,000,000 for the next fiscal year unless congress approved the $5,000,000,000 tax increase already requested by the President. But this is an election year and congress will be even more economically minded than in the past.

Congressional debate over this proposed budget during the next few weeks is likely to be bitter And it will end with congress slashing it as much as possible. At the present moment there is no indication of how much they will cut it. The defense items may be cut some, but the greatest slashes will be foreign aid and less necessary domestic items.

MISSION ACCOMPLISHED—Aging but still dynamic Winston Churchill accomplished his mission to the United States. That mission can be best summed up in his own words as he concluded his speech before a joint session of congress.

He said: "Bismarck once said that the supreme fact of the 19th century was that Britain and the United States spoke the same language. Let us make sure that the supreme fact of the 20th century is that they tread the same path"

It was the third time in a decade that Churchill had addressed a joint session of congress. His speech was well received and it was evident he had accomplished much in bringing about greater cooperation between his country and the United States. Announcements of policy agreements, the transfer of vital materials from one nation to the other, and accord on military matters in Europe after a series of meetings with President Truman and other high officials, also indicated the successfulness of his mission.

The British leader also promised that Britain would help defend Western Europe against Soviet aggression. And he cautioned the United States "above all things" not to give up its atomic weapons without an iron-clad guarantee of peace.

FARM PROGRAM—The federal farm programs, of vital interest to home towns across the nation, will cost approximately 7 per cent more next year because of a government need to encourage greater crop and livestock production, President Truman said in his budget message to congress.

According to best estimates the greatest part of the cost would be for price supports, soil-conservation payments, and wheat-export subsidies.

The President reported the price-support program is being used to encourage farm production by keeping support prices of cotton, corn, wheat, soybeans, milk, wool, and several other commodities at 90 per cent of parity.

The budget calls for $256,500,000 for payments to farmers who carry out approved soil and water conservation practices, $70,000,000 for subsidies to farmers who co-operate with the government's sugar-control program, $182,000,000 for wheat export subsidies, and $75,000,000 for rural telephone and electrification loans.

EGYPT—The killing of an American nun in the Suez canal zone brought the conflict between Great Britain and Egypt for control of that vital waterway into sharp focus for most of this country. She was identified as Brigitte Ann Timbers, 52, of New York. She had served in Egypt since 1947.

The British charge Sister Anthony was slain by Egyptian terrorists. Cairo newspapers, however, said she was killed by British bullets. She was slain during a four hour battle between British soldiers and terrorists.

KOREA—Another week dragged by and still no important progress was reported in the Korea peace talks. The United Nations command did offer to reconsider an important phase of its armistice prisoner-exchange demands if the Communists would say how many civilians they intend to return to South Korea. In effect, the U.N dropped its demand for an equal one-for-one exchange of Red prisoners.

There was no progress on the airfield question that has been holding up negotiations. The Reds insist on rehabilitation of airfields during an armistice. The U.N. command has opposed it.

Meanwhile, at home, Senator Taft called the Korean War unnecessary and useless and said it could have been prevented if the United States had stayed in Korea and rearmed the South Koreans after World War II.

He also said he would make a truce in Korea if he were President because "even a stalemate truce is better than a stalemate war."

Gov. Earl Warren of California, a "native son" candidate for the GOP presidential nomination, may be the key to the coming national convention. Should he throw his influence to either Taft or Eisenhower it could be decisive for that candidate. If the two top men should become deadlocked, he could be the compromise candidate. He is shown here talking to Guy Gabrielson, GOP National Committee chairman. Mayor Elmer Robinson of San Francisco stands behind them.

U.S. BABY BOOM

Population Increases 2.5 Millions Yearly

According to a statistical bulletin issued by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, the United States may soon break all world's records in population growth. Americans are being born at the rate of 26,000,000 and more each 10 years. It is estimated that by 1962 there will be 181,500,000 of us.

Births in the United States set an all-time record of more than 3,900,000 last year. After subtracting the deaths, the gain amounts to 2,650,000. This reflects, the report said, the increase in marriages after the start of the Korean War.

There is a general trend to break away from the one-or-two-child family that prevailed before World War II, the report adds. Also, there is a general trend in the United States toward earlier marriages.

Iowa Adopts A Weed

Believe it or not, Iowa farmers used to think sweet clover was a weed.

Then someone discovered that sweet clover puts nitrogen into the soil . . . and also makes good pasture.

A lot of open-minded farmers gave it a trial . . . and today sweet clover is one of our most valuable plants.

It's little things like that which give a pointer to Iowa's farm leadership . . . our open-mindedness for all types of ideas, and our willingness to consider the other fellow's ideas and point of view.

Hybrid corn is another example, or the adoption of corn pickers, or scores of other things. Of course the farmer who prefers to hand pick his corn can stick to his choice, too. That's the Iowa way . . . whether in choosing farming methods, or a simple choice such as a temperate glass of beer over pop or ginger ale.

Yes, Iowa is a progressive state, because we have room here for all the varied ideas and tastes of a great people.

Klemme Creamery In Good Condition, Report Shows

OVERALL CONDITION OF THE LOCAL PLANT IS VERY ENCOURAGING

Past Year Showed Good Operating Profit At Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of directors, officers and patrons of the Klemme Cooperative Creamery Company was held Saturday afternoon with a fairly good attendance of dairy farmers present.

Mr. Leo Benson, of the State Brand Creameries, was the principle speaker He pointed out that the Klemme plant ranked well up in the top bracket with creameries in North Iowa as far as financial stability and good management was concerned.

With a number of creameries around the state "folding up" during the past year it is good to know that the local plant is operating on a good financial basis and is making a profit for the patrons.

During the past year the Klemme Creamery manufactured butter valued at over $195,000. A net profit, which represents dividends to the patrons amounted to $4,758.20 after all ouerating costs payments for butterfat and other expenses were deducted.

In adition, the local creamery has some very good investments which is as good as money in the bank. There total investments are carried on the books at $10,750.79, although the actual value would run closer to $15,000. Their total assets run close to $45,000.

The overall picture of the financial condition of the local creamery is good and should encourage more farmers in this territory to get into the dairying business and get behind their creamery.

Election Held

Along with the other business brought up, the annual election was held with Mitchell Bock, Cecil Katter and Clarence Lenz being re-elected directors. Others on the board are Alvin Goll, President; F. W. Klinge, Vice-president, Elmer Beier, secretary, and the other board members are Melvin Buseman, Bob Hinman and Ed Thieman.

Employees at the plant are Ken Medin, manager, George Buseman and Harvey Barkema Haulers are Quentin Stille, Wayne Buseman and Eugene Beier.

Will Install Homogenizer

It was pointed out that the milk and cream business at the creamery is expanding and that the board has ordered a new homogenizing machine to further increase the service offered milk and cream patrons At present the creamery is equipped with modern pasteurizing equipment, bottling equipment and with the use of the new homogenizer, the equipment will be complete.

"PETE" KILGORE LEASES BALANCE OF ROSENDAHL BUILDING

"Pete" Kilgore is now in possession of all of the Rosendahl building since last week. "Pete" had the front part of the building leased for his filling station, but now has all of the building.

He expects to use the back part of the building for storage and also later will increase his services by having better facilities for washing, waxing and polishing cars. He does not intend to do repair work in the back shop.

Mr. Rosendahl, who had intended to open a repair shop in the building has given up the idea and is going into the trucking business and has purchased a large modern truck for that purpose.

Letter From The Chamber's

Mr. and Mrs. John Chambers are enjoying their stay in Hawaii. She says the Island is beautiful and the ocean noise is real. She speaks about the "Banyon Trees." They have enjoyed the Hawaiin band concert, not so fond of the Hula dancers but the little girls are real cute doing the Hula. They visited Pearl Harbor and had dinner with the Frank Gibbs family. who have a lovely home there. She says they met a Mrs. Henke from Charles City, Iowa who knows the Lee Anderson family. The Pali road is a must here. A lovely road over a 1200 foot mountain. It was being made in 1897, when Mr. Chambers' bro. was out there There is lots of legends and history to the real Hawaiian people. Lots of Chinese and Japanese there They were planing on visiting the Dole Pineapple cannery before leaving. Mrs. Chambers says they are enjoying the Klemme Times and will be glad to get home. All is fun but, to live and work, give me Iowa.

THE FARM OUTLOOK

By Paul Henderson, County Extension Director

Iowa farmers sold 55% more hens during the first 5 weeks of this year than during the same period of 1951, according to Francis A. Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist.

Egg prices are lower than a year ago; feed cost are higher. The resulting squeeze on poultry profits has brought closer culling of laying flocks. Tests show that it pays to feed hens for full production at all times But when egg prices are low compared with feed costs, you have to be tough in culling out the poor layers.

Advises Culling Flock

If you are getting below 50% production from your hens, it is time to give the flock a culling. In fact, in view of the current egg-feed price ratio a goal of 60% would be better to shoot at.

Kutish points out other reasons behind the current heavy movement of hens to market. March 1 moving time is near. With egg profits below last year, many tenants are selling their flocks rather than run the risk of throwing them into a molt by shifting them to a new laying house.

Then, too, a growing number of Iowa farmers are raising early chicks to cash in on the good egg prices that prevail during late summer and early fall. Pullets which started to lay during last July of August are ready for sale or a heavy culling by this time.

Finally, there has been some liquidation of poultry flocks—although poultry buyers say it has not been widespread.

Fewer Chicks Hatched

Several hatcheries now hatching chicks in Iowa report their business is not quite as good as a year ago. But the big efect of the narrow egg-feed ratio probably will not show up in baby chick sales before spring If egg profits have not improved by spring, April and May chick sales will be down sharply from last year. Some hatcheries report a definite drop in bookings on chicks for spring delivery.

While Kutish says the present squeeze between egg prices and feed costs should cause farmers to cull their flocks closely, he doesn't consider it a good guage for setting the number of baby chicks to buy this spring.

Look Ahead When Ordering Chicks

Farmers should base their baby chick orders on what they think the outlook for egg profits will be next fall and winter—not what the situation is today. For egg prices and feed costs then will be the governing factors on whether hens will pay better a year from now.

Kutish believes the odds are better than even that we will have a bigger corn crop in 1952 than we pickid last fall. This would mean lower feed costs a year from now. And there is every indication that fewer pullets will be hatched this spring. So that means lower egg production—and higher prices for eggs next winter.

Put it all together and it spells a better egg outlook for next year—especially for Febrary and March chicks which will begin laying in late summer when egg prices are going up.

HOWARD HUFF SALE POSTPONED TO SATURDAY

Because of the blizzard on Tuesday, Howard Huff postponed his closing out farm sale until Saturday of this week.

Last week Mr. Huff postponed his sale because of a death in his immediate family. It is hoped that the weather will be good Saturday so that he can go ahead with the sale as orginally planned.

If there's a trusting traveler left in the world today, it's the youngster who sets out through the early morning neighborhoods on his way to school.

With the lunch bucket in his hand and the books under his arm he is really a traveler, bound on a longer journey then he knows

He is on his small way into life, into the years of change. But his is still a trusting spirit. He trusts that the happy neighborhood-will never change He believes that all things are what they seem to be or what they should be.

When he comes to the streets near the school, he trusts that drivers will stop for the school stop sign. He believes drivers will stop because he believes things are as they should be

When you are driving near a school, watch for the trusting travelers. Stop for school stop signs. Don't be the one who didn't stop.

OBITUARY OF SARAH C. BEHRINGER

Sarah C. Behringer, 85, died Tuesday morning February 12th 1952, after a long illness at the home of her daughter and son-in-law Florence and Howard Wiles, 527 Grove Street, Waukesha, Wisconsin.

She was born November 22nd, 1866 at Peoria, Illinois, one of a family of seven children born to her parents Frederick and Barbara Hartfelder.

On October 5th 1881, Sarah Hartfelder and Phillip Behringer were married at Lanark, Illinois Shortly thereafter they moved to a farm near Parkersburg, Ia. After nine years they moved again to what is now the Helps farm in Avery Township, near Klemme for several years.

Sarah and Phillip Behringer loved children. They were the parents of two, and two others were adopted and two more were give a home without adoption. And thus they generously provided a home for a total of six children. An infant daughter, Maggie, died April 1, 1905 and was buried on the Grosz lot in Amsterdam Cemetery. An adopted daughter, Ima, Mrs. Elmer Fuller died May 30, 1940 and was buried in the Klemme Cemetery. An adopted son, Harry, survives and lives in Portland, Oregon. Their youngest daughter, Florence survives and lives in Waukesha, Wisconsin.

The husband Phillip Behringer died October 1, 1921 and was buried in the Klemme Cemetery

Since 1924, Sarah C. Behringer has been making her home with Florence and Howard Wiles.

The Behringer's were members of the Methodist church and Mrs. Sarah Behringer enjoyed teaching a Sunday School Class. She was a quiet and capable member of the church and was not a trouble maker.

She lived to a ripe old age, and then gradually faded away.

Her age was 85 years, 2 months and 20 days.

She leaves of her immediate family: besides Harry and Florence mentioned above one granddaughter, Mrs. Fred Brown, Waukesha, Wisconsin, one bro., Conrad Hartfelder, Elk River, Minnesota and other more distant relatives and friends.

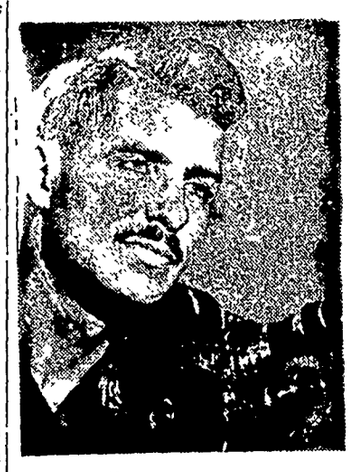
AL BELL TO SPEAK IN GOODELL FEB. 25

Al Bell, world traveler and widely known in Iowa for his humorous travel talks and excellent color films will appear at the Goodell Community Hall, Monday, February 25, 8:00 p. m., sponsored by P. T. A. of Goodell Public School.



Mr. Bell, who spoke in Goodell last year on Scandinavia, spent two months this past summer in the Central American countries of Guatemala, El Salvador, British Honduras, Nicaragua and Costa Rica.

The film includes scenes from a journey to a Gutemalan coffee farm, Indian weavers and doll makers at work, ceremonial dancing, Witch doctors, market day at Chichicastenango, the Mircale of Suyapa in British Honduras, a jungle hunt in Guatemala and an extended trek into the wilds of Nicaraga.

This years audience will not only see the tropical birds, reptiles and jungle animals, but be able to hear the shriek of the Mackaws, the chatter of the monkeys the hiss of the Boa-Constrictors and many other sounds.

During his lecture, Mr. Bell will show many articles used by the natives, including an Indian hand loom, Mayan weaving machetes, ceremonial masks, clay figurines, and A REAL live Pizote captured in the jungles of Nicaragua Resembling an anteater, raccoon and monkey, this little animal's antics will delight everyone.

To quote Reis Tuttle, Outdoor Editor, Des Moines Register & Tribune, who attended the premier of Mr. Bell's new picture; "Your film on central America is intensely interesting, both from an educational standpoint and that of a sportsman. I learned much from Tropic Sons."

Jr. High Splits Doubleheader

The Klemme Junior High girls team won their 10th game of the year agaist Ventura on February 11. The score of the game was 18-8. The game was very poorly played by both teams We had beaten them previously 42-18. Carol Bridges was high with 16 points while JoEllen Clabaugh had 2 points. Our record now is 10 wins and 3 losses.

Coach Juhl's boys almost came through but lost 27-22. The game was tied about 7 times until the last few seconds when Ventura went ahead. The Ventura boys had a height advantage over us which enabled them to get the jump on us.

Donald Kramer was the star of this game and he was high with 15 points, Brinkman had 3 points(Larsen 2 and Terhufen 2. Haefner was held scoreless.

Halftime score was 9-9 and 15-18 at the 3rd quarter. Our record now stands at 5 wins and 8 losses.

Wednesday Evening Club

The Wednesday evening bridge club met with Mrs. Franklin Cappon. Mrs. John Etchen and Mrs. Orvel Bridges won high and low prizes. A nice lunch was served.

Bulldogs Struck Back After Trailing 15-0 In First Quarter

The fans got their money's worth Tuesday evening in the sectional class B tournament at Clear Lake Monday night when they saw the Klemme Shamrocks and the Kanawha Bulldogs in action.

Klemme jumped into a 15-0 lead in the first quarter before Kanawha could get their shooting eye working. The boys from the west whittled it down to 20-10 at the half, and from there on out it was definitely a Kanawha come-back as they kept narrowing the margin. Klemme was ahead 30-24 at the end of the third quarter and the Bulldogs tied it in the last quarter, got a two point lead and then stalled it out to win 37-35.

They will meet the powerful Holy Family in the semi-final on Friday evening.

SENIOR CLASS PLAY TO BE HELD MARCH 19

The seniors have selected their class play which will be, "You Can't Take It With You:" It will be given March 19th. This play is a comedy which has been put on Broadway.

The scene of the play takes place in the home of Martin Vanderhof, just around the corner from Columbia University, but don't go looking for it. The setting is what is customairly described as a living room, but in this house the term is something of an understatement.

The every-man-for-himself would be more like it. For here meals are eaten, plays are written, snakes collected, ballet steps practiced, records played, printing presses operated—if there were room enough there would probably be ice skating. In short, the brood presided over by Martin Vanderhof goes on about the business of living in the fullest sense of the word. From Grandpa Vanderhof, they are individualists. This is a house where you can do as you like, and no questions asked.

LAWRENCE GREIMAN PURCHASED SAW MILL FROM KATTERS AT GARNER

Lawrence Greiman some time ago purchased the saw mill business at Garner from the Katters who had operated it for several years.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Greiman and family will move to Klemme from the W. H. Grieman farm north of Klemme, having rented the Henry Josten place in the northwest part of Klemme.

We understand that Greiman will move part of the plant to Klemme and will operate the large saw at the Josten place.

Most of the machines will be left at Garner where the manufacture of poultry coops is one of the main projects.

Marital Swap

NOTHING that ever happens to a married woman is quite as fascinating as an unexpected love affair

When, at the club lunch or cocktail party, some new man pays her sudden attention, murmurs significant nothings to her, promises her a certain book, asks if she might have time some day this week to let him show her the loan exhibition, her whole life takes on new color, and Peggy goes home on air.

It may be Amy's husband—quiet old Tom, of all people! Or it may be the good-looking naval commander who is Lucie's cousin.

Peggy is Amy's best friend, and Tom is Amy's husband; that doesn't matter. And the commander has twice been divorced for mental cruelty. That doesn't matter either. Peggy's own husband is nice enough, too, but Lee is dull, after 12 years of wedlock. Reason, experience, loyalty, duty have all gone overboard; they had nothing to do with the thrill, the excitement that Peggy feels.

Each Man Dull

And if the affair develops, and foes far enough, she gets a divorce, and goes right on to find another man faulty, unreasonable, dull, unsatisfactory in his turn. She says (1) that quarreling is bad for children, (2) that why not have two persons happy instead of four miserable, and (3) that lots of people have always thought Lee was queer.

Four young persons in an eastern city recently went through these experiences simultaneously. One gets used, these days, to a good deal of marital shifting, but I've never heard of anything quite like this.

". . . some new man . . ."

The Beagles and the Yeagles—call them that—moved into adjoining homes, in a sparsely settled district. At first sight, it appears, Mrs Yeagle and Mr Beagle fell in love, and were smitten with the conviction that they were destined for each other The Yeagles have four children, the Beagles three, all seven very young After awhile Mrs. Beagle and Mr. Yeagle also discovered the grand passion, and the four met and discussed the situation. They took what seemed to them "the honorable way," and after divorces on grounds of mental cruelty, Mr. Beagle went next door, to be stepfather to the Yeagle children, and Mr Yeagle reversed the process One husband works in a garage, the other in a grocery. They are plain, unpretentious folk, and they claim that they wanted to do what was right.

Now apart from the guileless stupidity of four persons who could think that any possible happiness or security could follow this extraordinary performance, and apart from any moral consideration, can any woman imagine a situation more filled with utter confusion, and eventual misery? Both fathers surrendered their children; two mothers declaring that they could not "have drawn a breath" without their children.

New Daddy

So to four bewildered children the familiar Daddy of the children with whom they played every day presently took his place as their new guardian, and to the children next door an equally strange new Daddy appeared. The oldest of all seven children is hardly more than 10, the youngest a mere infant.

How strange will be the situation when the inevitable nursery crises of spanks and spills and wet didies and sour bottles and coughs and colds set in, with Mother in her nightgown trying to combine the ecstasies of the grand passion with the claims of her children, perfectly aware that the children's rightful father, a hundred feet away in another house, is facing the troubles of a different bunch of babies—and that the rightful father of those babies is right here in her room with her!

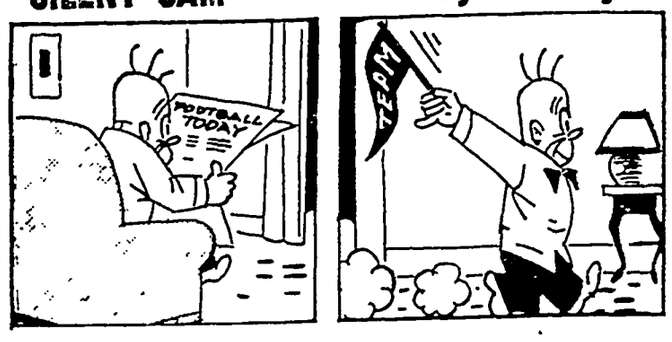
I knew of a similar case of changed partners, years ago, but that took place after an all-night drinking bout in Europe, between rich persons who thought it would be a great joke The joke turned out pretty sourly, with one divorce, one suicide—a minor's—and one lawsuit, in the years that followed

But these other four, just how high will they have to pay for the simple vanity and selfishness that brought on all this talk of sudden passionate love, talk of which most high-school girls would be ashamed? Just what is each woman getting out of the decision of those fluttered weeks when it seemed to both women just too breath-takingly romantic that a new man—a man quite unlike good, tiresome Harry or humdrum Van, should actually want to make a change? It is really pitiful to think about the inevitable squabbles.

JEST JESTIN'

SILENT SAM

By Jeff Hayes



Two Scotchmen were out hunting deer. One of them was new at the game, and as they had gotten into rather a tight place, the tension was high. All of a sudden, a fine big moose stepped into the clearing.

Sandy was terribly startled as he had never seen such a fine, big animal before, and he cried, "Oh, Jock, look, what'd you call that?"

Jock replied, "Why, mon, that's a moose."

"Well," said Sandy with a sickly laugh. "If that's a moose I don't keer to see a rat."

Team Pancakes with Rosy Scrambled Eggs
(See Recipes Below)

Serve Pancakes

STACK THEM FOR breakfast, luncheon, dinner or supper—pancakes, of course! These versatile cakes, made thick or thin according to your taste will go to any meal.

Make them plain for the morning and serve with breakfast meats, plenty of syrup. Then, if you like pancakes as a main dish, add eggs or meat to the menu to serve as an accompaniment. With very sweet sauces, whipped cream, confectioners' sugar, berries or fruit or jelly, pancakes make a lovely but simple dessert.

Have your griddle so hot that drops of water will skip around on it. It takes only a few seconds to brown one side of the cake and have it puffy and full of bubbles when the griddle's properly heated. Before the bubbles break, turn the pancakes, if you want them light.

Pancakes are easily made thick or thin by adjusting the liquid in the batter. Have them to your taste!

Here's a dish that goes to breakfast, luncheon, supper or snack with equal ease:

Pancakes, Rosy Scrambled Eggs
(Serves 7-8)

Pancakes:
- 2 cups pancake ready-mix
- 2 cups milk

Scrambled Eggs:
- 6 eggs
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 2 tablespoons butter or substitute
- 1½ cups well drained, canned whole tomatoes

Add milk to unsifted ready-mix all at once and stir lightly. Somewhat lumpy batter makes light, fluffy cakes. Pour ¼ cup batter for each pancake onto a hot, lightly-greased griddle. Bake to a golden brown, turning once. Keep pancakes hot in the oven while making scrambled eggs.

To make scrambled eggs, beat eggs, salt and pepper with a rotary egg beater until foamy. Melt butter in frying pan; add eggs and cook over low heat until eggs are thickened but still moist. Cut tomatoes in wedges and fold into eggs.

To serve, put two pancakes together sandwich fashion with scrambled eggs between and over the top.

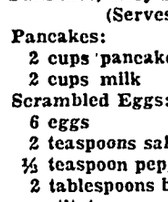
Here are pancakes that are served with sausage, but this is a bit unusual for the sausage is used for a spicy sauce which is spooned between the cakes:



Spicy Meat-Filled Pancakes
(Makes 14-16 Pancakes)

Sauce:
- 1 pound pork sausage meat
- ½ cup chopped onion
- ½ cup chopped celery
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 1 cup tomato juice
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon brown sugar

Pancakes:
- 2 cups pancake ready-mix
- 2 cups milk

To make sauce, brown pork sausage meat slowly; pour off fat. Add vegetables to meat and brown lightly. Stir in flour. Add remaining ingredients and combine thoroughly. Cover and cook slowly for one-half hour.

For pancakes, add milk to ready-mix all at once and stir lightly. Bake on lightly greased griddle, using ¼ cup batter for each cake, turning only once. Put two or three pancakes together with sauce between and over them.

Those who like old-fashioned buckwheat cakes for breakfast will enjoy these which can be set in the evening for rising overnight. Since the recipe makes a large quantity, all the batter need not be used at once, but may be kept in a cool place.

Buckwheat Cakes
(Makes 24 cakes)
- 1 cake compressed or 1 package dry yeast
- 3 tablespoons molasses
- 2½ cups lukewarm water
- 1 cup milk
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- 2 cups buckwheat flour
- 1 cup sifted white flour

Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water; when thoroughly dissolved, add molasses. Scald milk, add salt and cool to lukewarm. Add yeast, then stir in buckwheat and white flour gradually. Beat until smooth. Cover and let rise in a warm place overnight. Stir down and bake on hot, greased griddle. If some batter is kept for later use, add to it ½ teaspoon soda before using.

* * *

Pancakes for dessert should be small and thin. You'll want to use several for each serving, of course. Here's a recipe that makes them thin, tender and delicious:

Dessert Pancakes
(Makes 30 3-inch cakes)
- 1 cup milk
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 eggs, beaten
- ¼ cup sifted flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt

Heat together milk and butter in a saucepan. When slightly cooled, beat in eggs, flour, baking powder and salt. Beat until smooth. Bake in a small skillet, pouring some batter in lightly greased pan and tilting to cover the bottom evenly. Cook for one minute, then turn and cook other side until lightly browned. These pancakes may have to be turned several times to brown them evenly.

Honey Sauce for Pancakes
(Makes 1½ cups)
- 1 cup strained honey
- ½ cup maple syrup
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon

Mix together honey and syrup in top of double boiler. When thoroughly heated, remove from fire and blend in cinnamon. Serve hot over dessert pancakes.

LYNN SAYS:
Here are Baking Tips That Assure Success

Pastry and biscuits will brown more readily if they are brushed lightly with milk before baking. Pies will be attractive if they're sprinkled with a bit of granulated sugar after brushing with milk.

Prevent berry pies from running over by not having too much juice in the pie if canned berries are used. For fresh berries, dust them lightly with flour before placing in the crust.

Custards will not be so watery if they're baked in a pan of water which will help keep the baking temperature more moderate.

If you want cakes and breads to rise well, do not grease the sides of the pan in which they're being baked.

Freshen your muffins, biscuits and rolls in the oven by placing them in one pan which is then placed in a pan of water and let heat through. The steam from the water will prevent them from drying too much.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Young Girls Need Secrets

By Lawrence Gould

Do young girls need to have "secrets"?

Answer: Yes, writes Dr. Helene Deutsch in "The Psychology of Women." The typical girl of twelve or thereabouts finds another girl of her own age "with whom she giggles and titters, with whom she locks herself up in her room and to whom she confides her 'secrets.'" These are not especially important in themselves—what matters is that they are things which grown-ups, and especially her mother, don't know. The urge to have secrets is an effort to get even for all that the child feels was kept secret from her — for instance, the fact that mother was expecting a new baby —as well as a step toward independence.

Must "heart trouble" keep you idle?

Answer: Probably not. According to Dr. Theodore G. Klumpp of the Office of Defense Mobilization, the nation's defense needs will require the employment of a million and a half more "handicapped" workers, and many of these may be sufferers from "heart disease" in one form or another. To meet this demand, the American Heart Association has developed "work classification units" in which you may find out, on the basis of medical diagnosis, for what and how much work you are fitted and where such work may be found. If there is a heart association in your city, find out from it how you can acquire a new interest in life.

Can "preference tests" be faked?

Answer: Yes, says psychologist Orrin H. Cross of the University of Alabama. These tests—which attempt to show the sort of person you are and which are used by prospective employers—can be easily faked by anyone who wants to do so. The high and low scoring individuals in a group of high school students who had taken one of these tests were told to repeat it and to "fake" an interest in the opposite direction from their real one, and a similar experiment was made with college students. The results show that if an applicant knows what kind of job he is being tested for, he can easily fake his answers if he pleases.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Antabuse Helps Alcoholic Recover

By Dr. James W. Barton

MOST RESEARCH WORKERS on alcoholism believe that the method used by Alcoholics Anonymous to cure the patient is the best method, because the alcoholic admits his need of help and prays daily for it. There are some alcoholics who will not admit this need and stumble along as periodic drinkers. It is in these cases that the drug antabuse may be effective because antabuse gives the alcoholic chemical insurance against taking that first drink—the drink that may lead to a disastrous binge. Thus, antabuse builds a chemical fence around the alcoholic.

At a meeting held under the auspices of the New York medical committee on alcoholism, the manufacturers of antabuse in this country reported that the drug has been tested in more than 100 clinics in the United States and Canada by more than 800 qualified physicians and with more than 5,000 patients. "Using antabuse, 50 per cent of these alcoholics have achieved permanent abstinence; another 25 per cent made basic improvement, the condition necessary for rehabilitation."

Antabuse compels the patient to remain sober as long as he continues to take the drug. The very fact that the alcoholic takes the drug shows that he wants to be cured. Since he takes antabuse and thus remains sober, the doctor has his real chance to discuss the matter with the patient and learn his problems. "Excessive drinking is always a symptom of some underlying disturbance which may be medical or social or emotional or, more often, all three combined."

Having stopped the drinking, it can be learned why the patient started to drink excessively in the first place. "This can be deep psychoanalysis, psycho or emotional treatment, group treatment, medical rehabilitation, and a firm contact with Alcoholics Anonymous."

Antabuse is a small white tablet taken by mouth.

Another way to Save with CLABBER GIRL

Here is a novel and economical way to stretch left-over ham into a lunch or dinner main dish . . . a real taste treat and so easy to prepare . . . Notice how Clabber Girl gives leavening that is "just right" even when coarsening caraway seeds are used to spark up the flavor.

Pound for pound, more people use more Clabber Girl than any other Baking Powder.

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

Biscuit:
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
2½ teaspoons Clabber Girl Baking Powder
½ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons caraway seed
6 tablespoons shortening
¾ cup milk

Ham Filling:
2 cups cooked, ground ham
¼ cup pickle relish
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
¼ cup gravy or brown cream sauce

BISCUIT: Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Mix in caraway seed. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse corn meal. Add milk, stir to make a soft dough that can be handled and formed into a ball. Transfer ball of dough onto a lightly floured board; knead until smooth. Roll out into a 9x12-inch rectangle. Spread with ham filling. Starting with the narrow end, roll like a jelly roll. Place on a greased baking sheet. Brush lightly with milk. Slash roll into six pieces cutting almost through roll. Turn each piece cut-side up. Bake in a hot oven (450°F.) approximately 25 minutes or until well browned. Serve with mushroom sauce.

HAM FILLING: Mix all ingredients together thoroughly. Serves six.

Junior High Tournament

Coach Juhl's "Buckers" won their first round game of the county tournament by beating Garner 34-20 here last Thursday.

The game was close for three quarters of the game. Klemme jumped out to leads of 5-0, 10-5 and 18-10 which they lost each time. The score at half-time was 18-17 for Klemme and 25-24 at the end of 3 quarters.

Eastner was high with 14 while Kramer had 10. Brinkman and Jones 3 each and Larsen and Waddingham 2 points each.

The boys have three games remaining on their schedule. Feb. 21 Corwith here 1:30; Feb. 27 Forest City here 4:00; March 3 Forest City here 4:00.

The win against Garner will put the Klemme Juniors against the winner of the Kanawha-Crystal Lake game.

Our record to date is 6 wins 3 losses.

Junior High Tournament

Coach Juhl's Junior High "Buckettes" won their first game of the county tournament against Woden last Wednesday 36-17.

Woden previous to this was undefeated in 3 games.

The "Buckettes" put on a fine exhibition of ball handling for their 11th victory this year against 2 defeat.

The scoring was quite evenly divided with C. Bridges getting 21 points, Jo Ellen Clabaugh 12 and Shirley Barz 6.

Margaret Eastner and Gracia Gerard were outstanding as guards.

We were on the short end of the score three times in the beginning of the game: 0-2; 4-5; and 6-7.

Fourteen girls saw action in the game.

Our next and final game before the county tournament is with Corwith here Feb. 28 at 7:30. This is on a Saturday afternoon. Be sure to attend. Admission is only 35c and 25c.

Administrative Cost Of Iowa Bonus Told

Des Moines,—The administrative cost of paying bonuses to Iowa veterans of World War II is $1.44 per claim thus far, the board reported Tuesday.

The figure is considerably less than the comparative administrative cost of the bonuses paid by 9 other states to their World War II veterans.

NEW SYSTEM

Motorists who park overtime at Eagle Grove won't have to go to the city hall to pay their fines hereafter. Instead of parking tickets, parking envelopes will be used and the motorists will deposit a 25c fine in the envelope and drop it into boxes provided for that purpose in the business district.

Boys Home In Klemme

Last week Don Baker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Schoenwetter, moved the house in south Klemme, formerly occupied by the former Waterman residence.

YEAR '52 STARTS WETTER, WARMER, SAYS HENSCHEN

The year 1952 started both warmer and wetter than 1951, according to weather records kept by Earl Henschen, janitor at the Hancock County courthouse.

The average temperature for January was 13 87 as compared with an average of 10.40 degrees for the same month a year ago. The minimum average for the month was 3.39 and the maximum average was 24.16. The lowest temperature recorded was 18 degrees below zero on both January 23 and 24, and the highest was 42 degrees on Jan. 14.

Precipitation for the month totaled 1.55 inches as compared with .55 a year ago. Approximately 11.50 inches of snow fell in January this year as compared with 5 5 inches last year.

Sleet and rain fell on several days of the month. The heaviest amount fell in the 24 hour period ending at 7 a. m. on Jan. 22, when .53 inch was recorded. The only real blizzard of the winter thus far was on Jan. 22.

Fifteen days in January were listed as fair, 13 as cloudy and 3 as partly cloudy.

Number Of Garden In Iowa Will Increase

There'll be more gardens in Iowa in 1952 than there were last year, says Ben Vance, extenhorticulturist at Iowa Ctate College. Vance says that rising food costs plus an increase in the number of home freezers may account for a larger number of gardens.

This year the U. S. Department of Agriculture is encouraging everyone who has land available to put in a garden.

The home freezer has solved lots of problems concerning gardening, Vance points out. Freezers make it possible to store raspberries and strawberries, keeping them in excellent condition. Vance says they come out of the freezer tasting almost like they did fresh.

Freezers are a work saver, too. They make it possible to store large supplies of vegetables without going to much work. It's nothing like the old cold packin method that took days on one type of vegetable.

The freezer also makes it possible to save time in processing old favorites—corn, peas and green beans. These vegetables keep well frozen and are much easier to process than in old-style canning methods.

LIFE SAVING

Improved Artificial Respiration Method Is Adopted by Red Cross

An improved method of artificial respiration, known as the back-pressure arm-lift has been adopted by the American National Red Cross, the armed services, several industrial firms, and other agencies and organizations.

Used in Norway, Denmark, and other European countries for many years, the method permits greater exchanges of air and can be administered without undue fatigue to the operator

Research leading to the change in method predates World War II, when investigators first doubled the superiority of the prone pressure method. Since that time the Red Cross has conducted extensive studies in the fields of respiration and asphyxia. The armed forces became intensely interested in artificial respiration in connection with the possibility of poison gas or nerve gas warfare. About two years ago the

To start the cycle the operator places his hands on the victim's back so that the thumbs just touch and the heels of the hands are just below a line running between the armpits as illustrated above.

Army Chemical Corps assigned four research teams to study comparative values of various methods.

The results of the research showed that the prone pressure method was less effective in the amount of air exchanged. It compressed the chest but does not actively expand it. However, in the two-phase methods —such as the back-pressure arm-lift, the hip-lift, and the Silvester—the chest is actively expanded and compressed by the rescuer.

Research also showed that the hip-lift back-pressure method and the hip-roll back-pressure method are difficult to perform and cannot be done at all by frail rescuers on heavy victims The Silvester method, for which the victim is placed on his back, was considered unsatisfactory for use by the general public since it is difficult to keep the air passages open.

The back-pressure arm-lift method was recommended because it does not tire the rescuer unduly, can be performed by a small person on a heavy victim, and is relatively easy to teach.

The Red Cross will include the new method in first aid and life saving courses as soon as possible Three million supplements on the new system are being printed for inclusion in its first aid and water safety textbooks The supplement will be available through Red Cross chapters at no charge.

The Red Cross pointed out that because of the widespread teaching program, the changeover cannot be accomplished immediately. Millions of persons already trained in the prone pressure method, which has saved many lives, should continue to use it until they have received training in the new method

THE VICTIM is placed face down in a prone position with arms overhead and bent at the elbows, one hand upon the other, and the head turned to one side so that the cheek rests on the hands The rescuer, on one or both knees at the victim's head, places his hands on the victim's back, with thumbs just touching and the heels of the hands just below a line running between the victim's armpits. The rescuer rocks forward slowly, elbows straight, until his arms are almost vertical—exerting steady pressure upon the back. Next, the rescuer rocks backward slowly and slides his hands to the victim's arms, just above the elbows, which are raised until resistance is felt at the victim's shoulders — then, the arms are dropped. This completes a full cycle, which is repeated 12 times a minute.

THE FICTION CORNER

THE RED MUFFLER

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

CONSTABLE Simon McCall, noticed that the fringe of Bruce Wyatt's long woolen, muffler was stained a deep red. Wyatt saw the officer's look of inquiry and glanced from the muffler, which still hung around his neck, to the dead form of Jim Cary.

3-Minute Fiction

"I must have got the blood on the muffler when I went over Jim on the bed there," he said.

Constable Simon nodded and glanced at the doctor, who was conducting an examination of the corpse.

"What time did you get back here?" Simon asked Bruce.

"About 15 minutes before I called you. I saw Jim on the bed. I knew he was dead, but I thought the doc ought to be called."

Simon listened only half attentively. He was trying to think of some one who would have a reason for killing Jim Cary. Cary and Bruce Wyatt were partners.

"Been dead about five hours," Doc Leland said, finishing his examination.

"Five, eh?" Simon mused. "That would make it about 10 o'clock last evening. The dance was at its height then. No telling who left and who didn't."

He turned suddenly to Bruce. "Where'd you go after the dance, Bruce?"

"Over to Jake Dearborn's. Him and me and some others played poker till about 2:30."

Simon smiled faintly. "Well, if Jake and the others back that up I guess we'd better look elsewhere for a suspect."

"Where yuh goin' to start? Who'd want to kill old Jim?" Wyatt asked.

"Old Jim? He's not so old. About 30, I guess," Simon said. "Thirty,

"Been dead about five hours," Doc Leland said, finishing his examination.

and just now falling in love. I expect you knew about Jim's interest in Freda Burnett, Bruce?"

WYATT looked up quickly. "Why, no," he said. "No, I didn't know."

"You didn't?" Simon's voice was almost eager. "Well, well. That gives me the motive, then."

Wyatt stared blankly. "Eh?"

"I said, that little remark of yours provides a motive for the killing, Bruce. It makes you out a liar, too."

Bruce Wyatt thrust out his jaw in an angry gesture. "What the devil are you talking about, McCall?"

"About why you killed Jim."

"Me? Killed him? You're crazy!"

"Oh, no, I'm not. You killed him because you were crazy about Freda yourself and you couldn't stand to see Jim getting in there ahead of you. You did it last night about 10 o'clock when every one was at the dance."

"You must be sick yourself, Simon You don't know what you're saying You can't prove that. You said yourself no one would be able to tell who left the dance long enough to come over here, murder Jim and get back again."

"That," said Constable Simon easily, "is something I won't have to worry about. The fact is, I know you've lied to me twice, and I know you were with Jim a minute or two after he died. That's enough to make an arrest on, since's you're so all fired careful about thinking up allbis."

Wyatt opened his mouth and closed it again. He stood still, waiting, still puzzled.

And Simon explained: "The blood on your muffler, Bruce. You probably got it there when you bent over Jim all right, but that was shortly after 10 last evening. Blood, you know, dries and hardens within a few minutes. None would have got on your muffler five hours after the wound was made."

Doc Leland made a gasping sound, which was at once confirmation of the statement.

Bruce Wyatt's glance darted to the face of the doctor, and without looking again at Simon he leaped toward the wall.

But Constable McCall was a good shot. The interior of the tiny cabin fairly rocked with the crash of his service gun, mingling with the cry of pain from Bruce Wyatt as the heavy slug tore through his hand even as his fingers coiled about the rifle barrel.

GRASSROOTS

Present Administration Certainly Has the Brass

By Wright A. Patterson

AT THE CLOSE of World War II we had in the uniform of our armed forces close to 12 million men, of which a little more than 300 were generals or admirals, in other words "top brass"

Now with armed forces totaling only about one and a half million men we have over 3,000 generals or admirals. In the matter of "top brass" we are attempting to emulate the Mexican army, or the number of colonels on the staff of the governor of Kentucky.

An investigating committee of the senate is attempting to find the "why" of such an increase of high ranking officers, and what they are doing. That committee has demanded of the defense department a statement showing their jobs.

There are more than 3,000 generals and admirals, and it is the belief of members of that committee that they are but muddying the waters of the preparedness effort and adding materially to the cost of that preparedness.

This large number of "top brass" has not only filled the mammoth Pentagon building, but has forced the government to rent outside offices to accommodate the generals and admirals, and the members of their staffs, and the several thousands of civilian secretaries and clerks, the bureaucratic army over which they preside and command.

The general public, and especially the Republican party, may not be able to evaluate the good these generals and admirals do for the nation, or what they do to keep themselves busy, but they do know the why of the army of secretaries and clerks, the civilian bureaucrats. The close-to-200,000 of these have important jobs. At the coming election they will vote for those who provide them with jobs—jobs that pay them better salaries than they could earn elsewhere, and also keep them from the necessity of donning uniforms as privates in the armed forces.

Not only will these bureaucrats vote, but so will their relatives and friends, who are concerned with holding the jobs for the bureaucrats, a total of close to one million votes against the Republican candidates. The more generals and admirals, the more clerks they will employ and the more votes they and friends and relatives will cast.

The votes represented by the army of bureaucrats employed by the defense department in the Pentagon are but a part of the hurdle GOP candidates must be able to jump if they are to win.

No group in the nation is so close to political conditions and sentiment in the grass root areas as the editors of the rural newspapers. Their guess as to the political sentiment of the people of their communities are nearer correct than that of even the local politicians. The Publishers Auxiliary, a paper published for that group, some time ago took a poll of those rural editors. The Auxiliary asked each one of them to name his choice for a Republican candidate, and his guess as to who would be elected as the next President.

Their choice for a republican nominee was Eisenhower, by a wide margin, but they did not think that he, or any other Republican would be elected.

A vast majority predicted that President Truman would be the Democratic nominee, and that he would be elected in the November election. Knowing hundreds of these editors personally and knowing how close they are to the people of their communities, I am convinced their prophesy as to the election of President Truman must be taken seriously

A large majority of the rural press are either Republican or independent newspapers. Individually, they do not represent any great political influence. Collectively, they are a power in the farming areas. As a class, they dislike being ignored by the party organizations. They want to be invited to take a part in the national political campaign.

When invited most of them open their columns to the party or candidates of their choice, and they, collectively, exert a powerful influence in the farm areas. Political leaders would be wise not to overlook them in planning their campaigns. Chances are the rural press can make or break the candidates they support, especially so in the farm states.

It has happened before, and it can happen again. In 1948 Herbert Brownell, the Dewey campaign manager, ignored the rural newspapers, and lost the election.

Secret of Courage

Lesson for February 24, 1952

THERE are different kinds of courage. One is physical, either enduring pain or enduring the prospect of it. Another is moral, enduring ridicule and slander, or the prospect of it. Some occasions call for both kinds

Dr. Foreman

Just as there are different kinds of courage, so there are different causes of it. Physical courage may be in some cases no more than the result of ignorance.

A passenger on a boat during a storm said to an old salt: "I'm not a bit afraid. "The old Irish seaman sniffed. "Them as knows nawthin' fears nawthin'," he said.

Men who have been in combat can recall some character who lacked all the virtues but one; he was never afraid. Physical courage can even be instilled by drugs or by rum. But moral courage cannot be induced by drugs, alcoholic or otherwise,

It takes more than a tough nervous system to stand up against slander, hatred and ridicule. Some men who can take a razor-blade and calmly operate on themselves for snake-bite, cannot stand the sight of human snakes who try to hiss them down.

The Inner Circle

JESUS was always on the lookout for brave men. Indeed, he made brave men.

There were three men in his innermost circle—Peter, James and John. They were men of quite different temperaments; tradition reports that they differed widely in age also. But for whatever reasons, Jesus treated these men differently from the other nine.

That is, he kept them close to him on certain occasions when the rest were left behind or shut out. These three were his only companions at the mount of transfiguration. They were the only three he allowed in the room where he brought Jairus' little girl back to life. They were the three he took with him into the garden of Gethsemane to share his agony. They failed him there—they failed him at other times as well. But the point is that Jesus kept on with them, he did not give them up as hopeless cowards, he gave them more of himself than he gave to any other mortals in his time.

It was as if the Master had said to himself, these men, at least, shall know me. And though they failed him, the time came when they did not fail

Our story in Acts shows how these men stood up against odds; against all the weight of popular opinion, all the force of law, all the attack from the leaders of society, these men stood up with a simple courage. They showed both physical and moral courage at the same time.

And even their enemies, surprised and baffled and blind as they were, understood the secret of their courage: they knew that they had "been with Jesus."

Heroes Without Medals

NOT all heroes wear medals. To this very day there are Christians who show the same kind of courage made famous by Peter and John. When a minister in Louisiana or Kentucky speaks out against the gambling which has become an octopus in his community; when he not only risks a dynamite bomb on his front doorstep from the gambling lords, but the name of "crackpot" from his neighbors; when the ministerial association of Gary, Ind., dares to stand up against powerful business interests in that city in the name of decent housing for the poor; when a Frank Graham of North Carolina dares to stand for Christian fairness to the Negro even when it means continual slander and political defeat; when Kefauver dares to stand up against corruption; you can be sure that the secret of such courage is the old one. these men have been with Jesus.

The story of Christian missions is full of such things. More than fifty years ago a heathen mob was about to tear a missionary named Pitkin to ribbons. They asked him if he had anything to say first, "Yes," he said, "tell my son to come out here and finish my work."

They killed him; but the son did come. And one of his first converts was a man who as a boy had seen the elder Pitkin die. He had never been able to forget that kind of courage.

In our own time another missionary, with the axe literally above his head, was asked: Aren't you afraid? —Afraid of what? he said. If you kill me I shall go straight to heaven.

Car Comfort Is Aim of Americans

Americans cheerfully spend about two-billion dollars a year to give their cars "the comforts of home," says Carol Lane, the noted feminine authority on car comfort.

Today's passenger car can be converted into a home-on-wheels with every convenience except indoor plumbing, she points out.

Miss Lane covers 50,000 miles a year as women's travel director of an oil company, ferreting out ideas and testing gadgets that add to the family's driving enjoyment.

Without leaving the driver's seat, the motorist can reach into a portable refrigerator for a cold snack, tuck baby into an inflatable crib, write memos on a desk attached to the steering column, or make a phone call. There are collapsible pots, cutlery, stoves, tables and chairs that nestle compactly in the trunk. Or an expandable "bedroom" for three that perches securely on the car roof, to mention a few of the conveniences available.

The average new car owner spends about $230 on such standard motoring comforts as a radio, heater, seat-covers, automatic window-washer and extra mirrors, Miss Lane says. Owners of older cars invest from $50 to $100 on a variety of gadgets ranging from a plug-in baby bottle warmer to a heated steering wheel for winter-haters.

And in some states, where it's legal, the motoring family can enjoy TV in their cars too!

Selecting the Top Football Coach

By GRANTLAND RICE

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal. — Who should be named as the top football coach of all time? I have a hunch that if this query should ever be put to a national vote the winner would be Knute Rockne. The Rock was one of the greatest.

"That would be on account of Rockne's rare personality," a veteran coach out this way said, "not because of his coaching ability, which was not abnormal."

They have two candidates out this way along the Pacific's placid rim. The two are Glen (Pop) Warner and Alonzo Stagg. "Warner and Stagg" an old-timer of considerable repute says, "were great inventors as well as great coaches. Between them they gave the game something beyond all others--the single wing, the double wing, the direct pass to the ball carrier, the spiral pass from center, early use of the forward pass as a real offensive weapon, these and many other things that all other coaches used later. Both Warner and Stagg had new and baffling formations they alone devised and used. Knute Rockne was a great all-around coach, where his personality counted immensely, but he never gave anything to football to be compared with Pop and Lonnie. Think what these two gave to great teams as well as to all teams."

Grantland Rice

Pop Warner had star teams at Carlisle, Pittsburgh, Stanford and Temple. Stagg worked at Chicago until he was 70, when the retirement rule sent him to the College of the Pacific. Stagg has been a coach for over 60 years and is still on a working job. Pop Warner retired after a career that began in 1895 and ended only a few years ago. Certainly Pop's single- and double-wing attack has been the most famous in football—far overshadowing the loud heralded T. Nearly all of the top teams used the single and double wing this season. Princeton, Tennessee, Maryland (plus other varieties), UCLA (the strongest November team on the West Coast), Michigan State, etc.

"I would be delighted," Pop told me, "to have two squads practically even in playing strength. Let any other coach use the T on one squad while I used the single and double wing. I think it would be a slaughter —against the T."

If ever such a contest was staged, I would love to be on hand to take it in.

Sport and Art

Pop Warner is something more than a football coach. So is Bob Zuppke. A few days ago while spending a morning at the famous Helms Hall of Fame we saw paintings by both Warner and Zuppke on exhibition.

Warner had two sea outlines and a landscape that were extremely good Admitting to slight knowledge of art it was still easy to see that Pop's artistic efforts were blessed with class. This was also the verdict of real art critics.

Zuppke's painting had a flare of boldness in coloring and stroke Bob painted as he coached, with imagination and power Which recalls that Mickey Walker, the Toy Bull Dog, has also gone in for the artistic side Mickey's paintings have been well rated by first-class critics and his exhibitions have been successful.

It may seem odd to those who saw the Toy Bulldog tearing into Harry Greb, Jack Sharkey and Max Schmeling to look from those somewhat savage scenes to his often delicate paintings. For Mickey was above everything else a fighter—a fighter of rank. No more than a middleweight, he was giving the Sharkeys and Schmelings 40 or 50 pounds.

We saw a photographic work of art in this Hall It was a picture of Jim Jeffries at the age of 25 Jim was then six feet two—weight 214 pounds. He could run the 100 in ten flat and high jump six feet—the greatest actual athlete the heavyweight division ever knew What a far cry from the fat, half-bald and lumbering fighter who met Jack Johnson ten years later. Here was the fellow who looked as if he could have beaten them all—before or since Maybe he could have. He was a great fighter.

The Amateur Angle

Devereux Milburn, the famous polo player, never believed in amateur sport. He always liked the polo method of rating all alike. I agreed with Dev Milburn on most of his slants, but not quite all.

There should be a place for an amateur sport, where those who have to work for a living and play games for fun can compete on even terms. The amateur isn't supposed to compete evenly with the professional.

They'll all tell you a football player, above everything else, must love the game. This is a number one must. Then why must he get paid to play it?

I'll say one thing in behalf of the paid college athlete. It costs at least five times—maybe ten times —as much to go through college today as it once cost.

The Whole Load

Bill Alexander, Oklahoma preacher-politician tells the story about when he was just starting out as a preacher and went to a small country church. Only a single farmer showed up, and embarrassed, Alexander asked:

"Tell me this, brother. If you took a load of hay down to the pasture to feed your cows, and only one cow came up, would you feed her?"

"Yeah, preacher," the farmer said. "I believe I would."

Alexander then got up, sang a few songs, passed the collection plate, preached for 40 minutes, pronounced the benediction and walked out of the church with the farmer. At the door, as he shook hands with him, the farmer, said:

"You know, preacher, I been thinkin'. If I took that load of hay down to the pasture and only one cow came up—yeah, I'd feed her all right, but damn if I'd give her the whole load."

THE FARM OUTLOOK

By Paul Henderson, County Extension Director

Hancock County poultrymen are in a better position to compete with poultrymen in other parts of the nation in egg production than in chicken production according to Francis A. Kutish, extension farm economist at Iowa State College.

The average Iowa hen laid 118 eggs in 1940—compared with 134 eggs per hen in the eastern corn belt and 151 eggs in the commerical egg producing areas of the East.

By 1950, Iowa poultrymen had pushed average production up to 178 eggs per hen—compared with 174 eggs per hen in the eastern corn belt and 185 eggs per hen in the commercial areas of the East!

The story is different with chicken production, Kutish says. It looks like the broiler industry will continue to expand. And a number of producers are going into turkey broiler production. This means even keener competition for the Iowa farmer who raises farm chickens for meat.

Farmers who buy straight-run chicks are not likely to do as well as their neighbors who buy sexed pullets this spring.

Early Chicks Best

Present signs point to around a 10% cut in number or chickens raised in farms this year. If farmers go through with such intentions, egg production will be off enough next fall and winter to make hens more profitable than they are today—especially if we get a good corn crop and feed costs are lower, Kutish believes.

Best profits will be made from early hatched chicks. Poultry specialists from Iowa State College point out best profits will be made from early hatched chicks. Early chicks do a little better, grow faster and start laying in late summer or early fall. This means they are in full production during fall and early winter when egg prices are the highest. But to do this, chicks must be started in late February or early March.

Record Cattle Numbers

American farmers and ranchers had an all-time high number of cattle and calves on farms & ranches as 1952 began. The figure was 88 million head. That's 6 million head more than a year earlier, a boost of 7%. It puts total numbers 3% over the old record of 85.6 million head set back in 1945

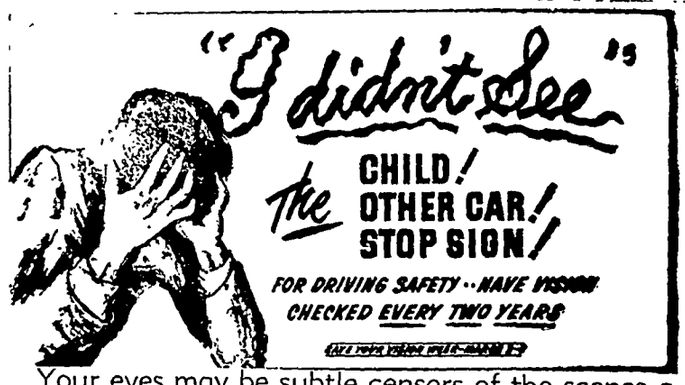
Beef cows accounted for most of the cattle increase. We now have nearly 21 million head of beef cows in this country. That is 12 % more than we had a year ago and it marks a new record.

Our national beef breeding herd has been built up to where cattle slaughter soon will be mounting. Already the Bureau of Agricultural Economics is estimating 10% more beef available for consumers in 1952 over last year's supply in butchershops.

Iowa farmers planning to go to beef cow herds should realize that the high beef prices of the last few years are as much the result of the scarce supply of beef slaughtered as they are of the strong consumer income, Kutish warns. Beef prices are bound to come down relative to hogs and dairy products as the supply of beef on the market mounts.

BOARDS PLAN ROADS PROGRAM

Representatives from the 16 township boards of trustees in Hancock county will meet with the county board of supervisors at the courthouse at 10:00 a. m. March 12, to serve as a county approval board. The board of approval will discuss and formulate the 1952 local road construction and improvement program, according to County Engineer Charles F. Merten.



Your eyes may be subtle censors of the scenes around you.

They may show you the road just ahead yet blur out the darting child, the other car, the stop sign, until too lae.

They may show you the approaching car yet deceive you as to the distance until the gap closes with terrible swiftness.

They may show you the highway straight ahead, yet blind you to dangers moving in from the sides.

Or, with darkness, they may almost totally cancel out your safety with "night blindness."

Be sure a weakness of your eyes does not censor out what you must see for safety. Have your vision checked every two years.

The mind's eye of regret may never forget what your eyes failed to show you until too late.

Grandmother's Club Meets

Monday evening the Grandmothers Club met at the home of Mrs. Clara Barz, with 24 members present The meeting was opened with the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag, following a song, America, The Beautiful Mrs. Albert Etchen read the origin of the song. After the business meeting, all enjoyed the musical numbers planned by Mrs. George Schoenwetter, and the games supervised by Mrs. Ed. Christians. Most of the ladies came dressed in old time dresses, with a gala of old time accessories. Mrs. Albert Lange won the prize for the oldest garment. The skirt she wore was her great grandmothers, and was over 175 years old. It was silk, changeable green and brown, and was quilted by hand

Mrs. Otto Pringnitz won the second prize, and her dress was seventy years old and was beaded Mrs. Clara Stille won third prize and her dress was fifty three years old. Patet had the most old things on, even wooden shoes and carried a small glass cup given her in Sunday School when she was six years old, a handkerchief over 60 years old, cape over 65 years and a pocket book that was over a hundred years and white stockings over one hundred years old. She had ribbons in her hair that she wore when a little girl and a hat worn seventy years ago.

Mrs. Naska Bock, Mrs. Esther Barz, Mrs. Henry Jost, Mrs. Fred Barz & Mrs. Albert Etchen had on their wedding dresses. Mrs. Ax had her hair combed like she did when she was married and she wore Mrs. Art Schoenwetter's skirt that was ovr 50 years old. Her high top lace shoes belonged to Mrs. Fred Schlichting and had beautiful leather in them.

Mrs. Mary Waterman had a collar on she made over 50 years ago. Mrs. Thada had on high shoes, and had on Mrs. Martha Bredbenner's dress that she wore before she was married, with a beautiful full gored white petticoat that had a raw string in the top. Mrs Jost carried a very attractive feathered flair fan, which belongs to Mrs. Fred Etchen. Mrs. Frank Ward had her Grandmother Beier's clothes on which were over 50 years old and the skirt had "brush" binding on the bottom. Mrs. Roy Schaefer was dressed in a coat style dress which Mrs. Emilie Arnold made, with a very full skirt, she wore her black hat and carried a black muff. Mrs. Louisa Kneke had on Russian clothes and the scarf she wore when she was confirmed.

Mesdames Clara Barz, Esther Barz, Naska Bock, Helen Jost and Louise Etchen served a delicious lunch. Allen Barz came and took pictures. The ladies are hoping they will be good, so they can have them to give to their grandchildren.

Art Wellemeyer and George Washington Had Birthdays February 22nd

Mr. and Mrs. Don Bacon entertained to dinner Friday evening, February 22nd, Arthur Wellemeyer, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wessels, Mr. and Mrs. Howard DeMotts and Johnnie, Jo Ann Burgess & Arthur Carlson The occasion was in honor of Art Wellemeyer's birthday. Mrs. Bacon had one candle on the cake, but there must have been a shortage of candles as Art must be past 30 years as this writer has been around these parts that long and Art was wearing long pants when we came here. Anyway all had a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. George Lawhorn Entertained At Dinner and Bridge

Mr. and Mrs. George Lawhorn entertained a group of friends at a 5:30 o'clock dinner Sunday evening, which was followed by bridge at four tables.

High prizes were won by Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson and M. L. Harson. Mr. and Mrs. Art Kudje were awarded the travel prize.

FORTY HEAD OF HOGS STOLEN WHILE FARMER & WIFE ATTEND FUNERAL

Forty head of hogs were stolen from the Howard Huff farm six miles east of Klemme last week while Mr. and Mrs. Huff were in Ohio attending the funeral of her father.

The Cerro Gordo county sheriff was called and is working on the case.

Library Books

The Auxiliary ladies in Klemme are going to have a traveling library accessible to the public very soon. They will be hooked up with a traveling library concern from Des Moines. All in our community who have books that they wish to donate are asked to bring them to the home of Mrs. J. C. Thomas this week, if possible. That way the ladies will be able to build up a better library of books. Mrs. Rudy Fritsch, librarian at Garner, is coming down to assist the ladies in sorting and arranging the books. All books that are not usable will be discarded by the committee, with Mrs. Fritsch's approval. Lets get behind the Auxiliary 100%, as Klemme needs a Library.

HELLO FOLKS

Mr. and Mrs. LaVerne Stadlander are the proud parents of a baby boy Curtis Allen, weight 7lbs. and 8oz. born at the Belmond hospital on February 21st.

Hancock County Co-op Oil Ass'n Hold Annual Meeting

BY RAY EASTMAN

One veteran highway patrolman never makes an arrest without first trying to find out what was in the mind of the driver before he pulled the trick that landed him outside the law. The patrolman had some baffling answers, as in this story he tells:

"It was one of those beautiful spring mornings and I was driving north in a long line of cars. Another string of traffic was moving south, toward us. It was the kind of a morning when everything seemed right. No reason in the world for anyone to be upset.

"All of a sudden the four cars in front of me took the ditch. I just managed to squeeze into a farm driveway as a car out of the southbound traffic came slamming down our lane, making the most dangerous pass I've ever seen.

"I chased that car for seven miles until the driver made a wild turn off the highway onto a gravel road. He bounced into a ditch and a strong fence kept him from turning over.

"The chase was so fast that it took me 275 feet to stop and turn around to get to the gravel road. That's where I finally ran him down. When I walked up to that car I expected to find a driver who was either crazy or drunk.

"Well, he was a man about 50 well dressed, looked intelligent, and said he hadn't had a drink in 20 years. When I asked for his drivers license he made a mistake and gave me an indentification card. He was a high official in one of the biggest organizations in the state.

"Now here, I thought, is a man who can tell me something I've been trying to find out for a long time. So, before I wrote him a ticket, I asked him just exactly what he was thinking of when he passed against that line of traffic, when he tried to escape an officer.

"He just looked at me puzzled. I think he really wanted to find a reason, but he shook his head and said: "I don't know. I don't know."

IOWA AGAIN 2ND LARGEST FOOD PRODUCING STATE

Texas Steps Back A Notch For Iowa!

WASHINGTON—Iowa has regained its position as the nation's second largest food producing state, moving ahead of Texas, the department of agriculture reported Friday.

California remained in first pace with total cash receipts from farm marketings amounting to $2,560,901,000 for 1951.

Iowa's cash receipts for 1951 totaled $2,339,196,00 as compared to $2,114,869,000 for the previous year. The Texas amount was $2,150,930,000 for 1951.

Illinois placed fourth with total receipts of $2,017,581,000.

Iowa's receipts from livestock were up by 352 million dollars, almost double those of California. However, California made its gain over Iowa in other crops.

The Carlson's and Mrs. Bredlow returned home Monday.

SALES FOR LAST YEAR HIGHEST IN HISTORY

The Hancock County Co-Op Oil Ass'n held the annual stockholders meeting at the Avery theatre at Garner. The reports showed sales of $586,096.81, the highest in the history of the association, and listed gross profits in the sum of $145,576.94. The firm allocated $32,162.01 in patronage refunds and $2,744.10 in interest refunds.

Manager Roy Railsback reported sales in 1951 included 1,559,202 gallons of gasoline; 670,630 gallons of fuel oil; 13,497 gallons of lubricating oil; 27,115 pounds of grease and $78,961.41 in miscellenous merchandise sales and service. The Co-op has paid a total of $193,882.77 in dividends to patrons since is was first organized 22 years ago and the business has been increasing annually.

Directors elected were Carl Woiwood, Alvin Goll, Oscar Greiman and J. L. Abele. Holdover directors are Emil Ollenburg, Ventura; Walter Lauster, Meservey; Erwin Rosendahl, Ventura; E. H. Anderson, Goodell; Emery Brown, Garner; Larry Juhl, Garner; Roy Railsback, Garner; and Carl Wille, Klemme. The board will meet Saturday afternoon and organize for the ensuing year.

The Co-Op employs the following personnel: Roy Railsback manager; Veronica Liska, bookkeeper; William Gilbert, assistant; Mike Forshee, transport driver; Ray Radloff, Clarence Gatchel, Elmer Kienenberger, Everett Weiland, Dwight Hummel and Don Peck, tank wagon drivers; Ernest Gerber, Charles Eland, Doyle Terrance and Jim Boehnke, Garner service station employees, and Harold Kothenbeutal, Henry Kaduce, John Evans and Fred Schneider, as Klemme service station employees.

The firm shows total footings in the sum of $174,924.76 and according to an auditor's report now has $2.84 in assets for each dollar of liability.

Married 47 Years

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Wadingham will be married forty-seven years Thursday, February 28. On Sunday all the children and their families came in and brought along a lovely dinner to help their parents celebrate. Those present were: Virgil Waddingham and family; Roy Waddingham and family; John Waddingham and family; Martin Karsjens and family; Harm Dirks and family and Tony Tebbins and family of Corwith. All enjoyed visiting and wished the Waddinghams many more happy years together.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Rash Marriage

"YOU DON'T WRITE much about alimony," writes Mrs. Laurrette Adams, of Fargo, "and yet, with more than two million women entitled to it, it seems to me a problem of today that is worthy of occasional discussion.

"I am 33," her letter continues, "deserted in 1944, when my husband returned from Guadalcanal. Ours had been a hasty courtship and marriage; my boy's father never has seen him. Jimmy was born six months before I received a letter saying that Lewis, my husband, wanted a divorce, was disgusted at the idea of returning to me, and was planning a second marriage. This came like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky, but, as I was to discover later, I am not the only woman whose young life was blasted that way.

Trapped

"The arrangement was that my husband should give me full custody of Jimmy, pay me $100 a month, and $40 a month for Jimmy's support until he is 18. As Lew is a junior partner in his father's very prosperous law firm, and makes close to seven thousand a year, this should not be too much. But he has remarried and had two little girls and an extravagant wife, and he also supports her mother and brother, according to report, so he represents himself as very much strapped.

". . . hasty courtship . . ."

"He pays, yes. But he never pays on time. I have to telephone every month, and sometimes have to ask my lawyer to jog his memory. Sometimes he writes me a little note with his check, saying something insulting like how long am I going to keep this up, haven't I found someone who wants to marry me?

"I can't tell you how humiliating and even maddening this is to me. I live with my mother whose only contribution to expenses is that she owns the house and pays a low tax yearly.

"We rent all the down-stairs rooms except the kitchen to a woman doctor. This means we have no gracious living space, and can naturally have but a limited social life. I am not complaining, but it interests me to talk to other divorced women, in shops and in the circle of my friends, and to discover that the very husbands who wanted the divorces, and more or less forced them, are acting in this cruel way about alimony payments.

A Racket

"My lawyer tells Lew that he must be more prompt, and Lew says that alimony is a racket and that no self-respecting woman would go on taking it year after year. This is very different from the way he talked when he wanted to be free. I have never seen him since he sailed away; we had known each other then only seven weeks. Mother and I live out of town, keep much to ourselves, and devote ourselves to my boy, determined that his life shall not be saddened by his father's faults.

"Woman after woman tells me a similar story of desertion, cruelty, and utter indifference to obligations and to children. God knows we don't want divorces! We don't want to be lonely and unloved. But what little dignity we could save from the wreckage of our hopes is torn away by the insolent coldness of the men who swore to love us always. Have you anything to suggest that will help me to convince my husband that he owes us something better than this?"

Laurette, you are right in your statement that this case is not unusual, and my abhorrence of divorce—any divorce—is well known to anyone who reads this column.

But at the same time, alimony in itself is an indefensible thing, and a smart woman ought to get away from it as fast as she can. Help with the small boy's expenses is another question, and Lew is bound on all accounts to pay that. Legally he can be held to it.

But look at your case as a healthy young human being, not as a deserted wife. You and Lew made a hasty, ill-considered marriage. In those war years a million girls and boys did the same, and some turned out well and many didn't.

Now you say to Lew, "For those weeks of wartime excitement and mistaken passion, you must support me as long as I live. No matter what your difficulties I will never have to help you. Though I married a capitalist tomorrow, you would have no claim on one penny of mine I will hold my son, I will keep him conscious of his father's faultr. But I will make no efforts to support him, because he and I are assured now of support as long as you live." This does not seem fair from the man's viewpoint. It is understandably so.

SOLOMON'S JUDGMENT

The story of a French judge is currently being told around Paris. It seems a new fanatical religious sect was going to crucify one of its members whom they believed to be the new messiah, but local officials took preventive action and haled the participants before the judge.

After hearing all the arguments the judge said:

"All right, my friends. If your religion demands it, you may crucify him. But I must warn you of one thing. If your messiah is not resurrected in three days, I'll have you all hanged."

Congratulations?

Mr. B.: "Pete Smith sure is on the way to being a pauper."

Mrs. B.: "Why how nice, dear. Does he want a boy or a girl?"

Keep Food Budget Down by Serving Lower-Priced Meats

IF YOU HAVE to shake your head sadly at the high price of food, remember that you can help trim the costs by serving some of the lower-priced cuts of meat.

Naturally there are many kitchen economies that can be practiced to help keep the food budget trimmed, if not exactly slender, such as using foods in season and wisely serving leftovers. But higher priced meats add to the cost of the table set more, probably, than any other single item.

As long as your meals remain savory and nutritious, the family will not mind eating less expensive meats.

Pork is economical and gives plenty of good eating. Here's a dish all under one lid that's bound to please:

Pork Skillet Supper
(Serves 6)

- 6 shoulder pork chops
- 2 tablespoons chopped onion
- 1 green pepper, sliced in rings
- ⅓ cup rice
- 1 No. 2 can (2½ cups) tomatoes
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper

Brown chops in small amount of hot fat. Pour off extra fat and save for later use. Add onion and green pepper; sprinkle rice around the chops. Add tomatoes. Season with salt and pepper. Cover and cook over low heat until chops are tender, about 1 hour. Remove chops and arrange on a warm platter. Fill center with rice mixture.

Use one-half pound of meat and extend it with macaroni for this hearty dish that's flavorful, as well as economical:

Meat-Macaroni Casserole
(Serves 4-6)

- 3 cups elbow macaroni
- ½ pound lean beef, diced
- 1 tablespoon fat
- 1 clove garlic
- 1 onion, sliced
- 4 tomatoes, diced or 2 cups canned tomatoes
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 1 teaspoon chili powder
- ¼ cup sliced, stuffed olives
- ¼ cup grated cheese

Heat fat in heavy saucepan or skillet and brown thoroughly. Add garlic, onion, tomatoes, salt and pepper and cook about half an hour or until a nice sauce is formed. In the meantime, cook the macaroni in boiling, salted water until tender. Drain. Layer in a greased casserole the macaroni, cheese, olives and meat sauce, having the meat sauce on the top layer. Bake in a moderately hot (375°F.) oven for 45 minutes.

The last of the pot roast or roast beef can be used in this delicious puff for a nourishing supper:

Beef Puff
(Serves 4)

- 3 cups diced leftover beef, roast
- 1 medium onion, finely chopped
- 2 cups hot, mashed potatoes
- 1 tablespoon fresh horseradish
- 2 teaspoons salt
- Few grains cayenne
- ½ cup milk
- 1 egg, beaten
- ½ cup shredded cheese
- 1 tablespoon butter

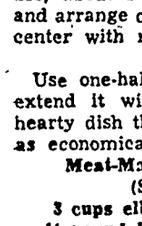
Combine onion, potatoes, horseradish, salt and cayenne. Combine milk with egg, then fold into potato mixture. Fold in diced beef. Turn into a 2-quart casserole. Dot with butter. Bake in a moderately hot (400°F.) oven for 25 minutes. Serve hot.



• • •

Ham slices extended with a savory fruit stuffing will make a memorable meal without putting the budget out of line:

Stuffed Ham Slices
(Serves 6)

- 2 ham slices, cut ½ inch thick
- 3 cups soft bread crumbs,
- ½ cup seedless raisins
- ⅔ cup orange juice
- 1 cup diced apples
- ¼ cup melted ham or bacon drippings
- 4 tablespoons sugar

Combine bread crumbs, raisins, orange juice, apples, drippings and sugar and mix lightly.

Spread one ham slice with a thick layer of stuffing. Place second ham slice on top. Put wooden toothpicks through one slice into the second one to hold slices together, sandwich fashion. Spread surface of top slice with brown sugar and stick with whole cloves. Place in rack in open roasting pan in a slow (300°F.) oven for 1¼ hours.

Corned Beef-Cabbage Supper
(Serves 4)

- 1 1-pound can corned beef hash
- 4 slices drained, canned pineapple
- Hot cooked cabbage wedges
- Mustard sauce

Open hash can from both ends and push contents out in one piece. Cut in four slices. Rough the top of each patty with the tines of a fork. Arrange hash slices on pineapple slices in a shallow pan. Bake in a moderate (350°F.) oven for about 20 minutes. Serve with wedges of cabbage, topped with hot mustard sauce; add 2 tablespoons prepared mustard and ¼ teaspoon each of worcestershire sauce and grated onion to one cup seasoned medium white sauce.

Vegetable-Sausage Platter
(Serves 4)

- 4 green peppers
- 1 17-ounce can whole kernel corn
- Salt, pepper and butter
- 1 No. 2 can small white potatoes
- Parsley butter
- 2 cans Vienna sausage

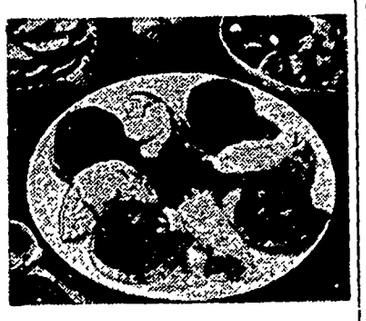
Cut off stem ends of pepper and remove seeds. Parboil until almost tender; drain. Season corn with salt, pepper and butter; fill peppers. Place in greased baking dish and bake in a moderate (350°F.) oven about 20 minutes. Heat potatoes and drain; dress with parsley butter. Arrange on platter with sausages which have been pan-browned and heated in butter.



Hearty servings of corned beef hash with golden pineapple slices make mighty fine eating for cold evenings. Serve on the same platter with the hash some cooked wedges of cabbage with mustard sauce for a really old-fashioned meal prepared in the quick, modern manner.

LYNN SAYS:
Please Family Palates With New Flavor Tricks

Mixed fruit cups make a wonderful dessert with some simple cookies on those busy days. Sliced bananas with cubed pineapple and dark cherries or grapes are colorful and delicious.

Another mixed fruit combination which takes honors includes grapefruit sections with bananas tinted a delicate pink with some maraschino cherry juice and a few of the cherries for color.

Mix together some tart applesauce with mint jelly and serve with lamb for a wonderful relish.

You've heard of rice and chicken? Well, cook the rice and then without rinsing pat into a shallow pan and let chill. Cut into squares, place on a greased shallow pan and dot with butter. Broil or bake and serve topped with creamed chicken.

Several canned soups can make one delicious one fit enough for guests. Heat together equal amounts of consomme or bouillon, chicken broth and tomato juice.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Mate's Error Needn't Embarrass

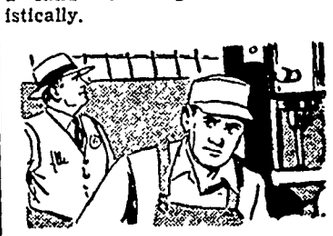
By Lawrence Gould

Should you be ashamed of a mate's mistakes?

Answer: You may not be able to help feeling embarrassed if your partner commits some serious offense against the rules of grammar or accepted good form, but at least be honest with yourself about it. You are not "embarrased for him," but for yourself. Your shame means that for the moment your own self-esteem—as affected by "what people will think"—has become more important to you than your love for your mate or your recognition of the qualities for which you love him. But don't let the injury to your ego drive you to the even worse breach of good manners of correcting him in public.

Are gamblers and alcoholics alike?

Answer: Yes. Gambling and alcoholism form a "triad" of neurotic patterns with superstition, writes Dr. Iago Galston in Mental Hygiene. All three are based on what he calls "precausal" thinking—that is, thinking in the way a child does before he has learned to recognize the law of cause and effect. The gambler, the alcoholic and the superstitious person all believe that good fortune may come, or the consequences of their mistakes be averted by the intervention of some unseen and capricious power ("Lady Luck," for instance) if they can but gain its favor. Inconsistent parents prevent a child's learning to think realistically.



Does tension make workers inefficient?

Answer: Yes, says Dr. H. Graham Ross, summarizing the conclusions of a Canadian seminar on "Tensional States in Industry." Tense or anxious feelings on the part of workers are responsible for a large share of inefficiency, absenteeism, accidents and psychosomatic illness. Such states may be caused by personal problems outside of the business, but may also result from the nature of the job, the inconsistency of workers or supervisors, and especially from the uneasiness of those workers who are nearing the age of retirement and are conscious of their limitations and their insecure position.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Family Physicians and Cancer Tests

By Dr. James W. Barton

I HAVE WRITTEN before of the three middle-aged women who, because of lumps in their breasts, thought they had cancer. They refused to consult their physician, however, because, if cancer were present, it would upset some long-land plans for entire family.

During the months that they were following these plans, these three women spent days and nights of mental torture, but, like all wives and mothers, they had in mind only the happiness of the family. Returning home and consulting their physician and specialist they found that the lumps in the breast were simply enlarged milk glands and as such were perfectly harmless.

Because the cancer societies of the United States and Canada know that early cancer is curable and late cancer is not, they have asked all physicians to be cancer conscious and not delay treatment in suspicious cases. Some men and women of cancer age, however, feel that physicians and health writers are causing many to develop cancerphobia (fear of cancer).

It might be well to repeat the statement of Dr. Donald V. Trueblood in General Practice Clinics some months ago.

"The great effort instituted and sponsored by the American Cancer Society some years ago for the purpose of educating the public regarding the early signs and symptoms of the possibility of cancer being present have borne fruit (maybe a few phobias). The people who have been educated by this enterprise, if intelligent, have contacted their family physician immediately, even though they may not have had any of the signs and symptoms described, but because they would like to have a complete examination to assure themselves that no evidence of this dread disease is present. A few that may develop phobias probably need examination as much as the others.

Sinus Trouble Aided Star to Radio Fame

Sinus trouble is not usually a stepping stone to success, but it was in the case of radio's fabulous "Lonesome Gal."

Jean King had been a smash hit over Dayton's WING for two years as the purveyor of a frankly sentimental style designed to appeal to lonesome listeners She acquired a large listening audience with a honey-voiced approach that goes something like this:

"Hi, baby. This is your Lonesome Gal who loves you better than anyone else in the whole world . . Gee I'd you over the weekend .

But after two years in the east, Jean's sinuses were taking a beating from the weather and she packed up and headed for Hollywood. Although stations there were skeptical about her possibilities, she "packaged" her shows by tape recording for subscribing sponsors and then put it on KHJ, Los Angeles. It was then heard on four stations and grossed $185 a week. Today, it has more than 50 outlets in major cities in the U.S. and Canada and stands to gross a cool $150,000 to $200,000 in 1951!

It's Wonderful the Way Chewing-Gum Laxative Acts Chiefly to REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD

● Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different!

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon . . . right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes mostly waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, run-down feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self—full of life! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

Save Money On This Home Mixed Cough Syrup

Big Saving. No Cooking. So Easy.

You'll be surprised how quickly and easily you can relieve coughs due to colds, when you try this splendid recipe. It gives you about four times as much cough medicine for your money, and you'll find it truly wonderful for real relief.

Make a syrup with 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water. No cooking needed. (Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.) Then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (obtained from any druggist) in a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This makes a full pint of medicine that will please you by its quick action. It never spoils, and tastes fine—children love it.

This simple mixture takes right hold of a cough. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, quickly eases soreness and difficult breathing.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its quick action in coughs and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

FOR EXTRA CONVENIENCE GET NEW READY-MIXED, READY-TO-USE PINEX!

KINDERGARTEN NEWS

Dicks group has started in their new work book, "Before We Read." Our first unit is Fun With Pets. We like our new books a great deal and enjoy working in them.

In numbers class we are learning to associate the written word with the numbers.

Tuesday we visited the first grade room to see the farm they made. We enjoyed our visited.

—Miss Schiek

FIRST GRADE NEWS

Kathleen Priebe celebrated her seventh birthday Wed. by treating the boys and girls to candy bars.

Mrs. Howard Baack and Lonny Lou were visitors in our room Wednesday afternoon.

We have finished making our farm and the Kindergarten came in to see it the first of this week.

We have been working on a unit about thrift. We have been talking about how we get money and how we spend it. We also found that most of us have some money that we have saved.

Janice Greiman has been absent several days this week because of illness.

Our room helpers were Richard Miller and Virginia Blanchet.

--Mrs Brinkman

SECOND GRADE NEWS

Tommy Burgess had a birthday this week. He brought treats for all of us.

Friday was a very busy day in our room. Janet and Jerry Murray and Karen White had birthdays and brought treats for us. Because we were celebrating so many birthdays at once, we played games while we had our treats

THIRD GRADE NEWS

Wayne Schlichting had a birthday Tuesday. He was absent that day because of the weather so he treated us Wed. to candy bars.

Friday we had 15 perfect spelling papers.

Duane Kramer's mother and Wayne Schlichting's mother visited our art class Friday afternoon. We made hatchets because it was Washington's birthday.

Thursday we finished our Meat booklets in Geography. We had pictures to illustrate live, raw, and cooked meat of each kind we studied.

—Mrs. Barkema

FOURTH GRADE NEWS

Edna Heginger gave candy bar treats to her class on Feb. 19th.

We had a visitor in our room Thursday afternoon. She was Dixie Steenblock of Belmond.

Arthur Carlson visited for a short while Friday.

In arithmetic we learned how to write our Roman Numerals from one to fifty.

We had very good spelling scores last week. Seventeen people received perfect scores and one received A minus. The total enrollment in our class is eighteen.

The Congo land will be the next land studied in Geography.

ELECTRICITY MAKES THE WORLD GO ROUND WITH THE FLICK OF A SWITCH

REDDY Kilowatt, your faithful electric servant, has earned a key place in everyone's life. Every day the entire community becomes more and more dependent on electricity at home and at work.

Reddy's Obligation

For everything from the baby's bottle warmer and the furnace thermostat to giant factory machines, we depend on electricity. The responsibility for maintaining continuous, adequate electric service is mounting daily. A power failure leaves an entire city paralyzed. Elevators suddenly halt, traffic lights go out, all electric machinery stops, radios are silenced, virtually everything is motionless until power can be restored. Yes, we have a "bear by the tail"... a public responsibility which mounts daily by leaps and bounds.

Our Policy

Everything within the power of modern science, engineering skill and human effort is done to keep Reddy on the job for you. Stand-by and emergency equipment is set to go, and no effort is spared to assure top-quality maintenance of the vital generating and transmission equipment. Providing uninterrupted electric service is a challenge as well as a responsibility. Additional equipment is being installed continuously to assure power to spare and skilled powermen are on the job 24 hours a day to keep electricity coming to you.

Performance Standards, Labeling Give—

NEW YARDSTICK FOR BUYING RAYON

Soon now, perhaps by spring, you'll be seeing a new label on many rayon yard goods and ready-to-wear. The "AS" on that label will mean the fabric or garment meets strict new wear and performance requirements set up by the American Standards Association.

No matter how careful you have always been when shopping for rayon yard goods or garments, you have probably wondered just how well your purchase would wear.

You can now put aside much of this doubt—that is, if you follow the lead set forth for you by rayon manufacturers, retailers and consumer groups, and look for the "AS" (American Standard) labels of performance when you buy.

The "AS" labels are due to appear on all garments or fabrics which contain 50 percent or more of rayon in the very near future—perhaps by the time you get around to your spring shopping. Don't miss them, and do study them.

For a long time, we've purchased by appearance and feel of a fabric and hoped it would give the wear we expected. This past year — following the lead of the National Dry Goods Association and working through the American Standards Association — retailers, manufacturers and representatives from consumer groups have agreed on a new set of requirements that rayons must meet if they carry the "AS" label.

Guarantee of Satisfaction

Here's what this will mean to you, explains Lucille Rea, Iowa State College clothing specialist. If you buy curtain fabric, you of course want it to be colorfast to sunlight, washing or cleaning, to shrink little or not at all when washed, and to stand up well under constant use and exposure. If you buy a sport shirt, you expect it to be the same size after it's washed or cleaned, to be colorfast to sunlight, water and perspiration, of sturdy construction and possibly crease- resistant.

You have every right to expect what you buy to hold up well under normal use. This, in effect, is what the new rayon standards guarantee you. The accompanying tag will tell just what the performance standards are for each article as well as how to care for it.

Rayon isn't one fabric, explains Miss Rea. It's a big, spread-out family of fabrics with varying characteristics. That's one reason this new set of standards is so important. When you see a rayon dress with the "AS" label, for instance, you know that fabric was originally made up, carefully tested and guaranteed by the manufacturer with that specific end-use in mind.

You know that rayon dress will hold up well under all the wear conditions to which it would normally fall heir. And when you buy rayon yard goods, you'll want to note on the label the performance standards it will meet and sew it up into the type of article for which it is best suited.

Use Of Standards Voluntary

Fifty-one different items come under the specifications of the new rayon standards. They include women's wearing apparel such as sportswear, suitings, coatings, linings, gloves, underwear and others. In men's wear they cover neckties, shirting, shorts, sportswear, suitings and so forth. Third classification is home furnishings fabrics, listing such end-uses as bedspreads, slip covers, upholstery fabrics and such. Whether or not a manufacturer adheres to the American Standard requirments in making up his rayon fabrics and ready-makes is voluntary. The AS label on his goods is your assurance that he has done so.

The success of this earnest attempt to give us better tools for buying rayons is up to us, Miss Rea stresses. For if we show an honest interest in buying rayons that meet these new standards, manufacturers and retailers will cooperate in giving them to us

LENTEN CHURCH NIGHT PROGRAMS

A series of five Lenten Family Church Night Programs will be held on the Sunday evenings of March in the Klemme Methodist Church. Families of the Klemme-Liberty Churches will meet each Sunday evening for a covered-dish supper at 6 00 p.m. which will be followed by a half hour study period during which the entire group will meet in separate age groups. The Adult Bible Class will make a study of the Book of Acts. Following the study, the whole group will meet for a period of entertainment and fellowship. The evening's program will close with a half hour period of worship and inspiration

The circles of the Klemme Women's Society of Christian Service will serve as hostess groups for the five evenings as follows March 2, Ruth Circle; March 9, Naomi Circle; March 16, Mary Circle, March 23, Martha Circle, and March 30, Esther Circle The circles will also provide supervision for the Nursery-Primary and the Junior groups during the study period March 2, Mary Circle, March 9, Martha Circle, March 16, Esther Circle, March 23 Ruth Circle and March 30, Naomi Circle. The Intermediate and High School Fellowships will meet for their weekly lessons during the study period.

During the fellowship period there will be group singing, travel motion pictures in color and Kodachrome slides leading up to the final period of worship and inspiration. Speakers during this final period of each evening's program will be the Rev. E. R. Petersen, Buffalo Center, Rev J. Heber Miller, Belmond; Rev C W. Brand, Algona, Rev. Chester Custer, Renwick, and Rev R. R. Kessinger, Goldfield.

Senior Class Play

This is the second in our series of articles on the Senior Class Play, "You Can't Take It With You," which will be given March 19 The family in the play believes in having hobbies, as they all have a different one. Grandpa spends his time going to commencement exercises and collecting snakes Paul Sycamore manufactures fire-crakers in the basement. His wife Penny, writes plays and also paints. Their daughter, Essie, does ballet dancing and makes candy in the kitchen. Her husband, Ed, who is a record fiend, operates a printing press with which he prints descriptive matter to put in the candy he delivers for Essie, which later leads him into trouble with the United States government Alice, the sensible one in the family, is a secretary and works in an office down town.

Our article for next week will be about the visitors and other boarders of the Sycamore family.

CAPITOL ARCHITECT

Staff Works Months to Renovate Capitol Building for Congress

By Anne Mattingly
WNU Washington Bureau

Belying its weathered and hoary walls, the century-and-a-half-old national capitol building presented a spruce appearance when lawmakers returned for the second session of the 82nd congress on January 8.

Dominating this city of beautiful buildings, the glistening white dome, surmounted with its figure of freedom, many priceless paintings refurbished, walls inside gleaming with fresh paint, shimmering chandeliers, hundreds of statues washed and polished, floors scrubbed and painted, many major jobs of plumbing and electrical work and the constant upkeep tasks, bore the mark of several months of unremitting labor by David Lynn, architect of the capitol and his corps of men and women workers.

The architect of the capitol has charge of the structural and mechanical care of the United States capitol building. He is also responsible for arrangements, in cooperation with the proper authorities, for ceremonies held in the building and on the grounds, which comprise 131.1 acres.

He is also charged with the structural and mechanical care of the senate and house office buildings, the capitol power plant, the legislative garage, the Library of Congress building and grounds, the United States Supreme Court building and grounds, the United States Court of Claims buildings, the United States court house; the United States Court of Appeals building, and the Columbia Hospital for Women.

The architect of the capitol is also the acting director of the Botanical Garden, and is charged with its operation as well as the house and senate restaurants. He serves as a member of the Capitol Police Board, the Commission for Enlarging of the Capitol Grounds, The District Zoning Commission, and the National Capitol Housing Authority. With all these duties, the architect maintains a staff of 950 persons.

THE CORNERSTONE of the capitol was laid September 18, 1793. The north wing of the old building, containing the senate chamber, now known as the old Supreme Court room, was constructed between 1793 and 1800. The senate chamber was ready for occupancy for the second session of the sixth congress which met November 17, 1800. The south wing, containing the house chamber, now known as Statuary Hall, was constructed between 1800 and 1811, and was completed for the first session of the tenth congress October 26, 1807.

After the British burned the capitol building in 1814, congress met in a brick building in northwest Washington known as Blodgett's Hotel, but the accomodations were inadequate. A group of public spirited citizens built a larger wooden building on Capitol Hill on the site of the present Supreme Court building and offered it to congress. The offer was accepted and the first session of the fourteenth congress was held there. Both houses continued to occupy this building until the capitol was restored in 1819.

The addition of the present house wing in 1857 and the senate wing in 1859 made the construction of a new dome necessary for the preservation of architectural symmetry. The dome of the original central building was made of wood covered with copper. This was replaced by the present one of cast iron, completed in 1865.

The first major changes in the house and senate chambers during the more than 90 years of their occupancy were made between 1949 and 1951. Temporary steel girders were removed and the old roof and skylights were replaced with a new roof of concrete and steel construction, covered with sheet copper. The cast iron and glass ceilings were replaced with new ones of stainless steel and plaster. Alterations were made in the interior of each chamber from floor to ceiling, with modern air conditioning and lighting. Changes and improvements were also made in the cloakrooms and other adjacent areas.

The 250,000 tourists who visit the building each year, as well as the congressmen and their staffs, and citizens generally can be proud of Mr. Lynn's work during his 29 years of stewardship as overseer of the capitol, to which part he was appointed by President Coolidge in 1923.

Star Dust
STAGE—SCREEN—RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

ON the strength of their performances in Horizon Pictures' "The African Queen" Katharine Hepburn and Humphrey Bogart make a strong claim to the 1952 Oscars; both are superb. Throughout almost the entire picture they are alone, yet the interest never lags. At times the excitement is almost too keen; this one is a real thriller. Directed by John Huston and made in Africa, in Technicolor, it is beautifully done; casting Robert Morley in a secondary role is an example of the effort that was made to turn out a perfect production. Hollywood's severest critics will have a hard time finding fault with "The African Queen".

HUMPHREY BOGART

"Hollywood Star Playhouse", a new dramatic NBC radio show emanating from Hollywood, makes its network debut on Sunday the 24th at 5:00 E.S.T. The half-hour program features name stars in original dramas.

Sandra Michael's "Against the Storm", the only daytime radio serial ever to win the Peabody Award, was named the best daytime dramatic show in the 16th annual FAME poll of the country's radio editors, made by Motion Picture Daily. The Lucille Ball-Desi Arnaz television show, "I Love Lucy", won the title of "Most promising female star" for Lucille.

THE FICTION CORNER

CIGARETTE TRICK

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

JOE Frazer finished his dinner, pushed back his chair and produced a cigarette. Extending his left hand horizontally, palm down, he placed the cigarette thereon, struck his left wrist sharply with his right hand and opened his mouth. The cigarette bounded into the air, somersaulted and missed popping into Joe's mouth by a hair. Joe giggled goodnaturedly and repeated the operation. On the fifth try his lips caught the somersaulting cigarette in midair and held on. Joe gurgled triumphantly and struck a match.

3-Minute Fiction

Watching this performance from across the table, Bess, Joe's wife, considered screaming hysterically, but controlled herself. Instead she decided on another course . . .

A year before they were married, when Joe and Bess first met, Bess had thought it was cute. Like all of Joe's ways. The first time it happened they had dined at a tiny country inn. After the meal Joe had produced a cigarette, tried four times to successfully perform his trick, and succeeded on the fifth attempt.

Joe was clever at other things, too.

But the cigarette gag was his special achievement. During the year that elapsed before they were married Bess must have seen him perform it a hundred times.

After the first hundred, Bess began to weary of the cigarette trick a little. She didn't say so, of course, because Joe was pretty proud of his achievement.

And so they were married. They went to Maine for a week's honeymoon, and Bess saw the cigarette trick performed, without variation, 21 times. They came back to Worcester and began housekeeping. Joe resumed work and was gone all day. Dinner was the only meal he ate at home, and so Bess had to watch the cigarette trick only once on week days and three times on Sunday. But that was enough—enough to drive her almost mad. After six months of it she found herself waiting at the end of each meal for sight of Joe reaching for his cigarette, for a sound of his gurgling laugh, for the vision of his triumphant grin. She felt like the condemned man who awaits the first shock of current.

Joe was clever at other things, but the cigarette trick was his special achievement.

She took measures to absent herself at the ritual, but they failed. Joe required an audience and he always waited patiently for her return. He expected her smile of approval.

Bess realized Joe thought the cigarette trick a noteworthy accomplishment. He was vain. It wouldn't do to ask him to stop. His ego couldn't stand the gaff. No, she had to think of some other way and think of it quickly, before the funny wagon backed up to their door one day and took her away . . .

JOE applied the match to his cigarette, inhaled deeply and exhaled contentedly. His look was the look of a man of smugness, complacency, superiority. Joe was clever. Joe knew it. He was the life of every party, because he knew so many cute tricks.

Bess reached for the cigarette box. She drew forth a cigarette. She extended her left hand outward horizontally, palm down. She placed the cigarette thereon. She suspended her right hand above the wrist of her left and smiled at Joe.

Joe's idle interest quickened. He was amused. Poor Bess.

"Try it," Joe urged patronizingly, "Go ahead and try it. See how you make out."

Bess tried it. She smacked her left wrist sharply. Up bounded the cigarette, somersaulted. Bess' mouth opened. Her head remained stationary. The white cylinder, as if responding to a magnet, darted toward her lips. She caught it and hung on.

Joe's jaw dropped. His eyes bulged. He gaped.

Bess gurgled triumphantly and struck a match. "The first try," she chortled. "No four out of five for me."

Joe Frazer no longer performs his cigarette trick for the entertainment of wife and friends. Bess is happy. She hopes Joe won't develop any more cute tricks. It takes too much time and patience to perfect them. Two hours every day for two months.

Old West Has Given Way to Modern Civilization

By Wright A. Patterson

I KNEW the old west, the west of Indian fighting days, only through the experiences of acquaintances who had been a part of that valiant little regular army of under 25,000 men, which subjugated the Indians and opened the plains and mountains from the Missouri river through the Rocky mountains.

Among those I knew was Gen. Nelson A. Miles, then commanding the department of the Missouri, with headquarters in Chicago. As Chicago correspondent of the Army and Navy Journal, it was a part of my job to call on the general each week, seeking news of the army.

From him I never secured very much of his experiences in the Indian wars. He was much more interested in telling me of his social engagements. At that time he was a social lion in Chicago, made much of by the society leaders, and he liked it. Another of the general officers of that old army was Gen. Frank Richardson, but his experiences were more in Alaska, than in the west, though he had commanded army posts and troops in the west. Then there was Gen. Charles King, of whose stories of the western army I never missed one so far as I know. An hour with King was favorite entertainment for me.

But a standby at all times was Major George F. Lee. Lee had enlisted in the army as a private in the late 60's or early 70's. He later was commissioned as an officer and before retirement had risen to the rank of major. He had participated in practically all of the campaigns against the Indians and knew the west as a boy might know his father's farm.

He was in the campaign that defeated Geronimo and his Apaches. It was Lee's description of Tucson that gave me the urge to see that place. Now I have visited Tucson, but I did not find the place he had so vividly described. Instead of a little trading post with trains of Conestoga wagons on their way to the gold fields of California, I found a beautiful modern city, a place of fine homes, of magnificent hotels, beautifully landscaped.

Instead of pioneers and their families moving west, there are veritably thousands of tourists enjoying the sunshine and looking, as I was, for that old west that has given way to comfort and civilization. Instead of the old army post, with its squadron or two of cavalry, a battery or two of light artillery and a regiment of infantry, there is a mammoth air field for great bombing planes, B-50's, that may some day be called upon to visit Moscow and pay respects to Joe Stalin.

But there is much of the atmosphere of the Tucson that Lee knew still to be found in Tucson.

Today the Santa Rita hotel occupies the ground that in George Lee's day was the shack of the army sutler. To me that corner was holy ground. I could easily imagine George Lee critically looking over the stock in that shack in an effort to decide what he could afford to buy with his private's pay of $13 a month. Today fine, well stocked stores have taken the place of the sutler's shack.

Up in the mountains, some five miles outside the city limits, there is old Tucson, a place that is typical of what George Lee had pictured to me. It is but a village of adobe huts, all of them occupied by Indian families, with no one of them appearing to be livable. That village is characteristically Indian of the old west days, except there is no fight in any of the inhabitants.

The prosperity of the Tucson of today is based on cattle. That is evident from the people on the streets and in hotel lobbies, ranchmen and bow legged cow men, with ten gallon hats, tight fitting high-heeled boots and spurs.

But Tucson is not the place that was described to me by Maj. George Lee, Col. Brinkerhoff, Private Make Mills, and others. Today it is a good place to go to, and because of its climate, its attractiveness, the hospitality of its people, and the atmosphere of the old west, it is a hard place to leave.

Socialism by whatever name it may be called is still socialism, of which America wants none.

Farm organizations are asking that farm subsidies be withdrawn. They are hearing from the five urban votes, and are wise.

Talent for Goodness

Lesson for March 2, 1952

MANY people can paint, or swim, who have no special talent for painting or swimming. So, many people are good who do not seem to have a special talent for goodness. This talent is not so common as we all wish it were. Goodness, real goodness, has many limitations. Two of the commonest are goody-goody-ness and good-for-nothing-ness. Goody goody people rub normal people the wrong way. Good-for-nothing-ness is not so irritating, but it is far from satisfying. Don't we all know persons of whom it is said, "He is good, but —"? Now of a really good person you never say "He is good, but—." You say, "I only wish there were more like him."

Dr. Foreman

He Chose to Help

SUCH a man was Barnabas, one of the leaders of the first Christian church. He was called "our beloved Barnabas" not by a single congregation but by a great church council. The whole Christian family of his time thought of him as "our Barnabas," and they loved him.

He was not what you would call a specially gifted man. He was very impressive in personal appearance, for we know that among superstitious people he was taken for Jupiter or Zeus, the most powerful of the Greek gods. But he was no gifted speaker, and if he wrote anything we do not hear of it.

His one great gift, his God-given talent, was goodness. He is described as a "good man, full of the Holy Spirit and of faith." He is first heard of as a property-owner who sold his land and turned over the proceeds for the benefit of his fellow Christians. He was one of those who "called not anything their own" but contributed all they had.

He Could Take a Back Seat

IF I can't be corn I don't want to be shucks" is a proverb Julius Caesar might have thought of if he had been a farmer instead of a general. Once that famous man was marching through a miserable little mountain village and one of his aides said something about "this hole." The general turned on him: "I would rather be first in this village," he said, "than second in Rome."

Most of us know how old J. C. felt, because most of us are not very good. But a really good person never feels that way. Your imitation-good person will take a back seat hoping soon to get his invitation to come up higher, and if he doesn't get it he will feel very peevish about the whole business.

A truly good person will be just as contented with the back seat if there is an abler man in the front seat. Now Barnabas was a good man, and he could take a back seat gracefully, could even do what is most difficult, resign from the front and slip into the rear.

He and Paul were the first missionary team in Christian history. During the time of their work together in the city of Antioch, and at the time the church commissioned them as missionaries, they are mentioned as "Barnabas and Saul." But, when they came back from that journey they were "Paul and Barnabas" and so they remained.

Paul was Barnabas' protege, his pupil, his assistant; and some men would be mightily irritated if their smart young assistants push into first place; but not Barnabas. He had that talent for goodness which includes being glad to play second fiddle to a better musician.

He Could See God

BARNABAS had another rare quality found in pure goodness: he could see good in others that was not on the surface. When Saul had just been converted everybody in Jerusalem thought he was faking; but Barnabas was the first to take him by the hand and believe in him.

When the church at Antioch, an inter-racial experiment, was worrying the old-line church at Jerusalem, Barnabas was sent up to look the situation over. Where others saw only a doubtful experiment, Barnabas "saw the grace of God and was glad."

Barnabas was the leader who recognized he could not do everything alone; he was the one who went after Paul and gave him his first real chance to become a Christian leader. Later on, when Paul wanted to fire young Mark as a quitter, Barnabas believed in him—and turned out to be right, too. It takes the truly good to see goodness!

"Miracle Drug" say SURIN Users

Pains of Arthritis, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Lumbago, Bursitis* Relief Can Start In Minutes

There's no internal dosing with SURIN. Nothing to swallow and wait anxiously for relief. You simply apply SURIN right at the point of pain and blessed relief starts as penetration beneath the skin gets under way. Of course there's a reason for this wonder-working new external fast pain relief medicine.

It's methacholine, a recent chemical born of research in a great laboratory. It acts speedily to aid penetration of SURIN's pain-quelling ingredients. Methacholine also causes deeper, longer-lasting pain relief and increased speed-up of local blood supply.

Tested on chronic rheumatics in large university hospital it brought fast relief to 73% patients and in home-for-the-aged 77%. Totally different from old-fashioned rubs and liniments, modern SURIN brings faster relief, longer without burning or blistering; without unpleasant odor or grease. Simply smooth on SURIN at the point of pain and feel pain ease in minutes. Money-back at your drug store if SURIN doesn't relieve muscle pain faster and better than anything you've ever used. A generous jar costs $1.25. *SURIN is not a cure for any of these conditions.

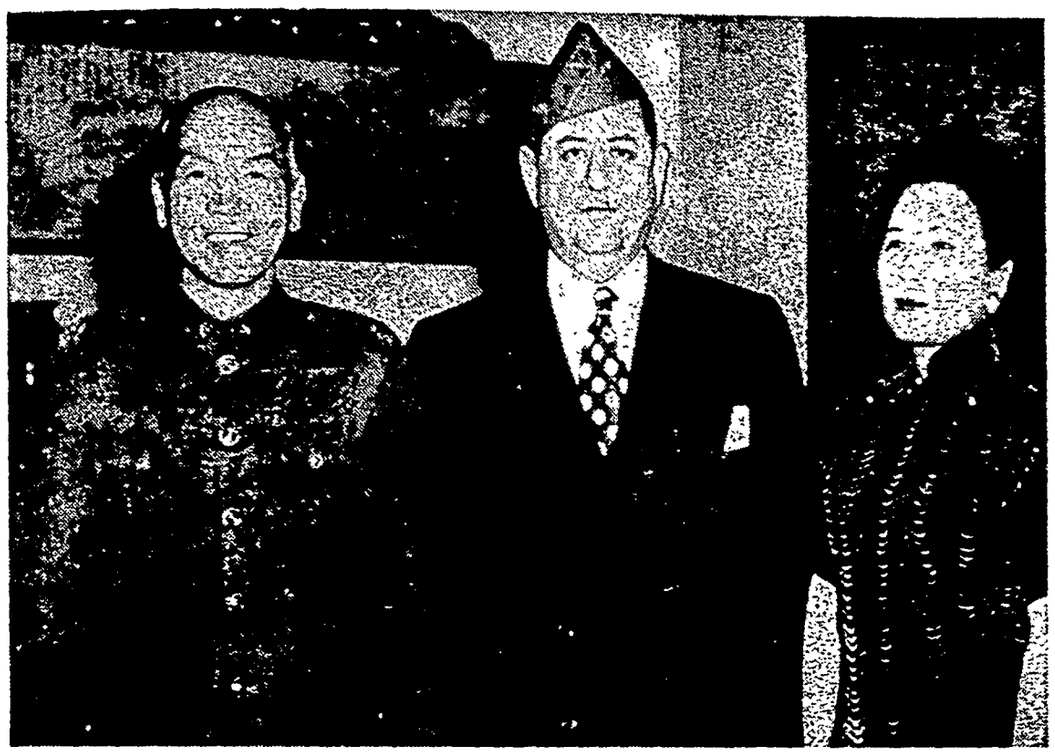
AMERICANS IN RED PRISON . . . Four Americans, held by the Reds in an unidentified Communist prison camp in North Korea, pass their time writing letters. This photo is one of several obtained recently by I.N.P. staff correspondent Dave Cicero from Red sources in Korea and flashed to the United States by radio. According to the caption accompanying the picture, the four are identified as follows: Roy H. McClain, Rochell, Ill.; Quincy Moore, Farmersville, Calif.; Robert Gorr, Sheboygen, Wisc.; and Billy Brown, Houston, Texas. It is not known whether the names were given in left or to right order.



JEWISH VETS COMMANDER MEETS CHIANGS . . . In Taipeh, Formosa, Paul Ginsberg, national commander of the U.S. Jewish war veterans, chats with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and the "Missimo" during his recent visit to Formosa as part of his far east tour. After his Formosa visit, Ginsberg said at a Hong Kong press conference that he believes there will be a cease-fire and armistice in Korea. He said also that Chiang told him that he believed the use of 30,000 Nationalist troops in Korea would help overcome the language difficulties which at present prevent Chinese Communist troops from surrender to the United Nations forces.

NATO NAVAL COMMANDER AND STAFF CHIEF . . . Admiral Lynde D. McCormick (right), newly-appointed supreme commander of the North Atlantic treaty naval forces, and Admiral Cato D. Glover, named McCormick's chief of staff, look at a world globe surrounded by miniature flags of NATO nations at the NATO naval chief's headquarters in Norfolk, Va. McCormick's appointment makes Norfolk, Va., the naval equivalent of Paris, France, in the NATO command setup for the defense of the free world.

PLAN WEDDING . . . Eddie Crisanelli is in jail in San Pedro, Calif., on a burglary charge, but that isn't a barrier to plans for a new life. He was visited by Marlene Eason, who told him, "I love you and want to marry you." Her mother has given consent to their marriage.

SKIN GRAFT SUCCESS FOR TWINS . . . In San Antonio, Texas, Pvt. Leonard Kojewski (in wheel chair) visits bedside of his identical twin, Leo, who suffered severe burns from a phosphorous bomb in Korea. Leonard gave Leo a new lease on life in a skin graft of 210 square inches. Doctors flew Leonard back from Korea for the operation because skin grafts from one twin to another are permanent and do not slough off. Both had a bandage check and are reported doing well.

GOVERNOR ACCUSED . . . Governor William Beardsley of Iowa was accused in Washington of being guilty of tax fraud and of being given "preferential treatment" by the government. The charge was made by Rep. O'Brien (D., Ill.)

Dempsey Seeking Heavyweights

By GRANTLAND RICE

JACK DEMPSEY'S attractive home in Beverly Hills, arranged largely for his two good-looking young daughters, aged 15 and 17, was the scene of the confab.

Jack has planned a world-wide survey and test of the best amateur boxers now living between the Mississippi River and the Suez Canal, or between the Pacific Ocean and the Rhine.

"Our border is the world," Jack says. "They come to us as amateurs but the winners will turn into well-paid professionals. We open at Toledo, go to Pittsburgh and then keep moving — building and building, cutting up and cutting down."

Grantland Rice

This led to our dip in the big heavyweight splash.

"What makes a good heavyweight?" we asked. "If anybody knows anything about a heavyweight, it should be you. You and Tunney. What are you looking for in a new champion?"

"The first thing a heavyweight needs is desire—the ambition to be a fighter. If he hasn't got that he will never make a fighter. He must be keen to learn, keen to train, and keen to win. He must understand it's a tough road and be willing to take it.

"The next thing a heavyweight needs is a punch. This can both come naturally and be taught. A heavyweight who can't punch is no good for anybody and even a natural puncher needs instruction. One can find out very soon whether a fellow can hit and hurt.

"The third thing," Jack said, "is the ability to take a punch. I've known heavyweights who were good boxers and who could also punch. But they couldn't take a punch.

There was Bombardier Wells of England. He was a fine boxer. He carried a terrific wallop. But any sort of punch to the body or to the chin would knock him out. He knocked Carpentier down four times in the first two rounds. Carpentier happned to land one and Wells went out like a candle in a gale.

"There are men who simply can't take a punch to the body or to the chin. They will never be any good as fighters. We can find that out pretty quickly. There are no really good heavyweights around today, and we are building from scratch.

Other Needed Matters

"Another point to consider," Dempsey said, "is a man's speed or quickness. A slow-moving, lumbering fellow is no good. I'd say that quickness was more important than speed. Joe Louis, for example, wasn't too fast afoot, but he had natural hand speed that helped him a lot.

"You need quick reflexes, where you see an opening and punch on the split-second, or where you see a punch coming and block it on the split-second. A slow-thinking fellow won't be of much use.

"These are among the things we have to watch, study, and later put to use. We know that most of those we try out won't be any good. But working across the country we'll find one here and another there. We won't find so many, but we'll find the few needed to stir things up.

"We'll give these fighters the best instruction possible. A lot of these modern heavyweights know nothing about the true art of fighting. Many of them never had the chance to learn. These boxing shows will be televised, and they will be worth seeing. They may be crude, but they'll be interesting.

"We may have a number of heavyweights who can't fight now, but who show promise for the future. At the very worst it will be an interesting experiment. And it will be given a thorough trial."

I've never seen Jack Dempsey quite as interested in anything before as he is in this new heavyweight plan. Thirty-two-and-a-half years have passed since he knocked out Jess Willard. More than 25 years have slipped away since he lost to Tunney. But he call of the old game that made him famous and wealthy is still sounding. At any rate, it will still be something to see.

Television and Football

The N.C.A.A. has decided to continue its policy of policing or curbing TV displays of college football games for 1952.

Along one line at least this is a somewhat morbid or melancholy idea. For through 1951 the TV committee picked out an extremely soggy card. The one game that meant something was Notre Dame vs. Michigan State. Most of the others were too dull to be worth watching.

If the 1952 TV committee doesn't know, we can name a few of the better teams the public at large would like to see.

East: Princeton, Navy, Pennsylvania, Cornell and possibly Holy Cross or Pitt.

South: Maryland, Tennessee, Kentucky, Alabama, Georgia Tech, Georgia, Virginia and Miami. Possibly Vanderbilt, Tulane and L.S.U.

Sure of good results with Active Dry Yeast

NAMED "COOK OF TODAY" AT ILLINOIS STATE FAIR

Granddaughter Mary Ann thinks that's a pretty special trophy Mrs. Gertrude Best is holding . . . and so it is! It's the Governor Stevenson Trophy, awarded for culinary skill, and Mrs. Best won it at last year's Illinois State Fair. Her cooking entries won 62 ribbons as well . . . so it's no wonder the State Fair judges gave her the "Cook of Today" title!

Mrs. Best of Staunton, Ill., has won hundreds of ribbons in her 16 years' exhibiting! And like so many prize-winning cooks, she gives plenty of credit to Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast. "It goes to work so fast," she says, "and always gives me good results!"

It's wonderful—the rich, delectable flavor of yeast-raised goodies. A treat for your family—and nourishing, too! When you bake at home, use yeast. And use the best—Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast! This grand Dry Yeast is always dependable! It's fast rising, fast dissolving—stays fresh for months. Buy a supply today.

Klemme Girl Holds Key Position At S.U.I. Station

ALICE ANDERSON IN NEWS WORK AT S.U.I.

Broadcasts News And Special Features

Alice Anderson (left) of Klemme and Jacquelynne Malloy of Marshalltown, seniors in journalism at the State University of Iowa, are shown broadcasting a program of women's news on University Station WSUI.

As managing news editor this semester, Miss Malloy is the first woman to hold the highest student position on the WSUI news staff. Last semester she set a precedent by being WSUI'S first woman city editor That position now held by Miss Anderson who shares the job with co-city editor, Dick Thorsen, Charles City.

Ten of the 60 students now enrilled in radio - journalism at the University are women.

Besides working in news, Miss Anderson teams up with Miss Malloy for a woman's program twice a week.

As city editor, Miss Anderson is in charge of reporting news in and around Iowa City.

Upon receiving the Bachelor of Arts degree with a major in journalism in June, she hopes to work in the news room of an Iowa radio station. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W J. Anderson of Klemme, and is a 1948 graduate of Klemme High School.

Senior Class Play Series

The third article in our series of articles on the senior class play, "You Can't Take It With You," is about the outsiders who come to visit the Sycamore family.

Mr DePinna a former ice man, delivered ice to the Sycamore's one day 5 years ago and just stayed. Now he helps Mr. Sycamore manufacture fire crackers.

Mr. Kolenkhov, a Russian, is Essie's ballet teacher and is inclined to look on the dark side of life.

The Grand Duchess Olga Katrina, a Russian friend of Kolenkhov's comes for dinner, but ends up by fixing the dinner her self.

Tony, Alice's fiance, comes from a rich and socially prominent family. Because of this Alice believes that because of their different social standings and outlook on life, the two families would not be able to get along.

Mr and Mrs. Kirby come to dinner to meet Alice's parents only to find out that they have come on the wrong night. Mr. Kirby raises orchids and Mrs Kirby believes in spiritualism.

Rheba is the Sycamore's Negro maid. Her boyfriend, Donald, is a neighbor boy who runs errands for the Sycamores. Even though he doesn't live there, he is over there all the time and catches flies for Grandpa's snakes

Wilbur C. Henderson, an agent from the Internal Revenue Department, comes to check up on their income tax.

Gay Wellington, an actress friend that Penny meets on a bus, comes home to read Penny's play but ends up by passing out.

Frozen cream makes poor-quality butter, warns A. W. Rudnick, extension dairyman at Iowa State College.

Republican Caucus

ELL TOWNSHIP REPUBLICANS WILL HOLD CAUCUS FRIDAY EVENING IN KLEMME

All Young Republicans Asked To Help Form Platform And Elect Delegates To Convention

Clark Lackore, Republican Committeeman for Ell Township, has called a Republican Caucus to be held at the grade school dining room in Klemme this week Friday evening, beginning at 8 00 o'clock.

Purpose of the caucus is to elect 10 delegates to the County Convention and also draw up resolutions as to what the people right here at home want in the way of improving the farm program and legislature and what they would like to have in the Republican Platform.

Mr. Lackore especially wants a big representation of young farmers and their wives, young business men and others in town and their wives, as well as the older members of the Republican party.

This being presidential election year, the Republican party wants to start at the very bottom . . . right out on your own farm, right in your own business and right in your own home and get YOUR idea of how the government should be run. These ideas will be carried to the county convention and to the state convention where they will be sorted over and incorporated into form to write the Republican platform

Iowa is one of the most important agricultural states in the Union and Iowa is the logical place to improve the agricultural program, using the good features and throwing out the undesirable portions and getting just what the farmers want. The place to start is right here AT HOME. That is why is is important that YOU be present at this meeting Friday evening, March 7th at the Klemme Grade School Building.

Free lunch will be served after the meeting.

MRS. LESTER STILLE IS APPOINTED TO HOSPITAL BOARD

Last week the Board of Supervisors appointed Mrs. Lester Stille, Klemme as a trustee on the County Hospital Board to take the place of her husband, Mr Lester Stille deceased. Mrs. Stille will attend all future meetings of the board.

The contract for the building of the new hospital will be let March 20 and it is hoped that actual construction will start early this spring.

IOWA SAFETY CONGRESS

Perhaps we just don't like to think about such things. Perhaps that explains why most of us are content to live in a world of accidents, in a time threatening destructive war, without the least knowledge of how to help the injured.

Yet, any man can find himself suddenly at the scene of an accident with the life of the injured victim literally depending on his knowledge of first aid.

If the air raid sirens ever sounds in Iowa, any man can find himself to be the only "doctor" immediately available to his own family.

Know how to help. Attend Red Cross first aid classes. Keep a first aid kit handy at all times, especially at home and in your car. Know how to use it. Know how to help.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

If Brown had been looking through his breast pocket, he might have avoided the accident. That's where he carried his glasses, in the breast pocket of his jacket.

He had some vague idea that if he were ever stopped by the police or highway patrol, he'd have time to slip the glasses on before the officer could check his license and see the words: "Restricted to adequate eye glasses"

Like many people, Brown had the idea that obeying the law was simpy a matter of compliance whenever the law came [illegible] So he faithfully carried [illegible]ses along whenever he just in case.

[illegible]st have been vanity that [illegible]ade Brown hide his glasses. He had been a good local athlete as a young man. Occasionlly, men from his own generation would still recall some of his exploits. He was 33 when he had to be fitted with glasses in order to renew his drivers license.

Perhaps Brown felt the glasses made him lose his character of the athlete that was still faintly remembered around the town. He only wore them in the darkness of a theatre.

Actually, Brown had 20-50 vision which means he could see at 20 feet what he should have been able to see at 50 feet.

Brown didn't run into trouble until the day he was traveling an unfamiliar highway and approached a stop sign at 60 miles an hour. Skid marks indicated he hit his brakes about 90 feet from the sign, or, at about the point he was first able to see it.

At that speed and distance, Brown would have skidded 227 feet beyond the sign except that another car entering the intersection stopped him. Everything was broken except Brown's glasses, neatly encased in his breast pocket.

EX-COMMUNIST TO SPEAK AT FOREST CITY SATURDAY EVENING

A number of Klemme people have heard Rev. Kenneth Goff, ex-communist speak at Britt and at Belmond and they say that he should be heard by more people. He tells what is going on behind the iron curtain countries and the dangers that we are facing here in America.

His next talk will be given at the Civic Auditorium at Forest City on Saturday evening, March 8 at 7:30 o'clock. If you have not heard him this will give you an opportunity.

More Polio Returns

Mrs. Orris Lundy brought in $227.05 Friday to Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson, Treasurer for the [illegible]ncock County Polio Fund, [illegible] been collected by Mrs. [illegible]nd her workers in Ell [illegible]p. Thanks ladies for the fine cooperation.

"SHOWING'EM" SELLS TIRE SERVICE, MOVES RECONDITIONED TIRES, TOO

Editor's Note: Don Schaefer, proprietor of Don's D-X Service here recently was written up in "Service Station Selling," a national publication. Here is the picture and story which appeared in the magazine:

Don Schaefer, Proprietor of Don's Service in Klemme, Iowa, has demonstrated to his own satisfaction—and somewhat to his inconvenience that showing them certainly does sell them.

Recently, to promote his Lectroseal Repair business, he got hold of a used tire and thoroughly reconditioned it. This he mounted on an outside display, like you see in the picture, along with a sign painted right on the tire. The sign featured "Lectroseal Repairing-One-Day Service." First day the tire was thus displayed, a man came in and insisted on buying it. Dealer Don accommodated the customer and fixed up another display piece. It too was soon sold . . and that's been going on ever since. Don isn't mad about this, of course He says that in addition to selling reconditioned tires he has received many comments—and substantial tire service business.

Florida Supreme Court Upholds Three Convictions

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—The Florida Supreme Court recently affirmed the grand larcency convictions of three Miami telephone girls who stole nearly $12,000 over a two-year period by hiding rolls of quarters in their brassieres. The case made national headlies several months ago.

The three girls are under sentence of one year each. They were employed by Southern Bell.

Chief Red Negotiator Succumbs to the Modern

MUNSAN, Korea — Gen. Nam Il, chief Communist negotiator at the Kaesong conference is a strong and determined person. He did give up, however on the use of "Red Star" matches. He had tried to use the matches to light his ever present cigarettes, but more than often was forced to ask someone for a light Finally, he decided convenience was much better than appearance, and began bringing a lighter.

FORGETFUL

"I'm getting old, boys," admitted Squire Farnol as he huddled close to the pot-bellied stove in the Centerville general store. "I kin tell because there's three things I never kin remember. names, faces and and—consarn it. I kain't even remember the third thing!"

Britisher Finds It Not Wise To Laugh at the Census Man

LONDON, Eng.—Don't laugh at the census taker. Douglas Adcock, who lives at Leigh-on-Sea, Essex, found to his sorrow that the British census is no joking matter. When the census taker called, Adcock laughed and refused to give any information.

In court, however, he was made to understand that it was no matter for pleasantry. An unsympathetic judge fined him a total of $56.

Diminishing Returns

"Thanks very much," said the minister, as little Tommy handed up his offering for the harvest festival; "I must call round this afternoon and thank your mother for these eight beautiful apples."

"P-please, sir," stammered Tommy, "would you m-mind thanking her for t-twelve apples?"

Steel Company Discovers There is No 'Heat Sickness'

CHICAGO—An intensified medical and safety program is helping employees of U.S. Steel's Chicago area mills beat the heat as midsummer temperatures soar.

The program is based upon an important medical discovery: That there is no such thing as heat sickness and that cases known as heat exhaustion, heat cramps and heat prostration are due largely to poor physical condition, improper rest and faulty diet.

U.S. Steel's hard-hitting campaign to reduce summer heat's toll in employee health has met with marked success since the program began in 1941. Only 41 cases, most of them minor, have been reported so far this year in Chicago area plants—a reduction of 90 per cent in ten years.

Workers are urged to get plenty of sleep and to take cool baths daily. "Beat the heat" wafers and candies are made available to all employees. They contain scientific amounts of salt and dextrose for the replacement of body losses of salt and sugar. More than 40 million salt tablets have been given to U.S. Steel workers in the past seven years.

A color film showing the right way to combat heat fatigue has been used extensively in the mills. More than 100,000 copies of "beat the heat" comic books have been distributed. These books, illustrated pamphlets and posters stress proper diet, rest and recreation.

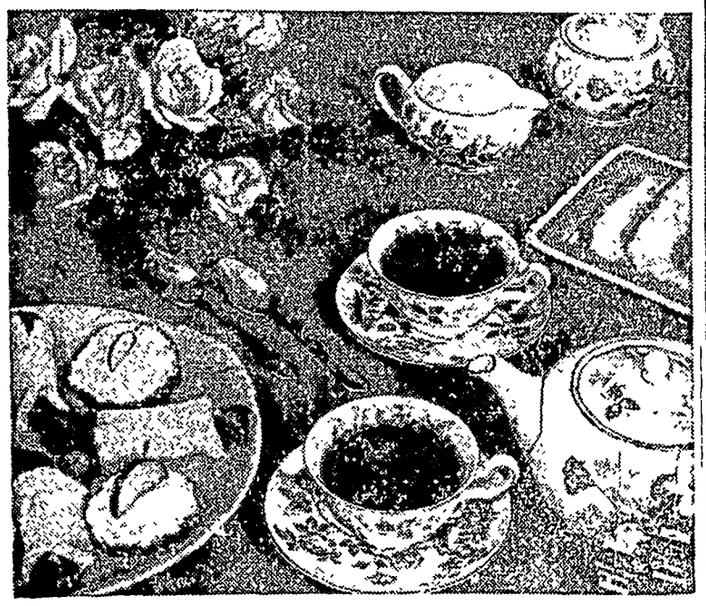
HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers



Serve Simple Refreshments Graciously
(See Recipes Below)

Entertaining Lightly

ANY WOMAN WHO belongs even to one club will have to take her turn at entertaining the members every once in a while. Perhaps it's a sewing circle, a bridge group or a committee.

These occasions which come in the afternoon or evening need something of the light refreshment variety. You'll want something your friends will rave about, but at the same time, keep it simple and easy to serve.

Light desserts are welcome often, and so are tasty but dainty sandwiches or cookies. If these can be made in advance, you're free to devote the last few minutes before they arrive toward looking your prettiest or giving the house a once over lightly to have everything at its best.

If the refreshments are to be served buffet style, with all the ladies going to the dining table or sideboard to help themselves, this can be set in advance. Your prettiest tea set with attractive platters of cakes, sandwiches or cookies will make for a decorative occasion.

A few blossoms or leaves attractively arranged can add festivity even to simple tables. If you have a lovely glass bowl, try floating a few flowers in clear water, or place some vines in a well designed container.

Refrigerator cookies can be mixed and chilled several days ahead of time, to be baked on the morning of the day you entertain. This type is especially colorful:

Fruity Ice Box Cookies
(Makes 6 dozen)

- ⅓ cup shortening
- ⅔ cup granulated sugar
- 1 egg
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 2 cups sifted flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup minced candied cherries
- ¼ cup minced candied green pineapple

Blend together shortening, sugar, egg and vanilla. Stir in remaining ingredients and blend until smooth.

Divide dough into four equal parts and shape each portion into a 1-inch roll. Chill rolls thoroughly. (They may be wrapped in foil or waxed paper). Slice off cookies about ¼-inch thick and place on ungreased cookie sheets 2 to 3 inches apart. Bake in a moderate (350°F.) oven for 15 minutes.

* * *

These date cookies are really sandwiches and give you nice variety with any other kinds of cookies served:

Oatmeal Date Sandwiches
(Makes 48 cookies)

Cookie Dough:

- 1¼ cups butter or substitute
- 1 cup brown sugar
- 2½ cups flour
- 2½ cups rolled oats, uncooked
- 1 teaspoon soda
- ⅓ cup warm water

Filling:

- 1 pound dates, minced
- 1 cup sugar
- ½ cup cold water

To make cookie dough, cream butter or substitute and add brown sugar, flour and oats. Combine soda and water and add to first mixture.

Combine mixture thoroughly. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto cookie sheet and press very flat with the bottom of a glass. Bake in a moderate (350°F.) oven for 10 to 15 minutes.

For filling, combine dates, sugar and water and cook in a double boiler until mixture is thickened, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat and cool. When both cookies and filling are cool, spread filling on one-half of the cookies and cover with the remaining cookies, matching them by size.

Swedish Snowballs
(Makes about 4 dozen)

- 2 cups rolled oats, uncooked
- 2 cups sugar
- 3 tablespoons cold coffee
- 1 tablespoon cocoa
- 2 teaspoons vanilla
- ½ cup butter or substitute, melted

Combine rolled oats, 1 cup sugar, coffee, cocoa and vanilla in mixing bowl. Blend well with melted butter. Shape mixture into small balls about an inch in diameter. Roll balls in remaining sugar. Chill thoroughly in refrigerator.

* * *

Date-Coconut Pie
(Makes 1 9-inch pie)

- 2 eggs, slightly beaten
- ¾ cup sugar
- 1 cup sour cream
- 1 tablespoon fine bread crumbs
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon nutmeg
- ¼ teaspoon allspice
- ¼ teaspoon cloves
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- ½ cup dates, minced
- ½ cup moist, shredded coconut
- 1 9-inch unbaked pie shell

Beat sugar together with eggs; beat sour cream slightly and add to egg-mixture with all remaining ingredients. Stir until well mixed. Pour into pie shell and bake 15 minutes in a hot (425°F.) oven, then reduce heat to moderate (350°F.) and bake 30 minutes.

* * *

Here are two spreads which make small, tasty sandwiches. Use them on bread which is cut in small strips, rounds, triangles or crescents:

Peperoni Spread

- ¼ pound peperoni sausage
- 1 5-ounce jar cheese spread (relish or pimiento)
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
- ¼ cup heavy cream, whipped

Grind the sausage and blend with cheese. Fold in parsley and whipped cream. Let mellow in refrigerator for 4 to 5 hours, covered, for best flavor.

Zesty Spread

- ½ pound braunschweiger sausage
- ¼ cup salad dressing
- ¼ cup pickle relish
- 1 teaspoon horseradish

Blend together and whip with a fork.

LYNN SAYS:
Enhance Your Vegetables To Add Menu Interest

Preserve fresh green colors in vegetables by cooking without the cover. Some vitamin loss will occur, but short cooking can prevent much of this, and vegetable will be eaten if it's more attractive.

Cabbage and cauliflower should be washed carefully to prevent any worms from lodging in the vegetable. If placed in cold, salted water for a short time before cooking, worms can be drawn out.

Combine leftovers of vegetables to achieve colorful triumphs like peas or corn in scooped-out beets, lima beans in squash nests, carrots in green pepper, spinach molded in rings for creamed onions and cauliflower with pimiento strips.

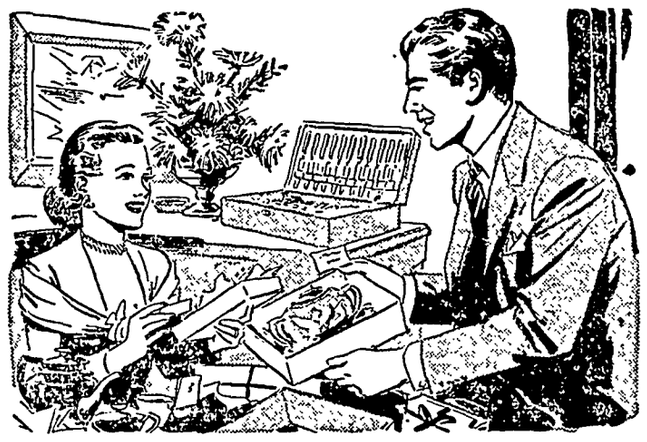
Mashed potatoes should be as light and fluffy as it's possible to make them. Older potatoes should be boiled in water to which some milk and lemon juice is added to prevent darkening. Use hot milk in which butter is melted to make them fluffy.

NOT ALWAYS KIDS . . . It is quite common to see pictures of youngsters trapped in odd situations, but it happens to grown-ups. Jim Centineo, Baltimore, proved the point when he reached his arm into the bottle chute of a soft drink vending machine to find out why no drink was forthcoming.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Daydreams And Ideal Marriage

By Lawrence Gould

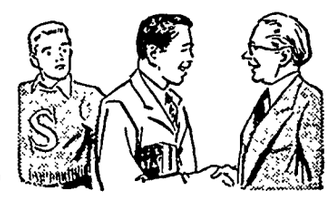


Should you dream of an "ideal marriage"?

Answer: Yes, if you are able to persuade yourself that you are an "ideal" or perfect person. But if you are honest enough to admit you are imperfect, there is no use in expecting that your marriage will be any more ideal than you are. The best indication of how happy your marriage will be is how happy —or at least, contented—you and your "intended" were before you came to love each other For marriage makes happy people happier, but rarely brings happiness to a chronically unhappy man or woman. You must have learned to get on with yourself before you can get on with another person

Is your earliest memory important?

Answer: Yes, write Victor W. Eisenstein, M.D., and Rowena Ryerson, M.S.S. When a patient is asked, "What is the first thing you remember personally in your whole life?" he will usually report a seemingly trivial incident from the time when he was three or four years old. But the fact that he selects this particular event may reveal to the psychiatrist his whole basic attitude toward life as well as the nature of the childish conflicts that are at the root of psychosomatic illness. However, first memories are like dreams or neurotic symptoms—they are generally too complex in their implications for you to be able to "interpret" them without help.



Does military service improve college grades?

Answer: Yes, says Louis Laurs and James D. Perry of the College of the City of New York. Study the records of 227 veterans showe that on the average they earne better grades after their term o service than before it. This was true especially in technical subjects, in which veterans did "significantly" better than non-veterans, even though their average scholastic aptitude beforehand had been lower. The fact that the veterans were mostly older than their non-veteran classmates was adjudged a factor in the difference but not a complete explanation of it. Probably they also were more realistic.

KEEPING HEALTHY

The Status of Our Living Diabetics

By Dr. James W. Barton

NOTWITHSTANDING the fact that the lives of thousands of cancer patients are being saved by x-rays, radium and surgery, the cause is still unknown and thousands of patient research workers throughout the world are diligently seeking it. Once the cause is found, early treatment can be given and early treatment will prevent cancer.

When we think of those two formerly fatal diseases, diabetes and pernicious anemia, and realize that these diseases can now be controlled, it gives us hope that the finding of the cause of cancer may not be much longer delayed.

It is of interest at this time to read a recent report of Dr. Elliott P. Joslin, Boston, the pioneer in the study and treatment of diabetes. In The Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr Joslin gives the history of patients living with this disease whose diabetes started or was first recognized while they were under 40 years of age. There were 516 cases with diabetes of 25 years' duration with onset between 15 and 40 years, 273 men and 243 women.

In this group, as in all other groups, the percentage with a history of heredity in diabetes was high, namely 44 per cent; among the men it was 32 per cent and among the women 53 per cent (as usual, higher).

What is the present status or condition of these 516 diabetics whose onset was between the ages of 15 and 40, with 25 years of diabetes behind them?

Information was sought for nine items from reports from patients and physicians as to their ability to work, whether cataracts had formed or were forming, whether amputation of an extremity had been done, if there were heart or head disturbances.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

Too much vitamin A may cause serious symptoms.

Allergy may interfere with normal growth of children.

The emotions cause some skin ailments.

Overweights are sluggish physically and sometimes mentally and lack ambition.

Every patient is a mental patient.

That emotional disturbances can affect the heart even more than physical effort has been known for a long time to physicians.

The body mechanism that regulates weight allows us to eat more than we need so that we can store a little fat against an emergency or famine.

KATHLEEN NORRIS

Why the Cigars?

"MY HUSBAND was out of his senses with joy when our boy was born 18 years ago," writes a Los Angeles mother. "At that time we had two girls of 9 and 11, and for years Chester had complained that he had no son. The careless way he would answer, 'yes, we've got a couple of girls!' hurt me terribly though I never said so.

"When Lawrence was born his actions hurt me just as much· he chattered and telephoned about the boy, made me presents, acted as he never had about Persis and Vonnie For a year or two the baby could do no wrong; then our fourth child and third daughter, Jacqueline, was born, and from that moment he never had any more use for the long-desired son. The older girls were smart students, never had any trouble in school. Larry was slow

Offered Prayer

"During this time, I advised, talked, prayed, saw teachers, helped with homework, punished, rewarded. Chester, my husband, took no part in this. Our daughters married; he did the correct fatherly thing, grandchildren came, we have five, and he is proud of them But to Larry he gave only criticism, impatience, intolerance. That boy would have to wake up, that boy couldn't get away with it, that boy thought fathers were made of money, that boy could telephone his crowd he couldn't go. If Larry ever was sneaky or sullen it was when his father was around. Jackie could do no wrong, but with Larry it was scene after scene.

"Well, Larry, now in Korea, is superb at 18. He is strong, friendly, simple, immensely popular, and a wonderful son to me. For his father he has only a respectful politeness, which disappoints and baffles Chester. He wants his tall son to be his pal; he wants to boast to his friends that he and Larry are like brothers He reproaches me as having deflected the boy's confidence and affection.

"But how could it be otherwise when for years Chester has avoided the outings I planned for them, signed report cards which left him only indifferent or angry, and invented excuses that saved him the bother of taking a small boy off for a Sunday with his father? My years of 'why don't you take Larry?' never bore fruit. Small boys are greedy, exacting, destructive, boring, and most men don't like small boys.

"Understandable enough. But then why that uproar when the baby is a boy, why that glumness when it's another girl? Why the cigars?"

Frequent Question

This, Elena, is a question women often ask themselves. Because a boy is slower than a girl to develop manners, character, studiousness, it is his mother who must be patient with the boy, and stand by him. And with this position his father, who was so rapturously, fatuously, self-congratulatory when the boy was born, has no patience. Martha is ruining that kid

Friendship with one's children is a thing of slow growth, and like all other friendships must depend upon liking, sympathy, understanding, and the flattery of occasional outbursts of affection, occasional presents, and a very open desire to share that friend's company whenever possible. How many men give these to that dumb, open-eyed, coke-and-movies-and-comics - demanding little fellow who has broken his pencil, lost his rubbers, spilled his milk, and whined about school for the hundredth time at this morning's breakfast?

The other day, I saw a list of four rules for fathers. Perhaps they were for mother, too, but if father gets started on them mother will cooperate. They were: (1) Give your child religion. Give him that very definite sense that means he is happy when he is unselfish, obedient and good, because there is some spirit in us that feels and corresponds with a higher power than we ever can understand, and its reward is happiness. (2) Set your child a high example. (3) Make him feel as you do yourself, a responsible unit in his family and group and community.

A teacher of 8 and 9-year olds for some 30 years told that before a boy was two weeks in her classes she knew the sort of home from which he came. More, she knew the chances he had to become a good citizen or a failure as a human being. She told me that many a life is ruined before a little fellow is 8 years old, and many a little soul twisted forever.

Economical Cough Relief! Try This Home Mixture

No Cooking. Makes Big Saving.

To get quick and satisfying relief from coughs due to colds, mix this recipe in your kitchen.

First, make a syrup with 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. This is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its quick action on throat and bronchial irritations.

Put Pinex into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. Thus you make a full pint of splendid medicine—about four times as much for your money It never spoils, and tastes fine.

And for quick, blessed relief, it is surprising. You can feel it take hold in a way that means business. It loosens phlegm, soothes irritated membranes, eases soreness. Makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep. Just try it, and if not pleased, your money will be refunded.

Eyeglass Wearing Today Not Like Yesteryear

Nearly 100 million Americans are wearing spectacles today, the Better Vision Institute reports. And these modern eyeglasses not only act as seeing aids but they look good.

They are a far, far cry from the glasses invented by Italy's Salvino del Armati 665 years ago, and from those framed in wood, bone, leather, and other materials in the centuries that followed.

The Florentine's eyeglasses swiftly gained favor, and by the year 1300 Venetians were sending spectacles to customers throughout Europe—customers who could afford their high prices. By that time, the Chinese—who had probably invented spectacles independently—were making many pairs. The Chinese made tortoise-shell rims because they considered the tortoise a sacred animal whose shell would bring long life and good luck. As glasses were used in China for reading, they became the badge of scholars and aristocrats, and even lensless rims were sometimes worn as a symbol of position.

The invention of printing in 1440 brought eyeglasses into more widespread use in the western world. For more than two centuries, itinerant peddlers roved the roads of Europe with trays of spectacles marked "young" or "older." There were no prescriptions or adequate examinations then. Not until about 1700 were glasses fitted to the individual, and even then examinations were pretty primitive.

Candy Came Long Way From Sugar-Coated Pill

The little sugar-coated pill has come a long way.

A penny's worth of candy used to keep a youngster happy for quite a while. And an old-fashioned "taffy pull" was lots of work, but well worth it. It's a different story today. The national sweet tooth has come into its own, and Grandma's fudge kettle has turned into a $365,000,000 a year business.

It all really started some 500 years ago in the English apothecary shops, ancestors of our drugstores. About that time, apothecaries began using sugar to coat their pills. Before long, the sugar-coated medicine became so popular that the medicine was left out and the pills were manufactured with sugar only Descendants of the old English medicated sweetmeats can now be bought in more than two thousand different forms or varieties. Candy counters and sweetshops in the United States annually sell over two billion pounds of confections.

Visiting around Iowa

by Joe Marsh

Iowa's Big Factories

Cousin Mary was impressed with Iowa's cornfields when she visited us last fall.

"Never saw so much corn," she said.

Being from the east, Mary was even more surprised when I told her Iowa holds some world records in manufacturing, too.

For example, in nineteen different products, Iowa has the world's largest factories . . . everything from cellophane to washing machines.

Yes, Iowa is well-balanced . . . not only in agriculture and industry, but in our thinking, and way of life.

With everyone respecting each other's occupation, ideas, and standards, it's a good state to live in. Uncle Bill prefers farming, does his trading Saturday nights, always drops in for his two cups of coffee. I work in an office, get groceries on the way home, like a temperate glass of beer with dinner. Bill likes his way, I like mine. And we both take a balanced view of the other's choice . . . whether in jobs or beverages.

Balanced industry makes a good state. Balanced, tolerant thinking makes good citizens.

What Your Phone Bill Must Pay for Today

Like everyone else, Central Iowa finds that their "Cost of Living" has gone sky-high. These figures can show you why your telephone bills have increased.

	Increase
Crossarms	208%
Cable	173%
Poles	93%
Wire	130%

THESE materials are Central Iowa's "groceries" . . . things that they must have to keep your telephone operating at its best. Even the cost of the telephones, themselves, has gone up 57% during the past six years.

You expect good telephone service, and the cost of providing that service is the basis for the price you pay. In addition to materials, the wages and taxes are major items of cost . . . and the company has raised its wages 82%, and the taxes have gone up 277%. As these costs skyrocketed the company was forced to pass some of the increased prices on to its customers or face the threat of inflation putting them out of business.

EVERY COMMUNITY SERVED IS GETTING IMPROVED SERVICE

You and your neighbors rightfully want and expect a high quality of telephone service from the company that serves your community. Central Iowa is investing huge sums of money in plant modernization and expansion to assure you of this type of service. During the past ten years the Central Iowa Telephone Company has invested nearly 3 million dollars in an effort to give you the best possible service . . . both now and in the future.

County Tournament

Both of the Junior high teams lost out in the semi-finals at Crystal Lake, March 1st. The Klemme girls lost a thriller to Corwith 22-19 after leading at the 3rd quarter 15-12. The game was a very rough one with 36 fouls being called. Bridges led Klemme's scoring with 13.

The Klemme boys lost their game to Kanawha 25-19 after leading 11-5 at one time and being tied up 11-11 at the half and 17-17 at the third quarter. The game was quite well played by both teams. Haefner and Kramer had 6 points apiece, Larsen 4, and Brinkman 3.

Both Corwith and Kanawha teams will play in the finals.

Jr. Hi Loses Doubleheader

Coach Juhl's Junior high "Rockettes" lost a thriller last Saturday against Corwith 12-14 The game was very poorly played by both teams. This was the 4th defeat against 11 wins this season We played the same team in the semi-finals of the county tournament.

The boys also lost a close one 29-25. This game was a little on the eratic side also. This marked the 9th defeat against 6 wins for the boys.

Rockets Win Doubleheader

Coach Juhl's Rockets provided him with a double win over his home town boys from Forest City.

The reserves played a very good game winning 29-15.

The varsity game was a thriller and the Rockets came out on top 33-32 after trailing 7 points with three minutes to go. Warren Terhufen tossed in the winning bucket and we stalled out the last minute of the game.

Brinkman was high with 11 points, followed by Haefner's 10, Kramer's 8, and Larsen and Terhufen with 2 each.

Donald Ausborn chalked up 10 points in the second team game, all in the last half.

Decorators' Tricks Add Great Charm to Rooms

Have you discovered how much distinction unusual colors can give your rooms? With decorative textiles in gay colors and smart contemporary furniture in a variety of woods, such colors as shadowy blue, sun gold, and nut brown have come into favor with decorator and homemaker alike.

You can, of course, obtain many of the fashion-right shades you desire already mixed—or—you can do the mixing yourself. Just be sure to mix enough to cover the entire surface to be painted. Tell your paint dealer the measurements of your room so that he can estimate the amount you will need. The colors you will use to obtain the desired hue come in tubes or small cans, if you're planning to tint an oil base paint or enamel.

In tinting oil base paints, add a little of your base paint to a small quantity of tinting color and mix them together thoroughly. Then combine the mixture with the paint in the large container and blend it well. After you add the final dab of color to your paint, see that all of the tinting compound is absorbed. Then strain the whole quantity through a regular paint strainer, a wire screen, or an old stocking—just to make sure there are no lumps left in the bottom of the can.

To alter the color of a lacquer, a casein or an emulsion paint, you usually combine two or more of the ready-mixed coatings. Your dealer can advise you and show you samples of the colors than can be obtained by such mixing.

Farm Pond Owners Warned Of 'Stale Pond Diseases'

Make sure that farm ponds do not become reservoirs of livestock diseases during summer dry spells, livestock owners are advised.

An animal health bulletin points out that low water levels and contamination of farm ponds may cause much sickness among farm animals and bring heavy losses to the owner.

Stale pond water may bring about, or intensify, coccidiosis, stomach and nodular worms, mouth sores, algae poisoning and scours.

This happens so often that veterinarians sometimes refer to these problems as 'stale pond diseases.'

Another dangerous condition arises when shorelines recede due to lower water levels. Cattle walk in the soft mud, leaving holes and sharp ridges which later harden when exposed to the sun and air.

Veterinarians have found that this 'washboard' ground is a serious hazard to the animals' feet. It may easily cause cuts and bruises. Germs lurk in stagnant water, thus gaining entrance to cause 'foul foot.'

Livestock raisers are strongly advised to either fence off ponds or to remove cattle when water levels drop, or when scum on the surface indicates that ponds are becoming stale. This simple precaution may save livestock owners a heavy toll of dead and diseased animals.

Antihistamine for Animals

Reports are beginning to pile up on the use of antihistamine drugs in treating various disorders of livestock and pets. Articles by veterinarians, published in scientific journals, stress that these drugs are not a "cure-all" but that they do appear to be helpful against some types of ailments when used in conjunction with good nursing and other lines of treatment. Their main value, investigators say, seems to be the temporary relief and "lift" they give sick animals Repeated trials have shown that cattle, sheep, and horses suffering from founder can be returned to normal conditions within a few hours after treatment with antihistamine drugs now available to veterinarians. These preparations also give animals relief from other kinds of digestive disturbances as well as allergic skin diseases.

Facts About Pentagon

Crowded wartime Washington was reluctant to make space for a building the size of the Pentagon, so it was located across the Potomac in near-by Virginia. Pentagon planners flouted the conventional classic government architecture and "did everything by fives." For instance, there are five sections to the Pentagon, one building nesting within another, and each has five sides. The perimeter of the outer building measures a fifth of a mile on each side and is joined to the other sections by a network of corridors. Naturally, there are five floors.

Nation's Food Reserves

By maintaining the soil's productive capacity, farmers can have a vital part in supplying the needs of our military forces for national defense. The U. S. department of agriculture reports that the nation's food reserves and reserves of food materials in the soil are in better condition today than they were at the beginning of World War II. Much of this improvement is a direct result of the continuous protection and development of the land through the participation of nearly three million farmers in the agricultural conservation program throughout the nation.

TULE LAKE

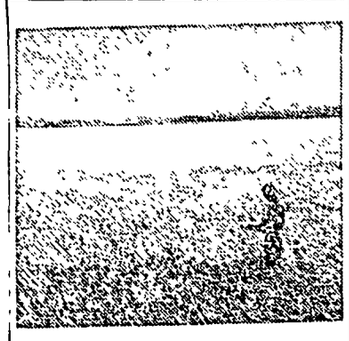
Fabulous Crops Being Produced On Dry 90,000-Acre Lake Bed

Modern pioneers have struck pay dirt in the now dry bed of a 90,000-acre lake near the California-Oregon border. Instead of rich ores, in the past five years they have taken $27,000,000 from the rich soil in the form of Klamath potatoes, malting barley and clover.

The new farmers, most of them veterans of Uncle Sam's fighting forces, homesteaded and developed the area, after the waters of shallow Tule Lake had been drained by the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation.

At first, even the surrounding terrain was inhospitable. It lies on a 4,000-foot high plateau, rimmed by rugged mountains and the desolate Modoc lava beds.

But the soil was fabulously rich, and needed only irrigation water and the hard work of the willing veterans to eventually transform the area into a prosperous, modern, comfortable agricultural community.



This is a typical field of barley nearing maturity in the Tule Lake homestead area. The old shoreline of the lake can be clearly seen at the base of the hills in the background.

It wasn't easy. The first homesteaders lived in shacks and tents while they harvested a crop. Roads were bottomless mires of mud. There were no schools, no electric power, no telephones. Many of the faint hearted gave up, but most faced the situation and hung on doggedly.

The town of Tulelake was incorporated in 1937. Paved roads crossed the basin, power and telephones were installed, and homes built. Schools and churches went up, and a weekly newspaper began publication.

THE FULL potential of the area still had not been tapped, so after World War II the veterans' quest for land culminated in the most publicized lottery since selective service. Two thousand ex-servicemen from all parts of the nation sought 86 farms being offered for homesteading. Other farms were homesteaded in 1947 and 1948. Today there are plans for opening still another area of the old lake bed.

Agriculturally, the homestead area is a sensation, despite its short growing season and often severe winters. Klamath potatoes have been sure-fire and the Hennchen (malting) barley grown there has drawn premium prices almost every year. Introduction of Alsike clover brought the homesteaders another good cash crop. In addition the old lake bed raises onions, alfalfa hay, some seed crops, and livestock.

The steady cash income from the homestead farms has brought an equally steady and solid growth to the community. City officials like to point out that, despite its brief history, Tulelake is not a boom town. Its permanent, modern buildings, wide paved streets, four hotels, theater, schools, civic and social organizations confirm that contention.

As one of the west's most famous duck and goose hunting areas, the city is benefitted by a large influx of hunters every year. And the area even has an incipient oil boom.

Today the entire area is prosperous. The homesteaders, from first arrivals to the Johnny-come-latelys of the years from 1946 to 1948, are doing fine. Merchants in Tulelake are more than prosperous.

The homesteaders are grateful that the government offered them the opportunity to own their own farms, but they point out that they built their own individual successes.

Farming under these conditions required know-how, courage, physical strength, and plenty of just plain hard work. The Tule Lake homesteaders had those qualities in abundance, plus a generous portion of the pioneering spirit which developed the west.

Star Dust
STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

EVEN after appearing in more than 25 pictures John Beal was still hoping for a big break, the one role that would take him straight to the top. It was given to him by Stanley Kramer, the star maker; Kramer called him, in New York, to ask if he'd like to play the prison psychologist in "My Six Convicts", at Columbia Beal says he reacted very calmly—except that he still has a lump on his head from hitting the ceiling of his hotel room Between films he has done radio, television, and appeared on the New York stage, two plays he starred in were bought for the movies, but someone else was given the roles he created.

Just how valuable are movie stars in radio? "Pulse of New York", a top research organization, has reported the result of its survey The week all those M-G-M programs featuring such stars as Bette Davis, Ann Sothern, Lionel Barrymore and

SHARE ALIKE

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

THE second week after they reached the cabin on Wolf Creek, Sid Condon, exploring a tributary alone, found gold. He spent half a day estimating the value of the find It was a pocket and would probably net a total take of between $40,000 and $50,000 Sid filled his pipe and sat down to meditate. The thing to do, of course, was to get Duke Brandon, his partner, clean out the placer, and hit for Big Rock settlement before the snow came.

3-Minute Fiction

Sid sucked on his pipe, and his eyes grew crafty. Into his mind there came a picture of thin-lipped Duke Brandon. Why should he share this find with Duke? A man with $40,000 could retire and live for the rest of his days in comfort. A man with only half that amount would have to scrimp Forty thousand dollars!

Duke Brandon was in a surly mood that night. He had had no luck. The food supply was getting low. Snow would come soon. Why not quit now while their chances of getting out were good?

"Wait a week," Sid urged. "Might as well make sure we ain't missin' anything."

So Duke was prevailed upon. The next morning they started out again in opposite directions. Sid went south, circled west and came to his claim. Working feverishly he panned a handful of gold and carried it up stream a half mile, cacheing it beneath a large moss-covered rock.

The next day and the next and the next it was the same. Duke became more disgruntled. He decided to remain only one more day.

With the speed of a snake his hand flashed to his hip where hung the revolver.

The next morning Duke headed north. Toward noon he swung west and south. At midafternoon he came to a moss-covered rock lying near the shore of what was to him an explored tributary He sat down to smoke and rest, and as he sat there the slanting rays of the sun fell upon a dull, yellow piece of metal. Duke blinked, then leaned forward. He picked up the piece of metal and saw beyond it a small opening beneath the rock.

He knelt and reached into the hole and took out a handful of gold.

Sid Condon had stood in the bed of the stream when cacheing his placer gold, so there were no footprints nor other signs to indicate his having been there.

There must be $30,000 worth of metal in the cache. Half of that was his, according to the unwritten law. The other half—but what could a man do with a mere $15,000?

DUKE took a small sack from his pocket and filled it full with the dull, yellow dust. His breathing was heavy as he knelt there. His eyes glowed feverishly. He knotted the sack together and rose from his knees—and stopped dead still.

Sid Condon was standing not 15 feet away. Sid's left hand contained a sack similar to the one in Duke's It was not full, but the bulge was evidence enough as to its contents.

For split seconds the two men stared at each other. Significance of the meaning of the situation dawned slowly in their sluggish brains.

Sid Condon's lips flattened against his teeth. His eyes narrowed to slits.

"So!" he cried hoarsely. "So! This is how it is! Partners, eh?"

"Partners," Duke Brandon echoed. "Partners!" he repeated in ugly scorn. "You louse!"

Sid Condon laughed harshly. He was bigger than the other man, and he felt confident.

With the speed of a snake his hand flashed to his hip where hung the revolver. His finger contracted on the trigger and flame belched from its muzzle.

Sid Condon saw his partner's body jerk convulsively, and he knew he had scored a hit; knew it only dimly though, for the sound of his own gun had come from a great distance, and there was a drumming and pounding in his ears. He sank to his knees, and through the haze of his vision he saw that Duke Brandon was also on his knees.

Then he knew that Duke had equalled him in speed at the draw

They lay, so close they could almost touch, each holding firmly to a sack of gold; lay and cursed and were eventually silent while the silvery stream rippled on, and night finally came.

Truman Will Be in Ring Fighting for Nomination

By Wright A. Patterson

AT A PRESIDENT'S PRESS conference in Washington, with the bright and shining lights of the nation's correspondents in attendance, Harry S. Truman stated he would not reveal his political plans until the last week in April. The Democratic primaries for United States senator from Missouri will be held the last week in April, and the always-awake newspaper boys immediately popped at the President the question: "Do you intend to enter the race for that senatorial post?" but he would not say.

They knew he could not seek both the presidential and the senatorial nominations. Those newspaper correspondents figured that as a democratic presidential candidate, he might be beaten. As a democratic senatorial candidate in Missouri he would have a far better chance of winning. They knew that as a Missouri senator he had been far happier than as president.

They jumped at conclusions and wired their papers that he would attempt to secure the Missouri senatorial nomination, but the President had not said he would make such an attempt.

The correspondents pointed to the fact that he could not have both nominations and that he was never happier than when serving as Missouri's United States senator about the close of World War I and as chairman of a committee to renegotiate army war contracts through which he saved the government large sums. There were no criminal charges involved then as there have been in the internal revenue scandals, which, as President, he has not cleaned up.

As a Missouri senator he cannot continue to be the big boss of the Democratic party. He would have to listen to others, and that would not be acceptable. The President likes the sound of coins jingling in his pockets. He has not turned his salary back to the treasury as did Hoover.

He has spent his $50,000 expense money, and he paid no tax on it, nor was the account audited He has enjoyed the privilege of using the President's yacht as a diversion; he has appreciated having his boon companion General Vaughn in the White House to distribute deep freezes. He likes to spend his winter holidays at the Key West naval base, which he could not do as a Missouri senator, but can continue to do as President. Such are some of the prerequisites he would have to surrender when he quits the job of President. And then, instead of living in the rent free White House, he would have to again pay rent.

Now what would he gain by a switch from the presidential to a senatorial job—if he could get that? It is only reasonably possible that he could. Instead of a $50,000 untaxable, unaudited, expense account, he would have only $12,500, quite some difference. Instead of some 1,200 White House employees to do his bidding, he would have one, probably Bess as his secretary. And her salary could be added to the family income. He would just have to get along without the solace of Harry Vaughn's presence, and without deep freezes. He could use taxis instead of private planes and trains, and collect five cents a mile travel fare. But he would not go so much and Bess would have to hold back a bit on her entertainment of distinguished guests. The bulk of the company would be Missouri farmers, and they would not command expensive rations.

Margaret can help with the apartment. That will mean a maid less to pay for. But what is the use, boys, in attempting to figure it out, Harry probably says. Whether I am to be beaten or not for the presidency, I have intimated I will make a fight for it, and the senatorial place must wait for another time. I can do without a job, or I can again turn to selling haberdashery until that time comes, but I cannot turn the boys down.

Those extra intelligent big city newspaper correspondents knew Harry S. Truman would not turn down the big chance until he had been counted out. He could be counted upon to be still in the center, battling so long as the show was on. But the next Missouri senatorial race will be a new story and a new answer.

President Truman has enjoyed doing things that astonish the American people. He has liked to establish exceptional precedents. It might be he would resign as president, and give the Veep a chance for a brief term.

Balance Sheet

Lesson for March 9, 1952

IT is not every man who at the close of his life can look back and say that life has brought him more than it took away. Death, or the approach of death, is a reminder it is time to balance our books There was a man named Paul sitting in a Roman prison. He was to be tried on a capital charge, and there was no certainty that he would be acquitted

Dr Foreman

Yet if the Romans had only known it, that solitary prisoner, whose very food was provided by the charity of friends, was the happiest man in Rome. He looked back over his eventual life and in a letter to his friends, while admitting that he had lost much, counted everything well lost in comparison to what he had gained. The balance sheet of Paul's life showed no deficit, but an enormous balance on the credit side.

* * *

Losses Written Off

PAUL gave several 'humbnail autobiographies, some of which are included in the Scripture readings for this week. So we know pretty well what he had to give up.

What would strike most of us today is his loss of comfort and security. Modern Americans want above all to be comfortable and secure.

Probably Paul missed comfort and security as much as any man, for he was born to both. But as an "ambassador of Christ" he had had to give all this up.

He had long since exhausted whatever money he may have had; he had to work at hard manual labor to support himself; he was a constant traveler, which in those days did not mean Cadillac cars, Pullmans or even foam-rubber bus seats; it meant dirt and fleas and bad food and seasickness and wrecks (we know of four he had); it meant sometimes being half-starved, sometimes robbed and always in danger of armed robbery

His Worst Losses?

BUT there was worse A wise man does not count hardships his heaviest losses. To lose freedom is more serious. And Paul (when he wrote to the Philippians) had been under arrest for more than four years. He had been jailed at Jerusalem first, then for two years in Caesarea, then a journey in chains to Rome, and then in Rome for we don't know just how long.

Paul was just the temperament that feels imprisonment most keenly. Active, vigorous, always on the go, the four walls of a cell or even the four walls of a house must have galled him terribly. But perhaps worst of all was loss of standing in his home community.

He was born both a Jew and a Roman (as a Jew today may be a good American or a good Frenchman too); but the Jews looked on him as a traitor to his race, a man not fit to live; while the Romans regarded him as a crack-pot at best, a subversive agitator at worst.

Whatever advantages Paul had had at birth or by education, he had definitely lost long before the end.

Credit Balance

YET Paul, in writing up the balance sheet of his life, calls everything he had lost so much trash, in comparison with what he had gained. To his mind it was like losing a truck-load of ashes and finding one diamond.

We ourselves, not being, alas! saints, if we had fixed up his balance sheet, would have put some items on the credit side that he does not mention. After all, he was then and still is Christendom's first citizen.

For many of us, and all of us call him Saint, which means he belongs to God's aristocracy. You can afford to lose a good deal for that; He was also, and still is, close to the top, if not at the top, of the list of the most influential men in the world's history, aside from Christ himself. He is this, because almost half the books in the New Testament were written by him. Yet he does not say, speaking of his life's hardships, "I count these things as nothing in comparison with my position as leader . . . the fact of my sainthood . . . my contribution to the Bible."

We know what his life-ambitions were: "to testify the good news of the grace of God"; "to gain Christ—to know him—to share the power of his resurrection, the fellowship of his sufferings"; and "by all means to win some." These things he did; these things no hardships and no enemies could keep him from doing. With these things on life's credit side, the debits were trifling.

Irish Sprinter is Worth Watching

By GRANTLAND RICE

All-Over Champion

A baseball world series is in reality the championship of the United States. Few other nations play baseball, Japan being an exception.

Football, soccer and rugby are entirely different games, with the United States pointing largely at American football

Grantland Rice

Golf and tennis are international, with Uncle Sam dominating golf and Australia ruling the tennis empire

Boxing is another international sport. Champions in each class should be listed or ranked on performance, regardless of nationality.

What about thoroughbred racing? Is there any international standout? There may be before this next spring is over. That standout might be Windy City II. He is a three-year-old He can run fast. He can also run far.

Windy City II is not a Kentucky, Midwest, Eastern, Southern or California horse. He is a fine-looking Irish horse.

A horseman known as Rex Bell picked him up for $2,000 in Ireland. Then as a two-year-old, Windy City II proceeded to break loose with a rush over European tracks. He won his crown as the best two-year-old in Ireland, England and France. He was the champion over there while Tom Fool, pressed by Oh Leo, Primate, Hill Gail and one or two more took the lead over here.

But Windy City II had the jump on Tom Fool. He cleaned up more nations. Bell then proceeded to sell his $2,000 horse to Mrs. Petite Luellwitz, for $150,000.

The horse that had run badly in its first American start two weeks ago was another horse in the San Gabriel Stakes.

About Windy City II

A few minutes before the Irish runner's wild gallop I had asked Ben Jones about Hill Gail.

"In fine shape," Ben and Jimmy said . . . "He is a different horse now."

But Windy City II, with Arcaro up, came on a wild march down the stretch to beat A Gleam by three lengths and Hill Gail by six lengths in terrific time over a track none too fast. He ran the seven furlongs in a shade over 1.22.

It was the way Windy City II turned the trick that counted. He was running away from the field when he passed the wire.

This will make the Irish horse a healthy favorite for the Santa Anita Derby to be run shortly. It will also make him something to handle in the $100,000 Handicap later on where he'll meet Counterpoint, Hill Prince, Bed o' Roses and Next Move at extremely light weights.

Fourteen years ago, Stagehand won both the Santa Anita Derby and the Handicap This Irish sprinter is first to challenge that record.

Counterpoint and Hill Prince carry two heavy packages—around 130 pounds. This may be too much weight to spot Vandebilt's two mares and Windy City II.

Windy City II was badly confused in his first race at Santa Anita.

"No wonder," some horseman said. "Here's an Irish horse discovered by an American Scot, sold to a Dutch-bred family, trained by W F. Alvarado, ridden by an Italian, groomed by a negro."

Anyway, there was no Russian around.

So there is now a very good chance that this Irish flyer will repeat in Kentucky before Uncle Bill Corum's astonished eyes. It could happen. Don't forget the name.

All-Around Athletes

Mr. Don Iddon of the London Daily Mail insists that American athletes are single-track specialists. They don't even play out one game, he insists. It must be admitted our platoon system in football isn't much for stamina and fibre. It is merely better for the coach and the less ambitious player. But on the all-around stuff Mr Iddon is largely listening to funny noises in his dome. The United States is packed with athletes who have starred in more than one sport.

For example, what about Mickey Cochrane, all-time catcher for the Athletics? Cochrane at Boston U. was a great football player. He was a fine passer, runner, kicker

He was undoubtedly All-America as far as playing worth goes. He was a fine ballplayer He was an excellent boxer. He was a first-class golfer. That's four sports. How many sports does one have to star in? How many combined golfers and tennis players, who could star at both games,' has England? None, that anyone ever heard of. How about Ellsworth Vines, better than the best of the English at either sport? What about a kid known as Mathias of Stanford who won the Olympic all-around championship and then a fullback star.

What about Al Dark of the Giants, Merriman of the Reds, Sternweiss of the Yankees and Browns, Jackie Robinson of the Dodgers, Kluszewski of the Reds, Chapman of the Indians and many others?

ROAD NOTES

By C. F. Merten, County Eng.

The following is a summary of the report filed each year with the County Auditor and the State Highway Commission by the County Engineer. The complete report may be inspected by anyone wishing more details.

The year of 1951 was a bad year for highway construction and only about ½ of the proposed grading and graveling was completed. Nine miles of roads which were under contract for grading and graveling are being carried over for 1952 construction.

In 1951 we graded and graveled 9 miles of roads at a cost of $61,583.00 or $6842.50 per mile The cost included grading, graveling, clearing, purchase of right of way, driveway culverts and tiling The old concrete arch ½ mile southeast of Klemme was so low and narrow that it had become dangerous to traffic was replaced with a 10x10 concrete box, costing $4735.00.

Seven wooden bridges and extensions were built at a total cost of $17,618.00. The 40 foot bridge southwest of Kanawha and the 86 foot bridge between sections 19 and 30, Liberty Twp. were built with creosoted materials with exception of the hand rails, which were plain lumber as creosoted material will not hold paint. The other bridges were constructed of both creosoted and plain lumber Ten pipe culverts were constructed across various roads in the county at the cost of $7,387.00. These culverts varied in size from 18 to 72 inches. Many additional small culverts were placed by maintenance crews which are not listed in the report.

In addition to the above which was paid for from the County Road Construction fund, 5 miles of roads southwest of Hutchins were graded and graveled from the Farm to Market road fund at a cost of approximately $26,000.00. The Farm to Market fund consists of money collected by the State and Federal Governments.

The cost of maintaining the roads and bridges of Hancock County has been increasing, and each the year the expense is higher than it was in the preceeding years. In 1951 the total maintenance cost was $343,983. Some of the larger items of expense are the following:

Contract Graveling	$79,400.00
New Equipment	89,361.56
Labor	75,689.49
Equipment repairs	34,010.82
Motor Fuel	17,360.21
Drainage	8,106.60
Oil and Grease	4,136.38
Supplies and tools	13,433.22
Culverts	2,888.77

The total cost of operating the County Engineer's office for the year of 1951 was $15,699.00 or 4.36% of the amount spent on road work including Farm to Market construction under the supervision of the County Engineer.

EDITORIAL OF THE DAY YOUR DUTY AS A CITIZEN

LAKE MILLS GRAPHIC: Those who vote in general elections merely are choosing between candidates already selected for them. Such voters are fulfilling only half of their responsibility as citizens.

The other half of the citizen's responsibility—your responsibility—is in choosing the party nominees. This, in many respects is the more important half of the elective system.

Often people say they do not wish to soil their hands in "the dirty game of politics" by taking part in party activities. They prefer to leave the nominating to the straight party-liners and the professional politicans. Such people are failing to take action, where it is needed most, within the parties. The game of politics can be cleaned up if the general public, yourself included, takes an active part in it.

Precinct caucuses and local conventions are set for the next few weeks. Here each of you can help select delegates who will boost your choice for the presidency at state and national conventions.

Primary elections in June, give you the opportunity to cast a direct ballot for your preferences in either party. The general elections in November will determine the men who will shape your destiny during the coming years.

CANCER SOCIETY TO CHECK SMOKING HABITS

"How Old Were You When You First Started to Smoke?"

This question will provoke some head-scratching and memory prodding among 700 Hancock County male residents this week when volunteers of the local chapter of the Iowa division of the American Cancer Society began a unique health survey.

Mrs Arthur Ross said researchers hoped to reach half of the men between the ages of 50 and 69 in this county, one of 35 Iowa counties participating. Nationally over 200,000 men will be interviewed. Iowa, one of the nine states conducting the survey, has set its goal at 35,000.

The survey, the first health study of such magnitude to be conducted by volunteers, is aimed at finding whether smoking is a contributing factor in the development of lung cancer, which has increased six-fold since 1933. In 1950, 327 Iowans (237 men and 90 women) died of lung cancer, which is the only type of the disease that has shown such a rapid and unexplained increase.

Both smokers and non-smokers will be interviewed. All will be asked to fill out a four-page questionnaire concerning cigarette, pipe and cigar smoking habits. Women are not included because lung cancer is far less common in women than in men.

At the end of a one year period the interviewers will report whether or not the men are alive A medical committee will check all deaths and send the causes to ACS statisticians in New Yark City. When accurate data is available on at least 100,000 cases, the statisticians will analyze the lung cancer deaths among smokers and non-smokers. In this manner they will be able to assess the relationship, if any, of smoking to lung cancer.

An estimated 20,000 new cases of lung cancer are being diagnosed each year. Due to late diagnosis, only about 4% are being cured. Surgery is the only way lung cancer can be cured, but it must be in the early stage. Be on the lookout for the following signals: a hacking cough (persisting longer than the usual "cold") whether it is dry or produces mucous—and all the more so is the cough produces blood; hoarseness and a transient wheeze obscure pains or discomfort in the chest; and night sweats, accompanied by an unexplained fever.

Rep. James Dolliver Gives Views On U. M. Training

JAMES I. DOLLIVER REMARKS ON UNIVERSAL MILITARY TRAINING

Mr. Chairman:

The very difficult subject of universal military training is one of wide difference of opinion and a great deal of controversy. This is reflected not only in the divergence of views expressed here in this debate but also in the great volume of printed material and heavy mail. I think probably most Members will testify as I can, that the issue of UMT has called forth a greater and perhaps a more vigorous public response than any other legislative subject in recent years.

I have deliberatly waited until the closing hours of the debate to express myself. I have earnestly sought to consider all sides of the question and I have deliberately refrained from expressing or even adhering to a firm opinion. I believe such an attitude is the essence of representative government—to withhold judgement until the evidence and arguments have been heard. I have sought to follow this procedure.

Now, finally I have come to the conclusion that I must and will vote against the universal military training bill, H. R. 5904, now pending. My reasons are as follows:

In the first place, I dislike exceedingly the way this matter has been handled. Last year, despite the protest of a very substantial minority, the provisions for universal military training and the extension of the Selective Service were brought to the floor in one package. It seemed to a great many Members that this was an attempt to bludgeon the House into accepting the universal military training plan by connecting it with the necessity of extending the Selective Service. The reason for the extension of Selective Service was obvious, since otherwise we would afford no relief for the men fighting in Korea. But to attach the UMT principle to that extension was an unfair use of the legislative process, in the opinion of many Members. It was deeply and sincerely resented.

This year, in following the report of the commission set up by the last legislation, the committee held extensive hearings. As has already been pointed out in debate, it has been difficult if not impossible to follow the various bills which have been approved and then dumped into the discard by the majority of the Armed Services Committee. It was not until this legislation actually was reported, that a Member of the House could know what was to be presented. Even yet, with the rumors flying around that severe and drastic amendments are to be offered and adopted, it is not at all sure what kind of legislation will finally eventuate from the Committee of the Whole. My complaint is, therefore, that I am highly critical of the manner in which this legislation has been handled, both this year and last.

My second reason for opposing this bill is that in my honest opinion it wil destroy the reserves and the National Guard. A fundamental concept in our law is that every able bodied man is a member of the militia. It is embodied in the Constitution of the United States and also in the Constitution of every state. However, the militia, until it is called into federal service, is an arm of state government. That is the idea that is the background of the National Guard and in my opinion should continue to be.

UMT as shown by the testimony of the Commanding Officer of the National Guard, General Walsh, would destroy that organization. Certainly it changes the fundamental and Constitutional concept of the militia. It turns the National Guard into an arm of the federal, rather than the state governments. It is claimed by the proponents of this legislation, that its enactment will strengthen the National Guard. I respectfully differ with that opinion, since it is clear to me that under this UMT bill, the National Guard will become an adjunct of the federal military machine and will thus have its autonomy and state relationship completely destroyed.

It cannot be denied by any impartial observer that the National Guard has been one of the bulwarks of national defense in time of emergency. That has happened time and time again. We in the State of Iowa are extremely proud of that organization in our state. I doubt that any thinking Iowan interested in national defense would wish the enactment of legislation which would destroy that powerful state institution.

Much the same observation can be applied to the organized and unorganized Reserves. This bill would channel every bit of Amrican manpower into UMT. The Reserve organization, despite recent legislation to strengthen it, would die. Like the National Guard, the Reserves have served capably, courageously and honorably in wars that the U. S. has engaged in. Certainly, it should not be destroyed.

I had hoped when this legislation came before the committee that consideration would be given to coordinate the program of UMT with the Reserve Officers Training Corps and the National Guard. I introduced a bill to that end in the Congress. The Defense Department rendered an adverse report on it and so far as I know, the matter was not given serious consideration by the Committee on Armed Services.

In my judgement it would be a grave mistake to destroy the Reserves and National Guard, which I am sure this will be.

My third question about his legislation is the basic concept of UMT. Frankly, I believe that some discipline and training in the art of defense will do no harm to any boy. In fact, in the proper environment it could result in great benefit to many. This legislation, however, goes far beyond such a concept and shows a definite trend toward militarism in the United States of America. It does not end with training a young man to defend himself in a miltary organization, but goes far beyond that and would militarie our entire social order. It becomes the permanent policy of our country, for this bill has no termination date. With a war raging in Korea and with Selective Service already providing all the manpower the armed forces can efficently use, how can it be wise to superimpose UMT training at this time?

Having been active in the American Legion for many years I have been extremely interested in its policy with respect to this bill. I am sceptial of the notion that this bill represents the true wish of the rank and file of the American Legion of any other service organization. This is not universal service. This is a compulsory militarization of the youth of America. There is a vast distinction between universal service and compulsory service.

Finally, my last reason for objecting to this legislation at this time is that I have no confidence in the effective administration of such law. Revelations of corruption and waste are rampart which extend through the civil and military organiztions of the present executive department. The passage of this legislation would but open up new and more abundant opportunities for the continuation of such irregularities.

Without authority of Congress, the Executive has scattered the American troops all over the world, Korea, Europe, Africa and many other places of which we have no information. This apparently is a desperate final effort to shore up a bungling and incompetent and contradictory foreign policy. To now make possible such new and colossal power over the youth of America would be folly in the extreme. I shall vote against this legislation.

You know the telephone number of the police? The number of the fire department? Your doctor's number?

Yes, but how well would you know those numbers with a prowler at the window, a fire in the basement, an injured child in the house in need of quick treatment.

The swiftness of danger, fire, and accident can drive commonly remembered things out of mind.

Know your important telephone numbers. Write them out and keep them near the phone where they can be read at a glance.

Rev. Jabergs's Brother Sees British Royalty "In Action"

GENE JABERG STIRRED BY PROCLAMATION OF QUEEN

Gene Jaberg, brother of Rev. Vernon Jaberg, described his impressions of the ceremonies attending the proclamation of Queen Elizabeth II to the throne of England in the following letter, written from Cambridge to the Sheboygan Wisc) Press:

"I heard Elizabeth II proclaimed queen of England and the paradoxical 'the king is dead; long live the queen, found meaning.

"The shock of the king's death was still fresh sorrow when the proclamation was made a personal sorrow even for the common British subject, for his king was also a friend. But now that the crown was "solely and rightfully come to the high and mighty Princess Elizabeth Alexandra Mary," her accession was greated with cheers. Strange mixture of emotions!

"Public proclamation was made simultaneously throughout England at 11:00 o'clock. Here in Cambridge official announcements were read at the Guild Hall, the Shire (county) Hall and at the University Senate House.

"The announcement was made inside the Senate House first, then on the steps, so I had time to run the two blocks from the market to hear the proclamation a second time. Thousands of university undergraduates had jammed the Senate House court, some perched on the walls, a few dangled from the fountian in the center of the enclosure. When the vice-chancellor had read the notice, the famous King's College Boys' Choir sang "God Save the Queen" and the courtyard rang with student cheers for the new queen. "Hip, hip, hurrah!" From nearby Great St. Mary's church the bells pealed forth jubilantly.

"It was profoundly moving—even to one born into the tradition of representative democracy, to whom monarchy has always seemed archaic and-in the British government system—somewhat rebundant. An American can't really understand why the British people feel as they do toward the Crown, but how they feel is obvious.

"The monarch is the head of the church and the government, therefore both spiritual and temporal leader of the people. True, in practice the power of the throne is negligable. But it stands as a symbol of goodness and might, a symbol of the glory of Britian, past and present. As such it envokes mingled religious and patriotic feelings in the loyal British heart.

"Britian mourns her king; but the new queen is equally loved and respected. Monarchial government is long dead, but in Elizabeth II the tradition lives on."

FARMERS SHOULD SIGN UP NOW,

A. E. Rasmussen, chairman of the Hancock county PMA committee, announces that in order to participate in the 1952 Agricultural Conservation Program farmers must sign a 1952 Farm Worksheet before April 1, 1952. The only exception to this requirement is for those landlords or tentants acquiring an interest in a farm after March 1. 1952. Mr. Rasmussen points out that in this case a farmer may sign up later, provided he does so within 30 days after acquiring his interest in the farm.

Anyone who intends to participate in the 1952 Agricultural Conservation Program and who has not signed a worksheet indicating his intention to participate should, without delay, contact one of his community committeemen, or the county PMA office at Garner.

Ell Township Caucus Got Down To "Grass Roots"

BY RAY EASTMAN

The romantic urges of a man we'll call Blake provide us this week with a happier story than we usually have to tell.

Blake was new in the town when this happened. He was living a rather lonely life in the local hotel while he looked for bachelor quarters and waited for his new job to start.

One afternoon he was driving slowly along a street that bordered the town, idly looking at "Room for Rent" signs, when a car passed him from behind.

Blake's casual eye caught the image of a pretty girl behind the wheel. Had she smiled? Blake had to find out. He immediately passed the car and this time took a deliberate look.

Yes, a beautiful girl. And yes, she did smile. Blake went on and slowed down to a creep. Again the girl passed and again she smiled. Ah, very pleasant, thought Blake. Promising!

For the lenght of the street, the two cars maneuvered slowly around one another while the occupants exchanged broadening smiles. Then the girl made a left turn. Blake was unable to follow.

A few minutes later, a highway patrolman coming into town found Blake standing in the street looking at the smashed grill of his car The patrolman stopped, and asked Blake what had happened.

Blake told the story of the girl. "But how did you manage to run into the back of her car," the patrolman asked.

"She put her hand out for a left turn," Blake said, "and, to tell you the truth, I was looking to see if she had a ring on her finger. I forgot to put on the brake."

There is no late report on the progress of the romance.

GOVERNMENT MUST START AT HOME TO BE SUCCESSFUL

Fairly Large Crowd Attended First Township Caucus In Fifty Years

"If we are going to have a say in the way that our government is run, then we must start right on our own farm and home, in our township and in our own county" is about the way that Committeeman Clark Lackore opened the Ell Township Republican Caucus at the Grade school Friday evening. It was perhaps the first time in fifty years or more that township caucuses have been held but this year the Republican party urged that every precinct hold a caucus, write up their own idea of a workable farm program and what they want in the way of government. It is getting right down to "grass roots" policy. . start from the bottom and go up, instead of starting at the top and dictating the policies of government. .

Despite that here were many other activities scheduled for the evening, some 30 people turned out for the Ell township caucus, with the majority being farmers, and young farmers were especially well represented and presented many interesting views which were written into the Farm Program to be presented at the County Convention on March 14th at the Court House in Garner at 8.00 o'clock.

It was pointed out that anyone interested is cordially invited to attend the county convention. Ten delegates were named to attend the county convention as follows:

Clark Lackore, Mrs. Mitchell, Bock, Harold Quintus, Ed. Thieman, Mrs Alvin Goll, Chet Renner, Asa Arnold, V. A. Cook, R. A. Jorgenson and Mrs. R. A Jorgenson.

Ernest Gerardi, County Commiteeman for the Hancock Co. Young Republicans, was present and gave an interesting talk on politics in general and the aims of the young Republicans and urged that all young folks take more interest in the organization and come to the meetings which will be scheduled.

CAREER DAY TO BE HELD

The Hancock County Schoolmaster's are sponsoring a Career Day for the first time in Hancock County. This event will be held in the Britt High School on April 7th with students from every school in the county participating.

The Senior and Sophomore classes will go from the local school. The purpose of this event is to get the students interested in a particular field and to furnish them information about that field. It is hoped that by this method we can get students interested in a chosen career and that they will follow it through in later life.

This year approximately 30 fields have been seleoted including such fields as Agriculture, Aviation, Television, Radio, Engineering, Business, Teaching, Medicine, Nursing and others. The student selects three fields which they are most interested and they are scheduled to attend those meetings. The organization has attempted to get authorities for each of the respective fields who can give students first hand information on a chosen field. These authorities will be from Iowa State College, Iowa State Teachers, Nursing and Business Schools,, and professional and semi-professional men and women who are actually working in that particular field. If this event proves successful it undoubtedly be an annual affair.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Needless Whine

NOTHING MAKES a woman look as old as worry. Worry simply destroys youth and beauty.

Nothing hampers a man's career as does a worrying wife. Often when she is worrying because Jim doesn't advance faster and make more money, her worry is the thing that is stopping him.

Worrying mothers have nervous babies. They know that everything is all wrong, and they can't do anything about it.

So they become tearful, go back to wetting the bed, lose appetite and get attacks of asthma, colds, nausea. A bracing, confident home atmosphere would do for them what no doctor can do.

One mother I knew used to take three small children to the circus every year. She worried so much about them that nobody got much fun out of the circus.

"It's a curious thing," she said to me, "that my children are always sick on the way home from the circus and all that night."

It wasn't curious at all to me. Children reflect grown-up moods as sensitive sea plants shrink from hot winds. Mother's worrying dries up their small spirits before they have time to flower.

When older children don't eat, do poor school work, imagine grievances and slights, look for the worrying mother. She is there.

Form of Fear

Worry is merely a form of fear. Any average woman in a normal American home can find fifty reasons for fear in the course of one day, and some of them do. They worry about things they could change with half the energy they waste on worry. They worry about things that don't concern them, and they worry about situations of which they are completely ignorant.

". . . worry about situations . . ."

A woman can start her day worrying because that clock is slow, because she thinks it is going to rain, because George's suit should have been pressed, because she may be going to have a headache, because Kent was so rude to Lily last night, because Di's invitation to that party hasn't come, because she forgot to tell Louella about the extra milk, because Grandma's birthday is tomorrow, and so on and on until she has covered with a thick coating of worry. every possible duty or situation that the day is likely to develop.

Naturally, after 15 minutes of this, she gets up tired, and her voice is a whine. Millions of American women must be habitual whiners, because I notice that in many of the "soap serials" the heroines almost incessantly whine; Sunday, Big Sister, Helen Trent, Stella rarely raise their voices above a pained note of complaint and fear, and listeners seem to like it that way.

If the worrying woman could get it through her head that worry is weakness, and that she chooses it, and that circumstances have little to do with it, she might perhaps learn what a neighbor of mine learned painfully some years ago.

Chronic Anxiety

She was in such a state of chronic anxiety that one day her long-suffering husband said mildly.

"Helena, will you use your handkerchief, dear?"

"What!" said Helena, aghast as we all are when so humiliating a reminder is made.

"Oh, no, no," he said laughing. "Your nose is all right, but when I say that to you in future it will mean you are making yourself sick over something that doesn't in the least concern you or at least that you cannot change. Or else something that may never happen. Do you mind?"

Of course, she minded terribly, and she looked at her children for support against this preposterous idea. But the 12-year-old boy laughed and said, "It'll keep you busy, Dad," and the little girl added innocently, "Who'll do it all the times Dad isn't here?"

A Chinese woman told me that when, as a 16-year-old bride, she expressed anxiety and fear, every other person in the house turned to her with the simple command that she spit.

Spitting in a fine Chinese family is almost as forbidden as in a fine American one. The bride protested. Her mother-in-law directed her to obey, even when one of the youngest servants reminded her with, "Will the lady please to spit?" It seems it is an ancient cure. It certainly is a drastic and effective one.

A better one is to lift one's heart to the source of infinite help and light, and confide all the worries petty and great, to inexhaustible wisdom. This cannot fail. The worries are brushed away like the gnats they are.

Prize winner prefers Active Dry Yeast

Wins Her First Cooking Award at Iowa State Fair

Mrs. Roscoe Hall of Perry, Iowa, became a prize-winning cook last year in her very first competition, when one of her special dishes won a blue ribbon at the Iowa State Fair. And this first-try success has encouraged her so that she plans to exhibit her favorite dishes from now on! Here she looks over some photographs and clippings from the fair.

Even though she is a first-time prize winner, Mrs. Hall knows a secret of many experienced champions . . . she depends on Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast for good results always. "It's so fast rising," she says. "And so easy to use."

All during Lent serve plenty of yeast-raised goodies—such a delicious way to brighten your Lenten meals! They're wholesome and nourishing, too. When you bake at home, use yeast. Use the best—Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast. It's always dependable . . . guaranteed fresher and faster rising or double your money back! Try Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast.

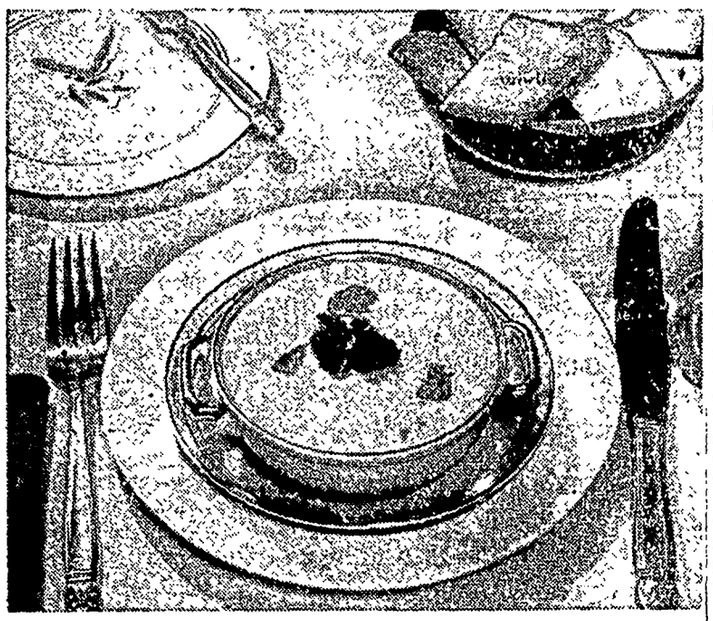
HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers



Try Bowls of Creamy Soup for a Hearty Meal
(See Recipes Below)

Let the Soup Simmer

COME, LET'S PUT on the soup kettle, and let it simmer merrily while other household duties are put on their way to completion. By the time these are finished, the soup will be ready for supper!

Soup is a tasty introduction to a meal, but it can also be made rich and hearty enough to be the meal itself, with only a little help from a light salad or dessert.

Bowls of steaming soup add food value to a meal, and can well be used to good effect when your meal is made of leftovers. If the family is having its seasonal colds or other ills, they may not want to eat heavily: serve them soup. It supplies easily assimilated foods and provides essential fluids to those who are sick or convalescent.

Vegetables and meat make this soup rich, colorful and delicious:

Tomato-Vegetable Soup
(Serves 6)

- 1 small shank bone
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ⅛ cup potatoes, cubed
- ¼ cup carrots, chopped fine
- ⅓ cup green beans, sliced
- 2 tablespoons bean sprouts
- 1 cup tomato juice
- ½ teaspoon sugar
- Chopped parsley
- ¼ cup celery, cut fine

Soak bone in cold water. Simmer for about 1½ hours, until broth is made. Strain and season. Add vegetables and cook for 15 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Add bean sprouts, sugar and tomato juice. Heat. Garnish with chopped parsley. Serve with toast triangles.

• • •

A rich soup which might well serve as a meal is this one with lobster, very simply prepared:

Rock Lobster Bisque
(Serves 6)

- 2 flat cans of lobster
- 2 cans mushroom soup
- 1 can water
- ¼ teaspoon paprika
- ⅛ teaspoon curry powder
- 6 tablespoons real mayonnaise

Cut lobster chunks. Combine with all remaining ingredients except mayonnaise. Heat thoroughly. Stir a small amount of soup into the mayonnaise, then blend with remaining soup. Heat 5 minutes without boiling. Serve hot garnished with parsley.

Red Bean Soup
(Serves 6)

- 2 slices lemon
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon black pepper
- 1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce
- 2 slices stale bread, diced and fried
- 3 slices bacon, diced
- 1 onion, sliced.
- 1 stalk celery, diced
- 2 bay leaves
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- 2 cups hot water
- 1 No. 2 can red kidney beans

Golden, tasty corn chowder is a filling soup which pleases on a cold night when appetites are sharpened:

Corn Chowder
(Serves 6)

- 2 strips bacon, diced
- ½ cup diced onions
- 1 cup diced celery
- 1 cup finely diced potatoes
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 1 quart milk, scalded
- 1 No. 2 can cream style corn
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- 1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce
- Dash of tabasco sauce
- 2 tablespoons minced parsley

Cook bacon until crisp, then add onion, celery and potato with a very small amount of water, about ½ cup. Cover and cook until tender. Add butter, milk, corn and seasonings. Serve with chopped parsley.

Oxtail Soup
(Serves 6)

- 1½ pounds oxtail, cut in 2" pieces
- 1½ quarts water
- 1 tablespoon salt
- ½ cup diced onion
- ¾ cup diced raw carrot
- ½ cup diced celery
- 2 tablespoons white rice
- 1 cup cooked or canned tomatoes

Brown oxtail pieces with a small amount of fat in a deep kettle. Add water and salt and simmer covered about 3¼ hours. Remove meat from bones and return to kettle with broth. Add all vegetables, except tomatoes, along with rice and cover; simmer for 30 minutes. Add tomatoes, heat thoroughly and serve.

Clam Bisque
(Serves 8)

- 1 7½-ounce can minced clams
- 1 cup water
- 1 to 2 teaspoons salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- ⅛ teaspoon celery salt
- 1 teaspoon grated onion
- 2 teaspoons minced parsley
- 3 cups milk
- 2 tablespoons butter, melted
- 1 tablespoon flour

Mix together the liquor drained from the clams with salt, pepper, celery salt, onion and parsley; simmer for 3 minutes. Add milk. Gently stir into milk mixture a paste made of the butter and flour. Boil one minute stirring constantly, then place over boiling water until ready to serve. Stir in the minced clams just long enough to heat through. Serve, garnished with minced parsley.

LYNN SAYS:
Let Variety Highlight Serving of Soups

Certain garnishes can be used for all kinds of soups. These include minced chives, minced parsley or popcorn.

Garnishes for soups are planned to point up flavor as well as appearance. Chopped bacon bits or thinly sliced frankfurters go well, for example with split pea and bean soups. You might try chopped mint with chicken soups or cream of green pea soup.

Thinly sliced lemon does wonders for chicken-rice soup, chicken-noodle soup, clam chowder or consomme.

Vary the serving of cream soup by adding some croutons at one time, and then at another time some slivered almonds.

Are you having some extra guests for luncheon or dinner, and no two cans of soup alike? This can prove interesting because tomato soup, for instance, can be combined with the following: bean soup, clam chowder, chicken and rice, chicken noodle, or green pea.

Youth Today

Lesson for March 16, 1952

YOUTH today has a hard time of it. With bad examples in high places, prevalence of gambling, liquor ads on every billboard and liquor on too many "smart" tables; with divorce almost as easy as marriage and both as easy as whims; educated in elementary schools where it is considered wrong for the teacher to "fail" or punish any one, in high schools that emphasize the body more than the mind, and in colleges where coaches make more than professors and where (as two leading universities recently learned) almost half the student body, it seems, admits to cheating; living in a country where success is measured in dollars and where the Christian church is still in a minority: what chance has a boy or girl to grow up straight and strong instead of weak and crooked?

Dr. Foremon

It Has Been Worse

THE best answer to this question is that youth has always had a hard time of it, yet always there have been some who have grown straight and strong.

If this 20th century is a bad one, what about the first? At that time there was certainly bad example in high places, considering that Nero was the emperor and that many persons actually worshipped that cruel scoundrel as a god.

Gambling was done by the "best" people all over the Empire; liquor was even more a part of "high" society than it is today; as for divorce and marriage, the Roman record was worse than ours; as for education, most young people didn't get it, and most of those that did found themselves fitted for only one occupation: politics. The Christian Church was in a far smaller minority than today.

The Right Friends

YET it was in that bad century that some of the most famous Christian saints and heroes lived. Timothy, Paul's young understudy, was such a man. He had everything against him, but Paul thought well of him, and Paul's standards were extraordinarily high. His life (or what we know of it from the Scripture references to him) had many qualities worth studying.

Let us look at two of the causes for this young man's high character. One was the quality of his friends. He seems to have been the sort of boy who might have gone down fast if he had taken up with the wrong crowd; but a list of his friends as we know them is a list of strong, original, true-blue Christians. He literally knew the best people, not "best" by standards of Roman society but best in the scale of true manhood.

We have a hint, too, that his mother had something to do with this. She "steered" the boy to the right crowd, one suspects —and that was enough.

One of the best things parents can do for their children is to see to it that they run into the right kind of people. This does not necessarily mean the richest or the best educated, but the people with the best kind of character. Youth will grow to be like the older people it most admires; and admiration grows with acquaintance. Tell me who a boy's friends are and I can forecast his future.

Self Control

THE other reason for Timothy's character came from inside: self-discipline, self-control.

Followers of these lessons may wonder why "temperance" has to be dragged in every once in so often. It's not dragged in; we just dare not dodge it. Temperance just means self-control, in general. In particular, one of the drugs—by all odds the most popular drug—that tends to make the users lose self-control, is alcohol. As the proverb has it: First the man takes a drink, then the drink takes a drink, and then the drink takes the man.

Young people get more than enough urging to become alcoholics. One of the best things one can do for younger friends is to awaken them to the real facts and dangers of all alcoholic beverages.

There is a book, "Fruit of the Vine," by Grace H. Turnbull, (printed by the Lord Baltimore Press and published in 1950 at 223 Chancery Road, Baltimore 18, Md.) which is a mine of facts about liquor—the kind of information you will not get in the advertisements. Young people who learn these things the easy way (by reading such a book, for instance) may be saved the heartbreak of learning them the hard way.

BEST IN SHOW . . . Doberman Pinscher Ch. Rancho Dobe Storm was chosen as 'best in show' at final session of the 76th annual dog show of the Westminister Kennel Club at Madison Square Garden. Showing the champion is A. Peter, Knoop. Judging are Joseph Sims and John W. Cross.

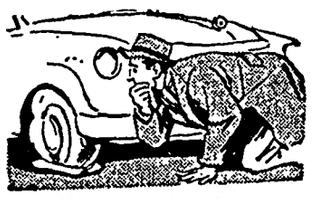
MIRROR Of Your MIND

Some Minds Act In Vicious Circle

By Lawrence Gould

May your mind work in a "vicious circle"?

Answer: Yes. The phrase describes most neurotic patterns of behavior. A "vicious circle" is a situation in which what you do in the attempt to improve something actually makes it worse, so that you "go round and round" instead of getting anywhere. One of the most frequent cases is that of the mother who gets angry at a child for being naughty and by punishing him harshly makes him still more frightened and rebellious. You may get out of a vicious circle by learning to act on the basis of what you know will be the consequences of your actions, and not merely to "relieve your feelings."



May misfortune be a "challenge"?

Answer: Yes, says Dr. Sandor Rado, Professor of Psychiatry at Columbia University. "To a healthy person a serious loss is a challenge. He meets the emergency by calming his emotions, marshaling his remaining resources and increasing his adaptive efficiency." But a "depressed" and neurotic person does the exact opposite. He tries to repair the damage by reverting to the techniques of his childhood and depending on someone else to console him for his loss, as his mother once did. Unhappily, his attempts to gain strength from another person rather than from within himself leave him more helpless than ever.

Should we stop using the word "insane"?

Answer: I wish very much that we—and I, especially—could do so. For "insane" is neither accurate nor scientific; it is a legal term denoting someone who has been judged (frequently by people who know almost nothing of psychology) to be incapable of "knowing right from wrong" or of managing his affairs. But it is possible for a person with no moral sense whatever to pass all the legal tests for sanity, and conversely, someone may be driven by irresistible "neurotic compulsions" to do what he knows to be morally wrong. In everyday speech and writing we are forced to go on using the word "insance" simply because the correct, scientific term, "psychotic" still means nothing to most people.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Dental Suggestions and Safety Hints

By Dr. James W. Barton

"CHILDREN sitting or standing on the front seat of automobiles are in the most dangerous position in the car and frequently their teeth are fractured by hitting the dashboard at sudden stops."

I am quoting Dr Henry Marsh Wilbur, professor of children's dentistry, University of Louisville School of Dentistry, in The Journal of the American Dental Association. It is also stated that front-seat passengers in autos suffer injuries, especially to the mouth and teeth, three times as often as drivers.

Dr. Wilbur cited recommendations of experts that crash pads be installed on dashboards to protect children and other front-seat passengers from violent impacts with knobs and instruments that jut out from the dashboard. Also, it is important that parents be informed of the necessity for professional attention as soon as an accident involving the teeth occurs. "Splints may be applied to a block of teeth which have been fractured or a single tooth which has been loosened, and other treatment as the case demands."

It is surprising how much a dentist can do in cases of broken or loosened teeth if the patient visits him immediately after the accident.

Another suggestion to help educate parents in the proper attitude toward child and dentist is that they stay out of the dentist's operating room while children are receiving dental treatment. This was suggested in The Journal of the American Dental Association by Dr. Frank L. Lamons, chairman of the department of orthodontics (straightening teeth) at Emory University and Dr. Mary Lynn Morgan, both of Atlanta, Ga., who say that parents should be informed fully about the condition of their children's mouths and the treatment needed.

"Departure of the parents from the scene of action brings miraculous results in every instance of behavior difficulty."

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

Health organizations advise weight reductions for millions.

THE HIGHWAY STORY

The latest unhappy word from the fringes of the motor mania is that a teen-ager in one of our Iowa towns has developed a new and improved method of killing himself and any number of others with an automobile

This particular youth has been best known for his playful habit of driving 80 and 90 miles an hour on gravel roads around the town, out of reach of the local police and highway patrolmen

He does his driving at night, accompanied by four or five other boys and girls who are, apparently, anxious to know what it feels like to die young

One night, when the boy brought his car booming off a side road and across an arterial highway without stopping, a highway patrolman spotted the moving headlights and, after a wild chase, stopped the car.

The kids got a big kick out of being stopped by a patrolman, and later, the incident gave our "hero" a flash of inspiration. Now, when he's approaching a highway from a side road, he turns out his lights about a quarter mile from the stop sign.

Without reducing speed - that is part of the thrill - he slams his completely darkened car across the highway without stopping and down the side road another quarter mile before turning on the lights.

It's said that the boy and his friends spend most of their evenings now making as many blind runs at the highway as possible.

If there is a new way to get killed in an automobile, this is probably it.

Three hundred constitutes a perfect score in bowling.

Common Sense Demanded In Farm Modernization

Use a little common sense if you re planning on remodeling or modernizing old farm buildings.

Besides just getting something new be sure it will save time and reduce the labor required in the performance of everyday chores.

Take into account effort put forth in walking—make new plans so they will cut steps to a minimum. Be sure you are getting full use of electrical equipment. This is important in milking parlors, feeding areas and milk houses, he added.

For safety and ease of production make sure sufficient amounts of light appear in the right places. Make sure the barn has convenient outlets the same as the milk rooms and the feed-mixing areas.

Arrangement is important, too. When building or remodeling farm buildings see that unnecessry operations in feeding, watering and other chores are cut down. The feed processing room should be located for ease of delivery, automatically handled if possible.

Farmers should not get wrapped up in what appear to be big things, forgetting the many small obvious necessities. For example, the water system with its tank, pump and wiring circuits should be as carefully planned for the barn and out buildings as the pressure system in the farm home. Correct electric wiring with proper fuse and breaker box are items that are often overlooked.

War Dogs Called Up Again For Duty on Korean Front

U S. war dogs are headed back into action. The report that "K-9" (canine) warriors are being sent to the Korean front from a California Army base is a reminder that fighting dogs, like ground troops, have not yet been replaced by "push-button" warfare.

From prehistoric times, the dog's acute sense of smell and hearing, his watchfulness, speed, and above all his devotion to man, have made this animal a valuable military ally.

By World War I, practically all the major belligerents, except the United States, were training many thousands of dogs for sentinel, messenger, rescue and other duties During World War II, Uncle Sam put into effect his first war-dog program, an extensive operation in which more than 10,000 American "Wags" were prepared for military service. Many of these K-9 soldiers performed deeds of heroism in battle theaters that ranged from snowy fields of the Far North to the tropic jungles of Pacific islands.

Altogether some 18,000 dogs were donated for military duty by American owners Among the 30-odd suitable breeds were Doberman Pinschers, Airedales, Boxers, German Shepherds, and Giant Schnauzers, along with such sturdy pack dogs as Alaska Malamutes and Siberian Huskies.

Government Jobholders

Indicative of the growth in government in the past half century, one out of every eight persons with a job in 1949 worked for government—federal, state and local—as compared with one out of every 23 in 1900, according to figures compiled by the National Industrial Conference board. Including the armed forces, a total of 7.3 million persons were on government payrolls last year as compared with 1.2 millions in 1900, a gain of more than 500 per cent.

Old Trees Need Care

A healthy old oak, sugar maple, hickory or beech has a majestic beauty that only years can give to a tree. Just as the life span of man has been increased through the years by better knowledge of health and the conquest of diseases, so shade trees can live to a riper old age by greater care. Maintaining soil fertility is the first step. Feed lawn trees a well balanced, highly organic tree food. Prune out the dead wood showing up.

Formula for Work Horses

To get farm horses in top condition for spring work, veterinarians advise these steps: (1) Build up the grain ration gradually over a period of a month—don't switch abruptly to heavy grain feeding after keeping horses on only hay and silage through the winter. (2) Work them just a short time each day until they are in shape for a full schedule of hard work. (3) Have their teeth and feet examined and have them checked for internal parasites. (4) Have them vaccinated against equine encehphalomyelitis (sleeping sickness) before the start of warm weather.

Heavy Rainfall Regions

In the United States, Louisiana drawing Gulf of Mexico moisture, can claim state rainfall honors with four and one half feet per year over a 50-year period. Nevada is the only state averaging less than one foot of rain. The world's regions of heaviest rainfall are mostly close to the equator and on the seaward side of high mountain ranges. In Oregon and Washington, the Cascade range illustrates how mountains take moisture from sea winds.

Oldest Public Steno Recalls O. Henry, Other Great Writers

NEW YORK. N Y—Elsie Dugg, 40 years a veteran at a trade gradually vanishing from the American scene, is still busy at 80 years of age. She admits, however, that the job is not as glamorous as it used to be

Miss Duff is said to be the oldest working public stenographer in New York city. And she doesn't know when she will retire. "I can't," she explains. "There's no one to take over my work."

She points out that few stenographers in these modern times are willing to gamble on earning an income on an hourly fee basis.

Miss Duff operates in the same cubbyhole office in the Old Prince George hotel where she started many years ago and she has a memory list of clients that includes many famous and interesting personalities.

The hotel was at one time a gathering spot for writers, and one she knew well, and served often. was the novelist Emerson Hough. She typed his whole manuscript for "The Magnificent Adventure," a story of the Lewis and Clark expedition.

She was also the first to hear and read the impassioned temperance lectures of John L. Sullivan, boxer turned crusader, for it was to her that he dictated them.

Once, she was even included in a story written by one of her customers. The author, a silent little man, always brought in his stories written on yellow paper in a clean, beautiful hand. Once he handed her a manuscript, remarking, "By the way, I put you in this story."

As she typed the passage in O Henry's "The Face in the Circle" that told of a public stenographer, she was writing a description of herself.

One Broom Swept Heavily; Law Investigates Sweepings

CHICAGO—A good sweeper is a good man to have around for a janitor, but a heavy broom got Abe Forrest 29 a Walgreen drugstore porter, into plenty of trouble.

Forrest was held to a grand jury on a larceny charge Police said he "swept out" more than $60,000 worth of candy and cigarettes from the drugstore.

Also held to the grand jury was Forrest's half brother, John Cobbs, who police said told of hauling away the "sweepings" over a period of months.

Navy Chief Solves Mystery Of Woman Free With Dollars

NEW YORK—The mystery of the woman who happily passed out dollars and pep talks to navy recruits has been brought to light by a chief petty officer who received $150 from the lady to distribute among a contingent of 130 bound for Newport, R.I.

Petty Officer Steven Kotelas, Sr., Bridgeport, Conn., was approached by a woman asking how many men he had in his charge. Not knowing who she might be, he refused to answer

"She says maybe I got a hundred men," he relates "She peels off a $100 bill and tells me to divide it among my men It's then I tell her I got 130 She gives me $50 more."

The next night same time, same place, same routine. Kotelas had 135 men, the lady gave him $135 and also gave the recruits on the train a fine pep talk The petty officer then had a heart to heart talk with the generous donor and discovered that she was Mrs Muriel McCormick Hubbard sister of Chicago industralist Fowler McCormick and granddaughter of the late John D. Rockefeller

Poor Private Wilbur Hates Bugle Call in the Morning

Let it be known that Wilbur just hates to get up in the morning and if the Army buglers operate on Daylight Saving Time, he may not be able to stand it all.

His worried mother conveyed that information to Gen Lewis B. Hershey, Draft Director.

She said that Wilbur, not otherwise identified. was about to be drafted and she feared that he would not fare so well with Army living.

"He never could stand to get up early in the mornings, and I no they may them get up awfully early in the Army," she wrote. "And it will be even a hour eatlier if they have daylite savin. So pleese General Hershey dont let them hav daylite savin because I don't think Wilbur coold stand getting up so early in the mornins and wooldnt do justis to being a solder."

World's Oldest and Biggest Tree Said in South Mexico

WASHINGTON—The oldest, biggest tree in the world is said to be the Tule cypress of Santa Maria del Tule, six miles from Oaxaca in southern Mexico. It is a Taxodium mucronatum, the same cypress as the ones in Chapultepec Park in Mexico City.

Thousands of years old, it is still green and vigorous, and has a roundness suggestive of the oak rather than the usual slim cypress.

"El Tule," as it is called, is so massive that 28 people, touching fingertips of outstretched arms, barely can encircle it.

KLEMME LEGION PLANS TWO DAY CARNIVAL

The Klemme Legion has contracted with the George Nelson Shows for a two-day celebration to be held in Klemme on Friday and Saturday, June 13-14.

WOUNDED

Kenneth Cook, Emmetsburg 15 year old youth, was accidentally shot in the right arm last week when a .22 calibre rifle fired just as he set it down. The bullet passed through his arm, just below the elbow.

BURNED

Clare Canny, junior student in Little Cedar high school, received eye injures when an oil burner in the school gym exploded The blast raised the stage floor three inches. The boy's injury was not serious.

LOSES LEG—

A power saw accident cost the left leg of Lester Langley, of near Pulaski, in Davis county. A falling tree knocked him into the saw, his leg being severed just below the knee.

MIX-YOUR-OWN MILK DRINKS

"Milk's a Party" when teenagers mix their own. Plenty of cold milk plus syrups, preserves and fruit juices are the "makins." Teenage imagination will determine the concoctions but here are a few to get them started:

STRAWBERRY BLONDE: One fourth strawberry pop, three-fourths milk. Result—a sparkling pink milk drink with tempting flavor.

BANANA FLIP: Mash a ripe banana and add to a glass of milk. Stir very well Add a dash of cinnamon Good with a "float" of chocolate ice cream

SOUTHERN SMOOTHIE: Mix together a tablespoon of molasses and a glass of cold milk Serve with oatmeal cookies.

CHOCOLATE FLOAT: Stir into 1½ tablespoons of chocolate syrup or of chocolate-flavored malt drink powder a glass of cold milk. Top with a scoop of vanilla or chocolate ice cream. Stir the ice cream into the beverage for a "Frosted Chocolate." Good, too, with maple syrup.

Iowa's Famous "Rassel"

Ever hear how a wrestling match helped make Fort Dodge county seat of Webster County?

Back in 1855 Fort Dodge and Homer both sought the county seat. The settlers held an election, but a big dispute arose.

So the towns picked their strongest men and held a wrestling match. Fort Dodge won the match, and the county seat.

Well, that's America! Where else can people settle an election fuss with a half-Nelson? And we've heard of where they drew straws or matched coins, in an election tie.

Things like that make you realize even more what a fine country this is. In an election, football, or business, may the best man win. We go along with the other fellow, and he goes along with us.

Even in little things, like our hobbies, or our preference for a glass of beer, fruit juice, or pop, we recognize a person's right of choice and don't quibble about it.

Yes, in America we do more than read about freedom . . . we live it.

COUNTY WIDE PROGRAM

WE ARE PLEDGED TO INTERVIEW ALL COUNTY RESIDENTS—THE NATIONAL BENEFIT PLANS OF PROTECTION WILL BE EXPLAINED TO INDIVIDUALS AND FAMILIES

During the time necessary to contact all county residents, representatives will be interviewing individuals and families. The National Benefit Plans of Protection will be explained by fully qualified, specially trained representatives. They are pledged to contact all residents and to make plans available for all who qualify.

A FEW MINUTES' TIME IS ALL THAT IS NEEDED

Just a few minutes of your time is all that is needed to receive a full explanation of the Plans. The representative who calls on you will arrange a time that is convenient for you to receive full information.

INCOME PROTECTION: Ask the representative who calls on you about the National Benefit Income Protector Plans that give a monthly check when you are sick.

HERE ARE A FEW REASONS WHY IT IS IMPORTANT FOR YOU TO HEAR A FULL EXPLANATION OF THE NATIONAL BENEFIT PLAN

THEY ARE A SAFEGUARD AGAINST GOVERNMENT CONTROL OF HOSPITALS AND DOCTORS:
Socialized medicine is unnecessary for you when you and your family are protected under the National Benefit Plans

ONE PERSON OUT OF EVERY TWO FAMILIES WILL BE A HOSPITAL PATIENT THIS YEAR:
The advance medical techniques and the ultra Modern Hospital facilities are being used now more than ever to safeguard health and prolong life. If you or a member of your family takes sick or meets with an accident, you too, may become a hospital patient. And six of every ten patients require expensive surgical operations.

HOSPITAL AND MEDICAL CARE BECOMES TREMENDOUSLY EXPENSIVE:
If you or a member of your family has been recently hospitalized and has had expensive medical or surgical care you know the importance of a National Benefit Plan to repay the cost of this necessary care.

YOU MAY REPAY EXPENSIVE HOSPITAL, SURGICAL, MEDICAL AND NURSING CARE AT LOW COST:
National Benefit Plans of Protection are low in cost. You will be surprised at the small monthly deposits to keep them in force to protect you and your family.

YOU WILL BE CONTACTED

Migraine Headaches

Doctors believe that attacks of migraine headaches can be shortened by starting treatment as soon as trouble begins. About 5 per cent of the nation's population is affected by migraine headaches, although it ranks only about third as a cause of headaches. They occur two to three times more frequently in women than in men. Migraine headaches, will last anywhere from thirty minutes to three or four days, are restricted to one side of the head, and can occur on either half in an alternating manner. The headaches are described as causing a dull, throbbing, piercing pain often accompanied by nausea, exhaustion, depression, nervousness and blurring of vision. Migraines are associated with certain personality characteristics since "thinkers" rather than "doers" are generally affected by them. Typical victims of migraine attacks are meticulous housewives and overambitious, perfectionistic men with an exaggerated sense of responsibility.

YOUTHFUL SINGER

Chillicothe Youth Is Nation's First Television Opera Star

A 12-year-old boy from Chillicothe, Ohio, has become one of the nation's first television opera stars, a personality as well-known to the greats of the musical world as to the folks back home.

In Chillicothe (pop. 18,340) Chet Allen developed his first taste for singing, along with cartoon sketching, stamp collecting and football line play When his family shifted to Columbus several years ago, Chet was already emitting the clear soprano tones that recently moved the great Arturo Toscanini to tears and wrung unrestrained plaudits from the nation's foremost music critics.

His father, a chemical engineer, enrolled the curly haired youngster in the Columbus Boychoir at Princeton, N.J Under the careful supervision of Herbert Hoffman, director of the Boychoir, Chet became a star soloist. He accompanied the choir on a bus barnstorming tour of 32 states.

He was, in fact, a veteran musical campaigner by the time that opera composer Gian-Carlo Menotti visited the Boychoir in search of a lead for his television opera, "Amahl And The Night Visitors," commissioned Twelve-year-old Chet Allen, Ohio's gift to television opera, sings with Rosemary Kuhlman in a rehearsal of the Gian-Carlo Menotti opera, "Amahl And The Night Visitors." Chet, who was born in Chillicothe, Ohio, and now lives in Columbus, had the starring role of a crippled boy in the Menotti opera which had its TV premiere over the NBC network.

two years ago by the National Broadcasting Company.

Menotti seized upon the Chillicothe youngster as a natural for the role of the crippled boy whose impoverished mother was visited by the Three Wise Men. The youth's impulsive gesture in offering his crutch as a present to the new-born King in Bethlehem led to his miraculous recovery

CHET MOVED on New York with all the assurance of a widely traveled adult. He became an overnight hit with the opera's cast at rehearsal His role was an exacting one, requiring a wide variety of emotions, and eminent musical men like Toscanini, who dropped in on rehearsals, were both moved and amazed by his vocal and acting capacities.

So, too, were ordinary folks throughout the nation. The opera had its premiere Christmas Eve on a national television hook-up. The next day NBC was deluged with letters telegrams and telephone calls praising the young artist.

Chet liked what he saw of the big city, but he still feels that a small town has plenty of advantages. "You can get in touch with folks so much easier," he explains.

Chet is now back at the Boychoir where Director Hoffman reports with pride that all the attention focused on him has not gone to his head "one whit." He makes occasional trips to New York to complete a full recording of the opera for RCA Victor, and the remainder of his time is devoted to his school and to extracurricular activities.

Whether Chet will continue as an operatic performer, or whether he will pick up the old life and perhaps specialize as a cartoonist or become an engineer like his father, depends upon nature Director Hoffman estimates that in one year, possibly two, Chet's voice will mature.

Whether the post-adolescent Chet will have the vocal capacity for an operatic career is something that neither Chet, Director Hoffman or anyone else will prophesy In the past, instances of boy sopranos who successfully bridged the change of voice have been rare But few have been as successful in pre-adolescence as young Allen and even fewer have demonstrated his remarkable adaptability for operatic acting.

THE FICTION CORNER

DOUBLE MISTAKE

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

IT was convenient thought Martha Sidney that Larry had money.

"You see," she confided to Dorice Merton, who was to be maid of honor at the wedding, "Larry could hardly expect me to accompany him on these excursions into the wilderness. After all he has enough money so that this forestry business he's interested in could be classed as a hobby."

3-Minute Fiction

Dorice was dubious. "I sometimes wonder, Mart, whether or not you're wise in marrying Larry. Somehow I feel that he expects you'll be eager to follow him into the woods."

"Asburd! How could he expect me to get a thrill out of trees. Besides, there's that little summer home of his just outside of town. I'd much prefer to live there where I can entertain my friends and make some good use of his money."

It was rather an elaborate wedding. Martha's mother, who called her daughter extremely fortunate at making such a catch, went the limit. She didn't want Larry to think Martha was hopelessly poor.

The couple spent a two weeks' honeymoon on Long Island and returned to Larry's summer home in Albany in late September. All during the boat ride up the Hudson, Larry talked of the woods and their glory in autumn. That night he said:

"Better get your packing done, honey. We're leaving early"

Martha arched her brows in surprise. "My packing! Why, Larry, dear, you don't expect me to accompany you into the wilderness!"

"Larry, darling," she said, "please let me stay."

Larry looked at her in bewilderment. He saw the whiteness about her lips, and knew suddenly that she had never intended to go with him. There was a quality in his voice when he replied that frightened her.

"So that's how it is? I'm the season's outstanding sucker, eh?" He shrugged. "Tomorrow I'm leaving for the woods and you're going with me—whether you like it or not."

They departed by train the next morning. At Saranac they shifted to a power boat, and for hours drove steadily in the wilderness. At the head of the last chain of lakes they disembarked. The power boat sung away. Martha and Larry were left alone, standing on a narrow strip of wilderness that projected out into the lake. There was a log cabin, a canoe and nothing else.

Martha felt afraid and very much alone. Larry had been painfully formal during the entire trip. The mountains, the stillness, the vast solitude awed and frightened her. She stood quite still until the last faint put-put-put of the power launch had faded. Then she turned and entered the cabin that was to be her home.

IN spite of herself Martha could not help enjoying her new existence. For the first time in her life she knew sheer joy at just being alive. The cabin was comfortable and home-like. There were books. There was work to be done.

Larry made no effort to assist her about the cabin. His eyes still held the same cold glint that had frightened her on the night before their departure. He seldom spoke, was away from the cabin a good deal and spent his evenings bent over drawings and reports.

It was a month before Larry let down the barrier. He came up from behind Martha as she stood alone on a bluff overlooking the lake. She turned at his step and looked into his eyes. The cold glint was gone.

"The power launch is due back tomorrow," he said. "You may go back with the driver if you like. I—guess I made a mistake."

Martha felt a lump in her throat and swallowed hard.

"Larry, darling, please let me stay. I—I've been selfish. Can't you forgive me?"

Larry's head jerked up. For one brief moment he stared.

"Martha, Martha, I — hoped, — I wanted you to—love the woods as I do. I brought you here for that purpose, and thought I'd failed."

Martha pulled his face down and kissed it. "Let's forget the past, Larry, sweetheart, and start all over again. I really don't feel as if I've had a real honeymoon. Let's begin over again. Now! Here!"

When Herbert Hoover Talks, All America Listens

By Wright A. Patterson

WHEN HERBERT HOOVER talks, all of America listens. When the people of the nation have the opportunity of both listening and seeing, they take advantage of both opportunities. They had both on January 27 when the man whom the people recognize as a national leader was on both radio and television.

Then millions of Americans, regardless of political affiliations, both looked and listened. Those letters that Hoover appreciated most were from the homes of the nation, written in longhand on plain stationery, nearly 7,000 of them. Those letters indicated a willingness to accept the leadership of the former president on so vital a subject as our national defense. For him, those 7,000 letters constituted a heart-warming experience, but there were many others coming from those recognized as experts in defense lines, and expressing firm approval in what he had said.

From the army there were letters from Lt. General Albert W. Wedemeyer, Lt. General Leslie B. Groves. Lt. Gen. Harold L. George, Major General Hugh Knerr and General Brice P. Bisque.

From the top brass of the navy there were letters of approval and commendations, with the privilege of quoting them, from such officers as Admiral William V. Pratt, Admiral William H. Standley, Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, and Capt. James E. van Zandt, now a congressman.

From the realm of diplomacy: Henry P. Fletcher, former undersecretary-of-state and ambassador to Chile, Mexico, Belgium and Italy; William R. Castle, former director European division department of state, under-secretary-of-state, ambassador to Japan; Hugh Gibson, former ambassador to Belgium; Spruille Braden, former assistant secretary of state and ambassador to Argentine, Colombia and Cuba; Joseph A. Kennedy, former ambassador to Great Britain; Arthur Bliss Lane, minister to Estonia, Latvia and Poland; Jesse Jones, former secretary of commerce, chairman reconstruction finance corporation.

All of the above endorsed Hoover's statements that the nation should concentrate on the construction of more sea and air power rather than on additional ground forces as a defense against Russia, and that we must also protect our economy, and not waste our resources in Europe

It was the agreement with and the approval of those statements in the 7,000 long hand written letters received by Mr. Hoover from American homes which he so much appreciated.

It would be well for those of us who are interested only in provable facts that we prepare in advance for the storm of invective, mud, filth and generalities that will be showered upon us by political orators of both parties through the period of the coming presidential campaign of July, August, September and October.

The coming one will be such a mud slinging campaign as has not been known since the days of the 70's and 80's of the last century, and both parties will indulge in the same type of invective

President Truman set the keynote of the campaign in his address before the national Democratic Woman's club at Washington in November. He was greeted with applause because he was talking to an audience who have voted Democratic because father and grandfather voted that ticket.

His generalities did not change any votes, nor will the orators of either party who indulge in the same type of generalities. Those whose votes can be changed want provable facts.

For example, the president charged the Republicans with the expenditure of vast sums contributed by a small minority for purely selfish reasons in an effort to attain a result, in which they failed.

The fact is the Republicans spent in that campaign a total of $1,444,894.77. In the same campaign the Democrats spent $2,066,372.50. The figures are those submitted to congress as required by law, by the national chairmen of the two parties. In the Ohio senatorial campaign, he charged that Senator Taft received vast sums from "special interests" in their attempt to influence legislation for corporate wealth, but he said nothing about the assessments levied against all members of organized labor, and spent to defeat Taft that organized labor bosses might benefit from legislation in behalf of a minority.

American Plan for European Army Endangered by Allied Bickering

EUROPEAN ARMY—The American plan for a united European army to check Communist aggression in Europe, to which America has given millions of dollars, equipment, and its greatest military brains, is on the verge of being smashed. Old and bitter national feelings have climbed out of the grave of history and asserted themselves.

The big question is how and under what conditions West German troops are to be included in the European army. The United States has proposed that West German manpower be brought into an "integrated" force under General Eisenhower. West Germany and France have their own views of how this can be accomplished and to what extent.

The German view: She will agree to participate in the "integrated" force only if taken in as a full partner in the Atlantic alliance. In addition she wants several other concessions, including maximum sovereignty under the "peace contract" yet to be signed.

The French view: France would agree to inclusion of German units, but stipulates that they can not be recruited until after the five other participating nations have ratified the treaty. These nations are France, Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg, and Italy. This stipulation means a delay of months at least since ratification of a final treaty is a long process. In addition, the French want several other checks, particularly control of war production in Germany as a safeguard against the rebuilding of German military might.

The three big powers—the United States, Britain, and France—have already told the Germans they can not be included in the Atlantic alliance for the time being. There was a hint that if Germany signed the European army pact, however, and showed the Allies she could behave, then it would be a much easier job of selling western Europeans on the idea of bringing Germany into the alliance. The three powers did offer concessions, including a seat on a projected four-power appeal board that will have power to review and modify the sentences of more than 1,000 German war prisoners.

West Germany and France are still far from satisfied and remain suspicious of each other. The door is still open for a possible settlement, but the whole thing hangs by a thin thread. A few wrong words at the wrong time can still wreck the plan that has cost home towners of America millions of dollars. But more important, it could cost the west a united front against communism. It has been said that an European army can not work without West Germany and France. It is obvious, then, these two must compromise their demands for the good of the whole and world peace.

RECORD DIVIDENDS—The Department of Commerce reports corporations in the United States paid a record $8,053,000,000 in cash dividends during 1951, a 2 per cent gain over 1950.

However, many corporations reported profits down during the last half of 1951, with a drop of 16 per cent for the month of December. It was partly attributed to increased tax payments

Dividends were reported up in all fields except manufacturing. Automobile dividends dropped 25 per cent and electrical machinery and chemical goods manufacturers reported dividends down about 10 per cent.

The oil refining industry registered one of the biggest gains with 19 per cent, mining was up 16 per cent, railroads 10 per cent, and paper and printing 8 per cent.

ATOMIC TESTS—A new series of atomic tests will be held at Eniwetok atoll in the Pacific, it was announced by the Atomic Energy Commission. It was also revealed that further tests are planned for the near future in the Nevada desert near Las Vegas.

In keeping with the secrecy that surrounds such tests, exact dates and the type of atomic weapons to be tested were not announced.

Meanwhile, the British government has announced it will test its first atomic weapon this year in Australia. The British turned down an offer from the United States for a site for the tests and it was understood that no U S. observers would be on hand to witness the experiment.

POLITICS—As the political pot begins to boil in earnest, the biggest question in the minds of most home towners remains: will President Truman seek the Democratic nomination? There seems to be little question but that the President can have it by simply saying so. Since January when most observers were willing to say, "I don't think he will run again", observations have gradually changed to "he might" and "he will".

But until Mr. Truman announces his intentions, the Democratic side of the question is wide open. There is increasing evidence that Senator Kefauver—although he is unseasoned as far as presidential timber is concerned—is gaining strength. His campaign is showing surprising strength at the grassroots level and if Mr. Truman suddenly announces he is not interested in reelection, he will have a great advantage over those "better-late-than-never" candidates who will come out into the open.

THE DRAFT—The armed forces will draft 19,000 men this month—15,000 for the Army and 4,000 for the Marine Corps. The April call brings to 894,000 the total of announced draftees since the draft was resumed in September, 1950. Also, the April call is the lowest since September, 1951, when 16,900 men were requested by the two services.

KOREA—The United Nations have agreed to the Communist proposal for a conference after an armistice is signed in Korea to discuss political issues concerning Korea. An armistice in Korea, however, is still a long way from an accomplished fact. At the moment there are three important unsettled questions. They are:

(1) The Communists want Russia included as a neutral power to help supervise the armistice. This is unacceptable to the United Nations since it has been established without any doubt that Russia has trained and supplied Communists in Korea with arms of all kind.

(2) The Communists insist upon their right to construct airfields in North Korea during an armistice. The United Nations deny this right.

(3) How, where and when the exchange of prisoners of war will take place.

When these questions are settled, the home towners of the nation can then begin to hope for an armistice.

CONSERVATION PROGRAM

Water Resources Legislation Proposed

President Truman's water resources policy commission has proposed legislation establishing a national water resources and related land conservation policy. The legislation was drawn from a recent report from the commission to the White House.

The proposed legislation would establish the policy of recognition of river basins as units of development; define broad national objectives in safeguarding of essential resources and would affirm the duty of the federal government, with state and local agencies, in cooperation with people of the several basins, to bring about maximum utilization of water and land resources. The Budget bureau also is studying the commission's proposed legislation.

BANKING ON THE HONOR SYSTEM . . . The Central National Bank of Yonkers, N.Y., got tired of making change for its customers, so it did the next best thing—let the patrons make their own change. A wood table top fitted with four glass tops containing quarters, dimes, nickels and pennies was placed in the lobby of the bank. The customers drop their fifty-cent pieces or one or five dollar bills into the slots set back on the table, then scoop up their change and go their way. The bank president explained, "We don't watch them because we think people are honest." The bank has reported that the honor system is working perfectly.

DANGER AND TRAGEDY AT PARA-MANEUVERS . . . Tragedy struck at Camp Drum, N.Y., as the army's parachute maneuvers, "Operation Snowdrop," got underway. Paratrooper Clayton Whitner, Missouri, lies in the snow after he was injured in a jump. Two buddies try to make the injured trooper as comfortable as possible as first aid is awaited. At the time this happened two paratroopers had been killed in jumps and a cargo plane loaded with paratroopers had crashed on takeoff, killing three persons. The army is testing the stamina and skill of the jumpers under winter conditions and under situations simulating actual war at the front.

POSES NINE YEARS AS RED . . . Mrs. Bereniece Baldwin, Detroit, shown with Frank de Nunzio, justice department attorney, as she appeared before the government's subversive activities control board in Washington, D.C., revealed that she posed as a member of the Communist party and Red underground while serving as an F.B.I. agent for nine years. The board is holding hearings to determine whether the Communist party should be required to register its members under anti-subversives law.

KILLS MOTHER, SISTER . . . With cigarette in mouth and carrying his luggage, John Schulz, 16, leaves a train in Milwaukee, Wisc., that brought him back from Kirkwood, Mo., where he was captured. He admits killing his mother and sister in argument over family car.

NEW LITTLE AMERICAN . . . In New York City, Hans Meisenest and his wife, Irene, are enjoying a book of child's stories with Irene, a little German girl whom they are adopting. The pretty child, who came from Waiblingen, Germany, arrived at New York's Idlewild airport recently. She was obtained by the Meisenests through some of their relatives in Germany and an adoption agency. The new little American's new home from now on will be in Queens, New York.

Comparison: Football and Baseball

By GRANTLAND RICE

As progress moves along the road there is always a new order of things. You can fight this order just so long.

For example professional football met this challenge and made its change. To the older roster of teams, Los Angeles and San Francisco were added. The addition of these teams added immeasurably to the growth and development of the game and will continue to do so.

Grantland Rice

Recently Dallas was added to the pro grid map. This latest move, will place the Far West well above the East, including New York's Giants, Philadelphia's Eagles or Pittsburgh's Steelers in the matter of attendance

Big league baseball has made no such changes. It has defied progress. Today Los Angeles, San Francisco, Dallas, Baltimore, Buffalo and Houston have larger attendance figures to draw on than some major league cities but they cannot break into the iron-bound monopoly of the big league game.

Baseball has stuck with the 11 cities and 16 franchises it picked up fifty years ago and has made no move since.

In spite of the vast changes in population and interest shown, the old game has plodded along, clinging desperately to the past with any views of the future completely hidden.

It may be the original setup left no way to handle this situation. There is a big chance a change will come some day in a general revolt of potential major league cities now left out that will tear many of the teams in the two older leagues into shreds. It may not happen. But it could.

Football hasn't been too smart in many directions, but it has been smarter than baseball. And baseball had much the earlier start. The point is that a big-league franchise means much to a city really deserving it. One must admit that three big leagues would be upsetting when it came to any world series. It is fairly certain however that one big league for a city is about all the traffic will bear outside of New York and possibly Chicago.

They have millions in the way of population to give them a two league chance.

About College Football

Pro football is building every year. Additions from the Far West and the Southwest have added tremendous strength. I also happen to believe that college football will appeal to just as many people when the recruited element is eliminated or reduced. It will never be reduced as long as a single alumnus is found breathing.

If correct changes are made college football will no longer be largely a battle of scouting, recruiting, athletic scholarships and money against at least a form of sanity. I received a letter from Don Faurot, the able coach at Missouri. Don shows that in the recent awards and distribution of deserved prizes at Missouri practically every recipient came from that state.

I have seen Missouri teams in the past in which 33 men out of 33 came from Missouri. I believe Missouri has more home-grown football players than any other big university. Missouri makes no effort to send scouts all over the map, 1,500 or 2,000 miles away in order to bag a passing star, a big tackler or a hard running back.

That's the way it should be. Paul Bryant has announced a similar policy for Kentucky. Football players, given their earlier education free in some public high school, too often bolt for the rich bait handed out by some university or college far away. This is unfair to the state that gave the athlete his chance to get started.

The Browns Test

The Browns under Veeck and Hornsby are dead sure to show improvement. One question is—how much improvement will they show at the gate? Unless the Browns move up above the 750,000 or 800,000 attendance mark, the franchise may be shifted Baseball expenses have reached the point where no 300,000 or 500,000 all-season crowd can pay even part of the way.

St. Louis is a hot ball town, especially where the Cardinals are involved. But this season the Cardinal pennant outlook over Giants and Dodgers is not too keen, unless Cardinal pitching reaches the peak it might find in the distance.

I should think any community would take a deep interest in a young ball club building up. But if the Browns' attendance increase doesn't come off, there'll be more than one outside city more than willing to get the assignment.

Hornsby has another fine aid in shortstop Marty Marion.

If Marion is able to work 90 games at short he will be a big help. In any event he will be a big helper St. Louis, with Stanky and Hornsby, will be one of the most interesting spots of the new season. You'll see a lot better baseball from the Browns.

Effective Cough Syrup, Mixed at Home for Economy

No Cooking. No Work. Real Saving.

Here's an old home mixture your mother probably used, and is still one of the most effective for coughs due to colds. Once tried, you'll swear by it.

Make a syrup with 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup water. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Now put 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This makes a full pint of cough medicine, and gives you about four times as much for your money. It keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

And you'll say it's really excellent for quick action. You can feel it take hold swiftly. It loosens phlegm, soothes irritated membranes, helps clear the air passages. Thus it makes breathing easy and lets you get restful sleep.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its quick action on throat and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if not pleased in every way.

Al K. Carstens To Oppose Knutson In Senate Race

AL K. CARSTENS

Al K. Carstens, Burchinal farmer who has been active in Cerro Gordo County Community affairs for many years, revealed Friday that he will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for State Senator from the district including Cerro Gordo, Hancock and Franklin counties

His announcement followed a meeting Thursday evening with a number of friends from all three counties and it was the result of their insistence that he agreed to run, he explained. Petitions already had be signed when he returned from a two week trip.

The 55-year-old farmer stressed that he is not being backed by any particular group or organization since he has no desire to make any advance commitments.

He is the son of D. Carstens Sr., a long time resident of Mason City. Al Carstens has lived his entire life on the home farm on the west edge of Burchinal. The farm is now being managed by his son, Alan.

The Carstens family are members of the First Methodist Church of Mason City. He is a charter member of both the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars and a member of the Masonic Lodge, the Farm Bureau and the Mason City Chamber of Commerce. He is a past commander of San Juan-Marne Post of the VFW.

He is board chairman of the Cerro Gordo County Farmers Mutual Insurance Association & has been a director of the Burchinal Farmers Elevator for a quarter century.

He is also on the executive committee of the North Iowa Co-operative Processing Association which operates the soybean mill at Manly.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Carstens are graduates of Mason City High School. Both children, Alan and Margaret, are graduates of Clear Lake High School. Alan is a graduate of Iowa State College and Margaret is in the present senior class.

Carstens will oppose Sen. Herman M. Knudson in the Republican primaries in June. Miss Dorothy Dunn is the only Democrat so far announced.

ELEVATOR GANG RAISING OWN SPRING FRIES

Mike and the boys down at the Farmers Elevator are raising their own spring fries this year. They have an electric brooder battery set up and the boys are already drooling when they think ahead to the time they are going to eat delicious spring fries.

The project is also an experiment to prove to the world that their chick starter and chick feeds are all they claim to be.

An accurate account is being kept on feed costs and the first batch of fries are expected to be "in the pan" in 8 weeks.

HELLO FOLKS

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Nuehring are the proud parents of a baby boy born March 11th at the Mercy hospital. Mrs. Nuehring is the former Margaret Carolus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Carolus.

FORMER GARNER MERCHANT DIES

Willim John Barz, 75, died at his home in Garner Sunday at 8:40 p. m. He was born in Hancock County, son of Mr. and Mrs. August Barz, and formerly operated a general store in Garner for 50 years. He helped organize the Hancock County Coop Oil Co., and served as mayor of Garner for a number of years.

The funeral services for Will Barz will be held Thursday afternoon at the Evangical and Reformed Church in Garner, at 2:00 p. m. Rev. V. Jaberg will officiate.

SPRING WALNUT PLANTING TO BEGIN IN APRIL

Beginning in April, 300,000 new walnuts will be planted on state-owned areas to complete the million walnut tree planting program laid out for the 1951-52 planting season. More than 60 areas will be planted this spring, with the largest planting of 190,000 walnuts scheduled for the Creston Lake area and 50,000 at the Rock Creek Lake in Jasper County.

William C. Finley, Forester of the American Walnut Association, recently in Des Moines to discuss the Iowa walnut planting program with Commission officials, termed the 5-year, five million tree program, "a wise forward looking forestry project."

The forestor advises that a free publication on walnut planting and growing, is available from the American Walnut Association for individuals interested in adding to the value of their timberlands by walnut planting. The booklet may be secured by writing the American Walnut Associaton, 666 North Lake Shore Drive, Chicago 11, Ill.

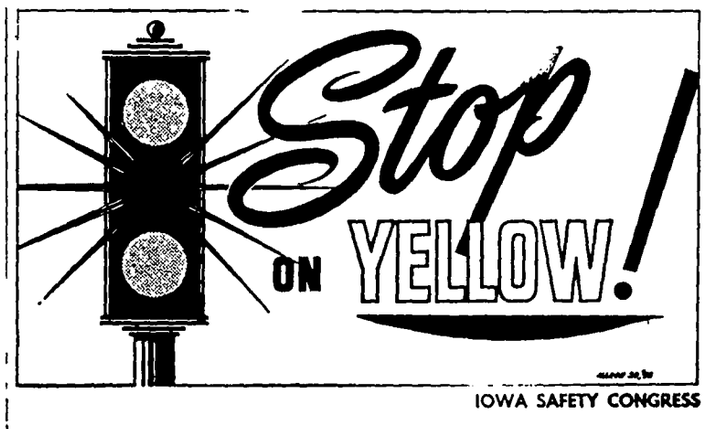
Stratified walnuts ready for spring planting are available from the state forest nursery at $6.00 per thousand wth a minimum order of 500 nuts. Applications for nuts and other forestry stock must be received in the Conservation Commission office, Est 7th and Court, Des Moines, prior to March 15.

GOODELL GI TRANSFERRED

Cpl. Eugene Robbins, who has been with the armed air forces at Fort Campbell, Ky., has been transferred to Fort Jackson, Columbia, S. C. where he will attend school for six weeks, being trained as a supply clerk. He has been in training in 6 states and has made parachute jumps in four of these. Eugene joined the Air Force a year ago and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Robbins.

FIRST ROBIN REPORTED! ! ! !

The first Robin reported seen this spring was by Mary Jane, and it was in our own back yard early the morning of March 13. It was very pretty against the snow and seemed to be having a good time getting its feet cold.



IOWA SAFETY CONGRESS

When the traffic signal flashes yellow, it almost invariably uncovers two different types of drivers.

One driver interprets the yellow light as a warning to prepare to stop, and he does stop.

The other driver thinks the yellow light is a sporting warning that he'd better step on it or be caught by the red light. He clips on through the intersection with a devilish feeling of personal triumph.

Well, personal victories are few enough in daily life, but they shouldn't be achieved at intersections. That's one place to hold back and take advantage of every warning and every natural precaution

The yellow light is a warning to prepare to stop. Stop on yellow

BY RAY EASTMAN

One of these mornings, spring will come across Iowa like a green sigh of relief. Neighborhoods will sprout tricycles, roller skates, wagons and all the paraphernalia of the small traffic of the small children.

To one Iowa neighborhood, the season will bring an uneasy, unwanted kind of security: Little Ted, "the great tricyle thief," will not be about his usual business.

It was just last spring, when Ted was three years old, that he discovered he had outgrown his own minature tricycle. His knees bumped the handle bars. Other children, on bigger tricycles, out distanced him. From his place at the end of the neighborhood traffic, Ted viewed the problem with solemn thoughtfulness. He simply decided he would get a bigger tricycle.

That began Ted's brief life of crime. He began exploring the block on foot and wherever he found a larger tricycle abandoned by a child, he would climb on board and ride it home.

Ted soon learned that these single prizes were reclaimed too quickly to be of any use to him. He decided to stockpile. He began spending his entire days bringing tricycles home. By the end of an afternoon, he would sometimes have as many as a half a dozen parked in his front yard, convinced that at least one would stay. But by evening, they would all be reclaimed.

Then Ted branched out. He started crossing the street into the next block, bringing home tricycyes from the strange neighborhood. During one great period, he was able to keep a tricycle for three days before it was discovered who it belonged to.

Ted kept on trying. One afternoon he found a tricycle that was even too big to ride. He was dragging it across the street when a driver brought his car around the corner at fool's speed. This spring, all the tricycles of the neighborhood are quite secure. "The great tricycle thief" is dead.

JOSTEN'S SPRING SALE GOING OVER WITH A BANG

The Josten Hardware & Appliance spring sale, which started last week Thursday, is a big success, according to Edmund Josten, proprietor. Some of the "red hot" specials went like hot cakes and in some instances he has re-ordered replacements as much as five times to keep up with the demand.

Josten's Spring Sale comes to a close Saturday night of this week.

HANCOCK FARM BUREAU HITS MEMBER GOAL

The quota of 1,322 Farm Bureau members in Hancock County was reached last week end. Ten townships reached or went over their quota. Madison Twp. with 9 over had the highest per cent of quota in the county.

Oscar Golbuff of Hayfield turned 81 memberships with a quota of 72, making a percentage of 112. In a tie for second place are Crystal and Britt Twp. Crystal with Mortan Larson as captain, turned in 43 memberships with a quota of 38 and Britt Twp. with Everett Shipler as captain turned in 79 memberships with a quota of 74. In third place was Magor Twp.

Donald Dean as acting captain of Magor Twp. Turned in 63 memberships with a quota of 60. The three highest townships in numbers are: Concord with 169, Ell with 124, and Garfield with 103.

THE FARM OUTLOOK

By Paul Henderson, County Extension Director

Wholesale demand for meat has been about steady at recent prices. The main exception has been pork in New York. Pork loins were up slightly there last week. But elsewhere in the nation, supplies of pork were fully ample to satisfy the demand, according to Francis A. Kutist, Iowa State College farm economist.

September farrowed pigs are beginning to show up on some markets. September is the big month for fall farrowed pigs. Kutish believes that this lends further support to his belief that we are not likely to get much of this so- called "normal late winter-early spring hog price rise" this year.

Prices may go up some as field work begins. But hogs are likely to continue to roll to market until sometime along in May By then sales will have dropped off to the point where we can look for the summer rise to begin. This rise should carry hog prices up to whatever levels OPS ceilings permit by August and early September.

Chances are that we will see a delay in the sale of hogs next fall, because of the feed situation. Farmers will tend to hold back hogs to finish out on the new corn crop. Kutish expects that this will provide a stronger early fall market than was the case last fall.

Cattle Marketings Lag

Turning to cattle government graders say they can't recall when they have seen as many "soft cattle" as are now being killed. Very few of the cattle are grading above the middle of the choice grade. Most of them range from there down through utility.

We had 11% more cattle on feed than a year earlier. Yet, our marketings have not reflected this increase in cattle on feed until recently.

Many market observers fear that the influx of soft corn cattle will hit us almost any time in the next 60 days. The degree of accompanying price decline on such cattle will depend upon how badly these cattle bunch up. We almost certainly will see a widening between the extreme top corn-fed cattle and the utility grade, Kutish figures. If the bunching is bad, he believes soft corn cattle could drop as much as $4 per hundred.

Baby Chick Orders

Poultrymen continue uncertain about baby chick buying plans for this spring. Sound management calls for making decisions on what the outlook is for egg prices and feed costs next fall, rather than today, however, Kutish says.

Egg production this year will probably set a new record. But if farmers go through with their plans to buy 10 % fewer chicks this spring, egg output will go down next fall—and prices fully as high as in the fall of 1951. Meanwhile, an average or better feed grain crop will pull down feed costs.

Egg profits should be better for the Iowa poultryman who does an efficient job of handling his flock.

NEW FISHING LAWS AVAILABLE

Folders summarizing fishing regulations which will be in effect from March 15, 1952 to March 15, 1953 are being mailed to county recorders, state conservation officers, and others authorized to sell fishing licenses. Copies of the new laws will be distributed to purchasers of fishing or combination fishing and hunting licenses or to anyone requesting them

Fishing law leaflets carry information on licenses, seasons, limits, restricted areas, methods of fishing and other matters of interest to fishermen.

FRED BELL GOES IN FOR STREAMLINED FRY RAISING

Fred Bell of the Bell Produce Store is going to raise his own spring fries this year in the modern manner.

Fred bought an electric brooder "battery" from the Swanson Hatchery and set it up in his office. The battery is in three tiers the top accomodates the baby chicks when they romp and play for about 3 weeks and are then moved to the next section just below their first home.

They are kept in the second floor compartment for about 4 or 5 weeks and then moved to the "cellar" where they will be conditioned for Rosie's frying pan. Fred has 30 chicks which he is feeding Ole Bolson's chick starter. So far he has not lost a one.

Call Bids For Drain District In Goodell

Hancock County supervisors will hold a public letting on the construction of drainage District 157, located in the town of Goodell, on Wednesday, April2, at 1.30 p m. at the courthouse in Garner. The new improvement was petitioned for by the town of Goodell through Mayor J. J. Cook The project will involve the laying of approximately 2,100 feet of tile.

The board of supervisors also approved the amended report of Drainage Engineer C. F. Merten recommending the substitution of drain tile for sewer tile on the main line of the drain and to eliminate the main line tile in the platted town of Goodell west of the railroad.

FIRST LESSON

A young man fresh out of law school appeared in a lower New York court to conduct his first case. Comporting himself in the most approved legal manner, he awaited his summons to the bar. Presently his case was called. Whereupon the fledgling lawyer laid his hat and coat on a bench and stepped forward.

"Young man," the judge exclaimed with a touch of asperity, "I would gather that this is your first appearance in this court."

"Yes, your honor," the youthful lawyer, replied, wondering wildly what had revealed his inexperience.

"I thought so," barked the judge. "Just move your hat and coat over where you can watch them, and proceed with the case."

"What's the matter? Don't you like them?" asked the huckster.

"Yes," repiied Freddie.

"Then go ahead and take some."

Freddie still hesitated, whereupon the huckster put a generous handful in the boy's cap. After the huckster had driven on the mother asked: "Why didn't you take the cherries when he told you to?"

Freddie winked as he said: "'Cause his hand was biggr'n mine."

HONEST LAD

Danny, along with many other little lads, went to school for the first time, and like many other little boys' fathers, Danny's father asked him how he liked his teacher.

"All right," was the reply.

"Is your teacher smart?" teasingly persisted the questioner.

"Well, she knows more than I do," admitted Danny.

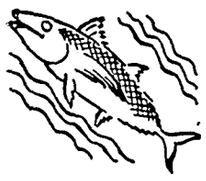
Give Fish Dinners Tantalizing Taste With Zesty Seasoning

IF FISH DINNERS in your house are not received with wholehearted good spirit and eaten with relish, check on your fish cookery. Improvement is simple, the rewards are great.



Fish served frequently can ease the budget and add zest to an otherwise humdrum string of menus. In addition to these reasons, homemakers appreciate the fact that fish is tender and requires but short cooking time. Meal preparation time can be cut considerably when fish appears frequently on the table.

Many fish varieties are available because they come fresh, canned and fresh-frozen. When you investigate the cookery methods as well as the many seasonings that can enhance their flavors, you enter a fascinating realm of cookery.

You've stuffed chops and roasts Have you ever thought of stuffing a fish? Here's an excellent way to prepare fish with stuffing that's quick to make and wonderfully popular:

Baked Stuffed Fish
(Serves 6)

Select a fish weighing 3 to 4 pounds. Clean and rub salt inside and out. Fill cavity ⅔ full with mushroom stuffing. Lace fish with string to hold stuffing in place and to hold fish together. Brush fish with melted butter or substitute and place upright in a greased baking pan. Place paper brushed with butter over fish. Pour ½ to ¾ cup water or fish stock into pan. Bake in a moderate (350°F.) oven for 40 to 60 minutes or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Baste frequently with drippings in pan. Remove string and serve immediately on a hot platter with liquid from pan, thickened with a mixture of 1 tablespoon butter and 1 teaspoon flour.

Mushroom Stuffing

- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1 tablespoon onion, chopped
- ¼ cup chopped mushrooms
- 2 cups fresh bread crumbs
- ½ cup cream
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1 teaspoon chopped parsley
- Salt and pepper

Melt butter in saucepan. Add onion and saute until onion is golden. Add chopped mushrooms and cook until water from mushrooms cooks away. Add bread crumbs, cream, eggs and parsley. Stir until well mixed. Cook over low heat until mixture is thickened. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

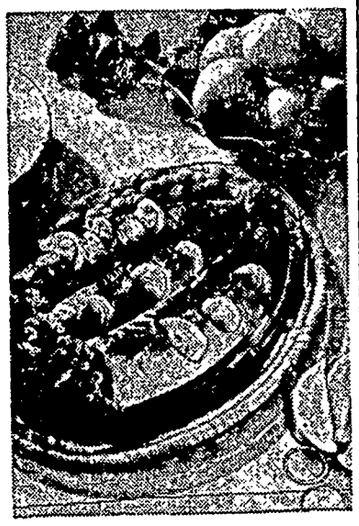
Broiling is an excellent method for cooking fish because it's so tender. Here are two ways to try:

Broiled Mackerel, Onion Slices
(Serves 4)

- 4 1-pound mackerel or other small fish
- 3 onions, sliced
- 2 tablespoons butter

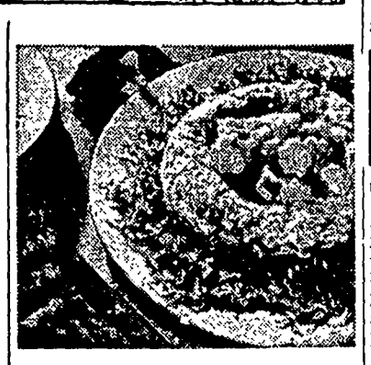


Small, whole fish like this mackerel, can be treated by cutting slits in the fish and inserting onion slices. The broiling method prepares the fish quickly and gives interesting variety to fish dinners.

LYNN SAYS:
Try Something Different For Flavorful Surprises

Corn meal sticks help out a meal in the doldrums, but they'll be a surprise too if you add some steamed raisins to the batter.

Don't skip onions as a vegetable if you seek variety. Nothing goes more nicely with a steak or roast. You can try parboiling them, then baking with cream sauce and mushrooms; or, simply bake with diluted canned mushroom soup if you're in a hurry.



Fish fillets cooked and flaked go into this ring mold to give an easily prepared main dish which the family will appreciate. Cooked vegetables, like the carrots used here, can be served in the center of the ring.

Lemon Tarts Beverage
*Recipe Given

Rub inside of fish with salt. Make several slits on each side of the fish. Slip a slice of onion and a dot of butter in each slit on the top side, pushing the slice of onion well into the slit.

Place fish under broiler, about 6 inches from the source of heat. Broil for 3 minutes, turn fish and insert onions and dots of butter on the other side. Broil 6 minutes longer, or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork.

Broiled Fish Steaks

Either fresh or frozen steaks may be used for this. With frozen steaks, let fish thaw on refrigerator shelf or at room temperature, just long enough to separate the steaks. Dip steaks in flour, season both sides with salt and pepper and brush both sides with salad oil. Place on a pre-heated, greased broiler pan about two or 3 inches from heat. Broil 5 to 8 minutes, turn carefully and broil 5 to 8 minutes longer or until fish flakes easily when tested with fork. If fish is very frozen, a slightly longer time for broiling may be required. Remove steaks to hot platter and serve with the following:

Mustard Sauce

- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 1 cup hot milk
- 1 slice onion
- Salt and pepper
- 1 teaspoon prepared mustard
- Few drops lemon juice

Melt butter, add flour and cook until it turns golden. Add milk, onion, salt and pepper and cook, stirring constantly until mixture thickens, then continue cooking until reduced to about two-thirds of the original quantity. Add mustard and lemon juice. Strain sauce or just remove onion, and serve.

• • •

An easy way to serve fish that may be different to you, is by baking a nicely seasoned fish mixture in a ring mold:

Flaked Fish Ring
(Serves 6)

- 2 pounds cooked fish fillets
- 2 eggs
- ½ cup tomato juice
- 1½ cups soft bread crumbs
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon pepper
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- ¼ cup parsley, minced
- 2 tablespoons chopped celery

Flake fish. Mix in remaining ingredients. Place mixture in buttered ring mold and bake in a hot (400°F.) oven for 30 minutes. Run a knife around the edges and turn out on platter. Fill center with sliced, cooked carrots. Garnish with chicory or other greens.

Broiled Whole Fish

Use any small fish such as trout, croakers, butterfish, porgies or smelt. Have fish drawn and heads and tails removed, if desired. Season with salt and pepper, then brush with butter or oil. Broil, 3 inches from heat about 8 to 10 minutes. (If fish are boned, broil 5 to 8 minutes). Remove to hot platter and spread with a mixture of 3 tablespoons sweet butter creamed with 1 teaspoon anchovy paste.

Soak a few herbs in milk and then add to your meat ball mixture. This puts real, old-fashioned goodness in them.

Slices of bread with the meal can get monotonous. Now, how would you like some thick slices of crusty Vienna bread heated slightly in the oven just before serving? Takes but a few minutes!

Baked pears are fine for dessert, but try dusting them with sugar and spice before the baking. Team with coconut macaroons for a simple dessert.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

SCRIPTURE: Acts 16: 6-40.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Proverbs 31:10-31.

Business Woman

Lesson for March 23, 1952

THERE were no timetables and no maps on the ship that carried Paul from Troas to Samothrace and Neapolis. But even if there had been maps posted in the passengers' cabin, and even if they had had the words ASIA and EUROPE where they ought to have been, it is doubtful whether Paul or any of his party would have thought that as important as we think it is.

Dr. Foreman

For the Christian religion was now for the first time, so far as we know, leaping from the continent of its birth to the continent where it would have power for more than a thousand years. But Luke, writing Acts, does not even notice this fact. To educated people of that day, the name of the continent of "Europe" meant little or nothing. It was mostly populated by barbarians anyway.

The important world of that day was centered around the Mediterranean. Going into Macedonia from Troas was simply going from one province of the Roman Empire to another. Centuries went by before Christians realized what an epoch-making step this was

She Was at Prayer-Meeting

IF there were no maps, there were no Hotel Red Books, either. There was no way of wiring ahead for accommodations When Paul arrived in Philippi, a strange city, he did not look up the Travelers' Aid or the Chamber of Commerce; he hunted up the nearest prayer-meeting.

There he met and converted the woman named Lydia, the first European ever to become a Christian. She is in many ways a kind of sample of many and many a Christian after her. For one thing, she was a business woman, a seller of purple, that is, the purple dye which was so expensive and so much in demand in those days.

It is an interesting fact that while Christianity draws from every level of society, top to bottom, the first convert in all Europe was not a rich man, not a beggar, not a professional man, not a slave, but an independent, middle-class business woman.

Successful Salesman

CHRISTIANITY has always appealed to salesmen. They do not pretend to be the greatest people on earth, but they have always helped to make the world go 'round.

One of the most vigorous Christian organizations in America is the Gideons, made up entirely of traveling salesmen. It would be interesting to think what it is about the Christian religion that appeals especially to business people, but we must pass on.

Lydia, we note, must have been successful in her purple-dye business, since she had a home big enough to entertain the entire missionary party. Able, successful people, people who can go out against stiff competition and make good—the Christian church is well supplied with such persons. They have always been the backbone of the church

Then Lydia was also a successful woman. Some religions, such as Islam, appeal especially to men, and leave women out of the picture except in so far as they can be useful to men.

Christ, on the contrary, ever since the earliest days in Galilee has made an appeal to both men and women. Indeed, one of the greatest triumphs of Christianity has been what it has done for womankind.

If woman's lot over the world is better than it was 3,000 years ago, if women would rather live, if they had their choice, in Christian lands than where Christianity has never taken strong foothold, it is because of the kind of religion that Christianity is.

Open Heart, Open Home

FURTHERMORE and most important, Lydia devoted what she had to the service of Christ and his cause. She set her house at the disposal of Paul and his missionary friends, and we can well imagine that Lydia had a large part in later years, in sending those parcels to Paul in prison at Rome. How much the church owes to hospitable women!

A good church is one into which the women who are members carry the same hospitality that is their habit at home, not only opening their homes to ministers, missionaries, Christian workers, but making the church itself a home-away-from-home for the lonely.

Life without a woman's touch would be a dreary thing; and so would a womanless church.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

'Regular Habits' And Creative Skill

By Lawrence Gould

Will "regular habits" make you creative?

Answer: No, writes Dr. Edith A. Weisskopf in the Journal of Educational Psychology. We tend to stifle intellectual creativeness by urging our students to be industrious, cultivate regular habits of study and develop a controlled, critical attitude toward life and themselves. We try to prevent their realizing that creation is essentially spontaneous and instinctive and may be most apt to take place when we relax our controls and "let ourselves go." True, study and preparation must come first, but the creative process itself is a release from controls and inhibitions. Discipline alone will not induce it.

Do some of us sleep too much?

Answer: Yes. The extreme case is a partly physical and partly mental illness known as narcolepsy—a condition akin to or a form of epilepsy—in which the person may drop off to sleep against his will at the most inconvenient times and places. But otherwise normal people may use prolonged sleep as an escape from facing painful situations like the prospect of a tough day at the office—you're much less apt to "oversleep" when you're anticipating something pleasant. No two people need exactly the same amount of sleep, but if you "can never get enough," you probably have problems which you want to put off trying to solve.

Is Russia making scientific progress?

Answer: In some fields, yes, various scholars told the American Association for the Advancement of Science. In the field of mathematics, Russian scientists have published more advanced texts than have those of the United States, though these are "shot through with nationalism." Sociology, however, is not even recognized as a science: it is nothing but a propaganda technique for furthering Soviet theories. And as for the new Soviet genetics—which denies the known facts of heredity—it has not produced "a single new or original idea, either right or wrong." Freedom is the very air that science breathes.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Thoughts on Artificial Dentures

By Dr. James W. Barton

MOST INDIVIDUALS, when they first use artificial dentures or plates, hesitate to chew down hard on them as they fear it will make the gums sore. In a news release from the American Dental Association, Navy Captain Frank M. Kyes of the U.S. naval dental school, Bethesda, Md., states that dental patients using artificial dentures for the first time will be helped by closing the mouth and teeth and swallowing frequently. Such action will make the denture fit firmly.

Unfortunately many patients become impatient and discouraged because the dentures do not seem to fit perfectly the first time they are used. If they consult their dentist, he will, usually in a matter of a minute or two, smooth down the irritating part and give relief.

A questionnaire that was answered by thousands of dentists brought out the fact that patients wearing artificial dentures returned to their dentists an average of two and one-half times before their dentures were comfortable. Perhaps the further suggestions of Captain Kyes will be helpful and of interest to those wearing artificial dentures.

1. Push inward and upward when biting such foods as apples and raw carrots.

2. Try to chew with an up and down motion, avoiding side movements as much as possible.

3. Keep the tongue low and well forward in the mouth to steady and stabilize the lower denture. (The lower denture does not have the concave roof of the mouth to help hold it by suction as does the upper denture.)

Captain Kyes says that artificial dentures sometimes are unsuccessful because of physiologic changes in the patient. "One example of this is the effect of body weight loss upon the fit of dentures. When a patient loses 15 pounds of weight, he is not surprised when his clothes do not fit.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

Persons whose excess weight is over 30 pounds should not begin taking violent exercises.

Men and women have reached full maturity at the age of 30; there should be no further growth in height and weight.

Too much weight reduction is detrimental to the looks.

Too rapid weight reduction may cause weakness, difficulties of heart and other organs, and throw a serious strain on the system.

Getting rid of a little excess weight is worth taking the time and the trouble.

A reducing diet should furnish only a small amount of energy.

Why Does the Mantid Pray Is Old Question

Why does the "praying" mantid "pray"?

The prayerlike pose of this near relative of the cockroach is its normal position both for seizing prey and for defending itself. For their size, mantids are among the most predatory animals in existence, and they are also among the least known of the insects, according to Dr. Ashley B. Gurney, entomologist of the U S. department of agriculture. There are more than 1,500 species of mantids in the world, mostly tropical, he says. Only 19 are known in the United States, which is the northern fringe of the habitat of these strange little creatures.

One of the most notable features of mantids is their front legs, which bear sharp spines and fold in a remarkable hinged manner enabling the mantid to reach forward, seize a fly or some other insect, and bring it to its mouth. This is the true explanation for the seeming attitude of prayer. Mantids feed entirely on other animals, chiefly insects caught alive. Instances of small birds, lizards, or mice being eaten—after being enticed into the "arms raised in prayer"—have been reported, but some of these probably represent mistaken observation. There is no question, however, that a mature individual of many mantid species can handle any caterpillar, grasshopper, cockroach, or other large insect that comes within its range. Their appetites are enormous. An adult mantis has been known to eat ten cockroaches in less than three hours. Bees and wasps usually have no terrors for the insect, though occasionally a mantid is stung while trying to catch a wasp, and gives evidence of the injury.

"Miracle Drug" say SURIN Users

Pains of Arthritis, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Lumbago, Bursitis*— Relief Can Start In Minutes

There's no internal dosing with SURIN. Nothing to swallow and wait anxiously for relief. You simply apply SURIN right at the point of pain and blessed relief starts as penetration beneath the skin gets under way. Of course there's a reason for this wonder-working new external fast pain relief medicine.

It's methacholine, a recent chemical born of research in a great laboratory. It acts speedily to aid penetration of SURIN's pain-quelling ingredients. Methacholine also causes deeper, longer-lasting pain relief and increased speed-up of local blood supply.

Tested on chronic rheumatics in large university hospital it brought fast relief to 73% patients and in home-for-the-aged 77%. Totally different from old-fashioned rubs and liniments, modern SURIN brings faster relief, longer without burning or blistering; without unpleasant odor or grease. Simply smooth on SURIN at the point of pain and feel pain ease in minutes. Money-back at your drug store if SURIN doesn't relieve muscle pain faster and better than anything you've ever used. A generous jar costs $1.25. SURIN is not a cure for any of these conditions.*

Another way to Save with CLABBER GIRL

Here is a novel and economical way to stretch left-over ham into a lunch or dinner main dish . . . a real taste treat and so easy to prepare . . . Notice how Clabber Girl gives leavening that is 'just right' even when coarsening caraway seeds are used to spark up the flavor.

Biscuit:
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
2½ teaspoons Clabber Girl Baking Powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons caraway seed
6 tablespoons shortening
¾ cup milk

Ham Filling:
2 cups cooked, ground ham
¼ cup pickle relish
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
¼ cup gravy or brown cream sauce

BISCUIT: Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Mix in caraway seed. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse corn meal. Add milk, stir to make a soft dough that can be handled and formed into a ball. Transfer ball of dough onto a lightly floured board, knead until smooth. Roll out into a 9x12-inch rectangle. Spread with ham filling. Starting with the narrow end, roll like a jelly roll. Place on a greased baking sheet. Brush lightly with milk. Slash roll into six pieces cutting almost through roll. Turn each piece cut-side up Bake in a hot oven (450°F.) approximately 25 minutes or until well browned Serve with mushroom sauce.

HAM FILLING: Mix all ingredients together thoroughly Serves six.

Pound for pound, more people use more Clabber Girl than any other Baking Powder.

BOARD WORKS ON ROAD PLAN FOR HANCOCK CO.

All 16 townships were represented at the annual board of approval meeting held at the court house Wednesday. The representatives from the 16 township boards of trustees met with the county board of supervisors to review the 1952 proposed construction and improvement program on local roads in the county.

Approximately 36 miles of local roads were tentatively placed on the 1952 program and a detailed program will be annouced shortly by Hancock Co. Engineer Charles F. Merten.

Approximately nine miles of the 1951 local county road construction program were carried over into the 1952 program because of the bad weather and soil conditons. Most of these are already under contract and will be completed as soon as soil and weather conditions permit operation.

HANCOCK COUNTY RYP'S WIN AWARD

The Hancock County Rural Young People's club was named last week one of the winners of the Iowa Rural Young People's Assembly's annual standard goal awards

The award, A Certificate of Merit from the Assembly and the Iowa Agricultural Extension Service was presented at the annual assembly held at Ames March 14-16.

Catherine Cosgriff of Britt accepted the award on behalf of the Hancock County group. The Hancock County organization was cited for its outstanding program during 1951, and for its numerous community services. Many of the club members serve in their churches, 4-H clubs and other community groups.

Community activities sponsored by the Hancock County group included donations to the International Farm Youth Exchange Fund, helping organize 4-H Club meetings and assisting in other community gatherings.

TAKE NOTE OF COLORS, PROFESSIONAL RESULTS AND—

WIELD YOUR OWN PAINTBRUSH

Whether it's the living room wall, shower stall or furniture that needs a new look, you'll find today's paints have much to offer. The almost unbelievable color choice, quick drying, durability and ease of application make it more fun than ever to be your own decorator and painter.

Paint companies are selling much more than paint these days. They're selling a do-it-yourself philosophy, professional results, and hundreds upon hundreds of colors, tints, tones and shades in any finish from matte to high gloss.

Besides an elaborate sample book, they often as not supply detailed decorating tips and suggested color combinations With all this help, the American home maker adds another skill and finds it takes no time at all to bridge the gap from amateur to expert.

June Brown, home furnishing specialist of Iowa State College, takes us in for a close-up view of what's been happening in the paint industry.

Washable Finish

More and more paints with a washable rubberized finish are being put on the market, she explains. This means both durability and easier up-keep. The enamels are the most scrubbable of all. They're popular for shower stall, bathroom fixtures, kitchen cupboards, woodwork and the children's room—places you'll attack most often with soap and water.

The rubberized finish paints are almost odorless, dry in an hour or two and won't leave brush marks if you're moderately careful.

Although there's nothing new about the slate-like "black board" paint, it's now more usable in green than it was in the black. It has many possibilities for the youngsters' room, can be used like a blackboard.

Textured Effect

Textured and stippled effects call for special techniques. Least expensive way to texturing paint is in powder form. You add the water. Paint it on with a brush or roller. Go over it with a texturing roller, brush or steel wool to get the textured effect. Some folks take a short cut and roll it on with the texturing roller first try, adds Mrs. Brown.

For a stippled effect, go over the wall with a flat paint. Then while it's still wet, put on another coat of a different color. Right away, go over the wall with a stippler, a tool that will pick up some of the top paint so the underneath coat shows through.

You'll see new brushes and rollers on the market, says Mrs. Brown. There are inexpensive brushes with synthetic, non shed bristles and rollers that will hold a pint of paint inside the cylinder letting it out through holes onto a rubber or fabric sleeve as you roll it on. Only drawback—a pint of paint can be mghty heavy. An ordinary roller will pick up about a pint.

Nature's Colors

Effectively decorating a room with a picture window often means co-ordinating indoor with out door colors. This is part of the reason for a growing trend towards the use of colors found in nature— the tints and shades found in bark, rocks, and sky, leaves, sunset, and the soil and the accent colors of flowers.

Whatever the tint or tone you're looking for, you'll find it. If you don't see the color you want in a sample book, have it mixed up for you. Many paint stores offer just this service, will stir up exactly what you want in any finish.

FISH AND GAME LICENSES EXPIRE MARCH 31

Hunting, fishing, combination hunting and fishing licenses, and other licenses concerned with fish and game expire on March 31 New licenses are being mailed to authorized distributors and will be on sale April 1st. Licenses may be purchased from county recorders, all conservation officers, and from many sporting goods storse, boat liveries, banks and other businesses establishments.

The cost of resident hunting and resident fishing is $1.50 each. Combination hunting and fishing licenses cost $2.50 The licenses are in effect from April 1, 1952 to April 1, 1953.

Revenue from fish and game licenses is used to support the activities of the Division of Fish and Game of the Stae Conservation Commission. None of the funds or fish and game purposes comes from the general tax revenue.

TELEVISION DISCOVERS MAIN STREET

TV Industry Plans Grassroots Expansion

(This is the first of a series of three articles on the coming of a nationwide television service.)

The television industry is on the threshold of a vast new expansion program, a sweep across the grassroots of America It is ready to bring the glittering lights of Broadway, the dramas of Shakespeare and Shaw the impromptu debates of world statesmen onto the illuminated screens of homes in every section of the nation.

Television today is a regional service, confined mainly to the major population centers. But the way is being cleared by the government for television to become as much a household commodity as radio.

The foundation has been prepared. A chain of microwave radio relay towers and a set of coaxial cables now carry video signals coast to coast and into sixty major market areas. And science has devised a means of broadcasting these signals over a new section of the air waves, as well as those now in use, to the farmer, the rancher and the village miles removed from present TV stations.

Because of this scientific development, the government has proposed the licensing of nearly 2,000 new television stations. Towns like Broken Bow, Neb.; Elroy, Ariz.; and Bad Axe, Mich., might soon enjoy the same visual programs that millions watch today in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles.

Nationwide Service

In the opinion of Dr C. B. Jolliffe, vice president and technical director of the Radio Corporation of America, this scientific achievement can mean "the advent of a truly nationwide television service, a service that will provide the Main Streets of America with the same entertainment, education and information programs that more densely populated areas have known for several years."

In terms of specific programs, it means that comedians like Jimmy Durante, Martin and Lewis, Milton Berle, Bob Hope and Herb Shriner can become regular visitors to homes in villages, cities and even entire states where no video signal now reaches.

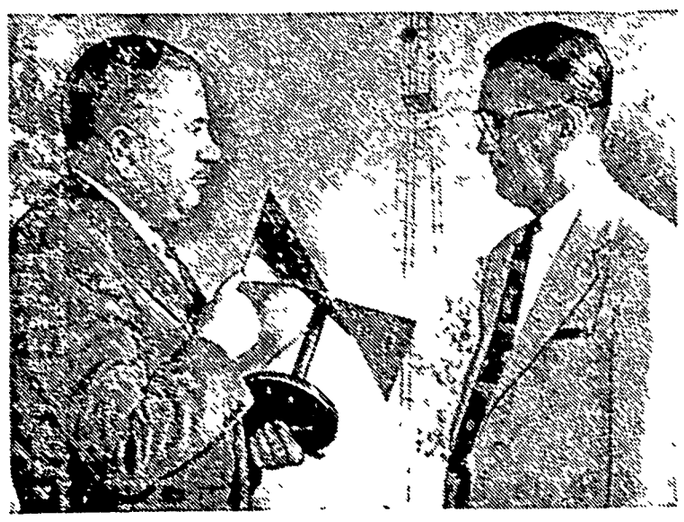
It can mean an intimate look at statesmen and politicans through such programs as "Meet the Press," "America's Forum Of The Air," and Edward R. Murrow's "See It Now." It can mean great drama through the "Television PlayHouse," and great music on various televised symphonies and operas, such as NBC's "Amahl And The Night Visitors." It can mean early evening entertainment for the children with "Howdy Doody" and "Kukla, Fran and Ollie."

And it can mean that all these programs will come forth on home screens with the same picture fidelity and clarity as in the established television centers of the nation. For there can be enough stations to bring a full strength video signal within range of nearly everyone.

The Frequency-Allocation plan for this dramatic expansion was developed by the Federal Communications Commission, which is the government's regulatory agency for all wireless services It tentatively pinpointed the location for each of nearly 2,000 stations as a first step toward offering TV stations licenses to these communities.

Pioneering Science

Behind this government action is a colorful tale of pioneering exploration by the scientist and engineers of a privately owned American industry. For years they probed into the mysterious upper regions of the radio spectrum — some scientists call it the "antarctic" of the air waves — and they determined that television signals could be transmitted successfully through this untapped region.



THIS IS IT! Frank M. Folsom (left), president of the Radio Corporation of America, points out a "Bow Tie" UHF receiving antenna to Wayne Coy, former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, during a visit to the experimental UHF station near Bridgeport, Conn.

This was their answer to the fear that has haunted the industry and the government ever since television began its post war expansion—the fear of overcrowding the air waves.

For television, like radio and other wireless services, requires channels in the air waves. If two stations using the same channels are near one another, their signals will conflict. That's why the FCC decided in 1948 to halt new station construction until more channels were available.

All the stations functioning today are confined to a relatively narrow band of the spectrum known as the Very High Frequency Range (V.H.F.) It has only twelve channels for telecasts, not enough to provide blanket coverage.

So the scientists went after the upper regions of radio space, the antarctic known as Ultra-High Frequency (U.H.F.) — and they uncovered a rich lode. Seventy channels which could handle UHF telecasts! Together with VHF this would provide enough room for everybody!

Ready for Field Tests

The bulk of this intensive research campaign was handled by scientists and engineers of the Radio Corporation of America, and its affiliate the National Broadcasting Company Even before the war, they had worked on transmissions in the UHF range, and by late 1949 they were ready to begin regular field tests.

Their selection of a site for the experiment was Bridgeport, Conn., 55 miles from New York City, a city with a population of just over 200,000. It is in the fringe reception area for television stations broadcasting out of New York. A UHF station here with special receiving antennas could pick up regular telecasts from station WNBT in New York and rebroadcast them to UHF sets in scattered homes in the area. Since the countryside is hilly, it produces the most difficult possible conditions for commercial broadcasting.

It was for these reasons that the first and only UHF station in the country now operating on a regular basis, KC2XAK, was located on a hill on Stratford, Conn., just outside of Bridgeport Designed and built by RCA, it started broadcasting Dec. 30, 1949, under the supervision of O. B. Hanson, NBC's vice president in charge of engineering. RCA built UHF receivers and UHF converters for present VHF sets and they were placed in 50 homes in the Bridgeport area. Reports, graphs and charts on performance were compiled and forwarded to the FCC and made available to the entire industry.

Basic Findings

Finally, after conclusive studies of UHF, the teams announced these findings:

1. Properly used and properly allocated, television reception on UHF can be just as clear and stable as on VHF. In some instances it is even better, for UHF pictures are not bothered by nearby x-ray equipment, auto ignitions, neon signs, or home appliances, which have been known to play hob with VHF pictures.

2. Present television sets can be readily adapted to receive both UHF and VHF telecasts. (RCA has already demonstrated a small, simple UHF converter which can be easily attached to present sets.)

3. Color television can be broadcast on UHF frequencies.

The FCC based its UHF plan largely on knowledge garnered from the field tests conducted at Bridgeport.

UHF is a new symbol of America's pioneering spirit. It is a key to a new era, an era when all of America will be bound together closer than ever before through a visual medium that brings people and events to life.

Does grassroots America want television? In the opinion of Dr. Jolliffe, it wants it just as much as anyone else.

"Make no mistake", he says, "Main Street is just as anxious for television as Broadway—perhaps more so. For Broadway has its shows and its lights. But for the living presence to be brought to the sitting room in a lonely farmhouse miles from the nearest city—that is truly pushing back the horizons of entertainment and education."

Large sections of Western, Central and Southern United States have no television. Fifteen states were caught in the "freeze" on TV station construction which was imposed by the Federal Communications Commission in 1948. A dozen others are being covered by a single station.

Many of these states, like North Dakota and Montana, cannot even pick up the video signals of neighboring states because the nearest stations are out of television range For millions of Americans television has been just something to read about in newspapers and magazines, or something to look at briefly on trips to the East or West Coasts

Now this pattern of regional television is on the verge of abolition Like the capillaries in the human body, video signals will soon begin coursing from the main channels of the visual broadcast industry into the remotest regions of the nation. The people of Cut Bank and Deer Lodge, Mont., may soon have the opportunity to see national network television shows — and on their own stations, not those of neighboring communities.

Glassblowers' Craft Survives Despite Iron-Lung Machines

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Czech glassblowers, expelled from their Bohemian homeland after World War II, are reported to be among the best dollar earners in the United States Zone of Western Germany.

They are proof that their ancient and respected craft of glassblowing still flourishes.

Iron-lunged machine have taken over the mass production of blown glassware and in one hour can turn out several thousand bottles and flasks Electric light bulbs are now made entirely by machine

Still big business, however, is glassware that is "handblown," to use a trade expression meaning blown by human lungs.

SHORT STORY

Joe Gets Into Trouble

By M. J. Collins

IT was about six-thirty and Jenny and I were eating supper. The phone had rung several times but, it being a rural line with nine parties on it we didn't even bother to listen.

3-Minute Fiction

"That was our ring!" Jenny suddenly exclaimed I answered the phone.

"Your Uncle Joe went to town this morning and he ain't back." It was Aunt Martha and she sounded a bit worried.

"Maybe he had trouble with his car. What was he in town for?"

"Took four fat hogs to market."

"Perhaps you should have gone with him."

"The last time he took pigs to the market, they didn't want to stay in the trailer so he made me get in with them and if you think that's a nice way for a woman to ride to town—I don't!"

Hardly had I hung up the receiver when Aunt Martha's number rang. I stuck my hand over the mouthpiece and listened. It was the police department and Uncle Joe was in jail. One of the constables had found him trying to open the door of his car, the only trouble was that Uncle Joe insisted the radiator was the door, so he was locked up for safety's sake. I hung up and a short time later she phoned and told me her trouble.

By that time Uncle Joe had a grin a mile wide—and a gleam in his eyes.

"Now don't get so excited," I soothed, "I'll be right over."

The miscreant was stretched out in a stupor when the officer opened the cell door.

"Huh!" Aunt Martha sniffed, "The nerve! You can still smell the stuff." It boded no good for Uncle Joe.

WHEN we reached their place I helped put the still groggy Uncle Joe to bed.

Uncle Joe was just beginning to be himself.

"Oh, my head!" he groaned, "my poor head." He raised himself up on his elbows. "Did he get away?"

"Did who get away?" Aunt Martha asked, belligerently.

Uncle Joe ignored her. "I parked our car down near the lakeshore, I wasn't paying a nickle to park on the main street, and when I was comin' back across the short-cut, you know where it's all growed up with brambles and bushes, someone came up right smart behind and knocked me out I think he used a bottle" He shook his head.

"Huh! A fine way to account for that smell!" Aunt Martha snorted.

"Did he git my money?" He suddenly remembered it.

"Well, you haven't got it if that's what you mean." Aunt Martha informed him tartly "Here, you get back into bed, you're wobbly, and let me have a look at your head."

Still growling and protesting he did as he was bid.

"Now you, Joe Quinn, stay quiet!" She wagged a finger under his nose. "I'll get something for your bump and your supper also."

Aunt Martha grinned at me as we went out to the kitchen. A car pulled up by the door.

"Good heavens!" she cried with dismay, "It's Mr. Morrison, the minister! Everything is in a mess—and the condition Joe's in—! You keep mum, Joe Quinn, I'll shut the door and he won't know anything about you."

"I won't stay quiet," Uncle Joe cried, "You can't treat me like a culprit. C'mon in!" Uncle Joe yelled at the top of his voice.

"Well, Joe, you certainly had a spot of trouble," Mr. Morrison said when he came into the room. "That bottle must have been strong stuff."

Aunt Martha gasped.

Mr. Morrison dug into his pocket and brought out a pocketbook.

"Where'd you get that?"

"Well, Joe, the man that hit you with that bottle and robbed you had a very bad accident and I was called. I'm glad to be a help to both of you," he said handing him his pocketbook.

By that time Uncle Joe had a grin a mile wide, all his money was intact and I could tell from the gleam in his eyes that Aunt Martha would have to dance attendance on him to get back in his good graces.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Who Comes First?

"I AM in desperate trouble and want you to help me," says Estrella Longmans, from Minneapolis. "Sam, my husband, was elected to a state office this week, and that just seems the last straw! Because I know he won't be satisfied with this job, he says openly that in a year or two he wants to climb higher, and I just feel that I can't face it.

"We have two sons, doing well in high school, and a daughter who is making her first bow in social life I have devoted every effort of my life to their welfare, and Sam's of course, and this change will upset their lives more than it will mine. Jill is a lovely girl, talented and much liked, but she is quiet and shy, and I've been building her up among the young folks and my friends—all for nothing now!

Plans All Ruined

"Then my home. We have a ten-room corner house, double garage, lovely garden, in one of the long-settled nice quarters of the city. Every chair and rug in this place means something to me, every room is papered and curtained by my choice; I have planned for Jill's room, built on a dining room big enough for dancing, changed the old breakfast room into a study for Sam—I wish now I hadn't; he got political ideas the minute he had a place in which to think!

"Already he has put our home on the market for rent; already half his talk is political personalities. I've got to be nice to this dull man or that; I've got to go with him to other cities to meetings. I hate it all, and Jill does, too, and we feel bewildered and irritated at being switched about this way. Then there are my mother and two married sisters who live here, and of course clubs, shops, market, doctor, dentist; all the affiliations one makes after 43 years of living in one place. I love Sam, and am proud of him, but really there are limits.

"... a lovely girl ..."

"Now to my question. I want Sam to go his political way, leaving me here with the children. When Larry is ready for college, and Philip a junior there, and when Jill is perhaps engaged, then I will feel free to do anything he likes—even go to Washington, a crowded city that I haven't liked at all on short visits.

"Sam wants us to pull up stakes and go where he goes. That means a hotel, for awhile. A hotel with three growing children! Then a house, or rather an apartment, with all the furniture strange except what we carry in. All the while, in the background, will be the conviction that presently we will be on the move again. And all the while political talk! Now, which of us is right?"

In Reply

Dear Estrella, I say in reply, it is a little late in the day to ask that question If your heart doesn't want to accompany this smart man of yours; if your daughter's dates for movies and dances, and your chairs and your double garage really count at this point, you are lacking in something that most of us as wives possess as a matter of course, and wouldn't be without. It must amaze a brilliant and ambitious man, who achieves a success that would put 99 women out of every 100 wild with pride and joy, when the wife of his bosom talks of the engagements of a 19-year-old girl, two schoolboys—a new dining room and some wallpaper!

Sam is going to have a real chance to serve his country, to take his honesty and energy and loyalty to the capital, to increase his children's educational advantages as no schools could! And here is the dear little woman, in good old Victorian style, pettishly jerking her curled little head, and declaring that those nasty men with their nasty politics have no interest for her!

You belong to another generation, Estrella. I have an idea that the last great war annoyed you on the score of butter and motor gas, that you were one of the women who stood in line for hours—no, not to donate blood, but to get one rationed pair of nylon stockings.

How do we know what's good for our children? Perhaps pulling them out of a rut will be as good for them as keeping them in it. Possibly your sons are keeping their fingers crossed in desire for the day when Mom and Pop move out and they go over to Aunt Mag for the rest of the term. Possibly Jill, who is shy and lonely at 19, will develop new social graces in a new atmosphere. Who are you to decide that any course you take—especially this one, which means loyal support of your husband's career—is going either to make or break your family?

Why AC Electric Iron Not Used with DC

Q: I have an electric iron marked "For AC only." Why won't such an iron heat up just as well on direct current?

A: The iron would heat up on DC, but the thermostat which regulates its temperature would not work properly. The thermostat includes a pair of contacts which open when the desired temperature is reached and close, to turn the current on again, as more heat is needed. With alternating current, these contacts do not need to open more than about one five-hundredth of an inch. On direct current, however, the current would arc across the contacts. Unless they were opened at least 3/8ths of an inch, the arcing would continue and the current would not be shut off. With AC the direction of the current alternates 60 times a second, so it is actually at zero 120 times each second.

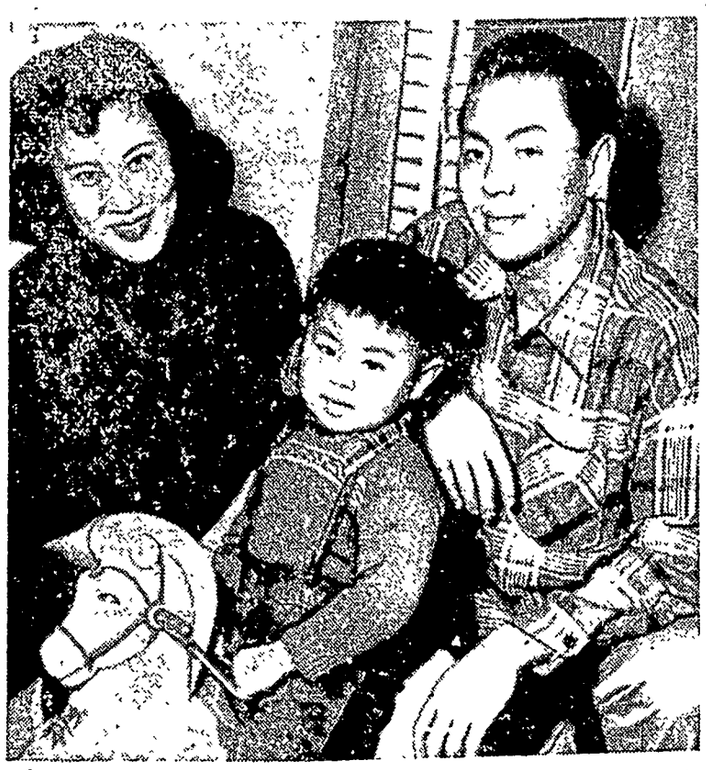
HURRY GIRLS, BARGAINS! . . . In Brooklyn, New York, the bargain basement fullbacks (women to you) had a field day recently as Loeser's department store held a going-out-of-business sale. Here's a view of the mobs that jammed the store and the street outside the store. The police and fire department had to be called in to prevent the ladies from injuring each other in their eagerness to get to the counters where the bargains were on sale. There is something about a bargain that the woman shopper cannot resist—and to be fair to the ladies, we'll admit we see a few male heads in that pushing throng. We don't blame them—the way prices have been.

BACK TO JOB, COMPLETELY CLEARED . . . In New York City, career diplomat John Carter Vincent (right), who has been accused of being pro-Communist time and again by Senator Joseph McCarthy, Republican of Wisconsin, and active ex-Communist, Louis Budenz, former editor of the Communist newspaper, The Daily Worker, sails aboard the liner, S.S. Constitution. Mr. Vincent is returning to his post in Tangier, Morocco. The state department has announced that Vincent has been completely cleared of all charges made against him by political opponents of the department. He will probably face other loyalty courts, despite lack of evidence against him.



FAITH REVIVED . . . The faith, which he lost when he was voted out of his home in south San Francisco, was revived somewhat by a flood of offers of homes in other cities to the family of Sing Sheng, Chinese-American. Their neighbors in San Francisco objected to Chinese living in the neighborhood, because, they complained it would lower property values. Trusting in democracy and Americanism, Sing Sheng put his residence there to a vote and lost—on the eve of Brotherhood Week.

GAS-GERM PROOF . . . This is the army's new airtight, watercooled suit, designed to protect a soldier against both poison gas and biological (germ) warfare. The suit is superior to former suits in that it is more resistant to new gases.

But the law says pretty Peggy made book on the races and took bets. And here you see her talking the charge over with her attorney, Marie A. Beary, who also is not so difficult to look upon. The two women are awaiting the turn of events and justice outside the felony courtroom in Ridgewood. That's not a racing form in their hands.

HOME AGAIN . . . Lois Weiland has returned to her Pittsburgh home after running away from her scheduled marriage on Valentine's day to Edward Weigner. "It just dawned on me I couldn't marry him," she explained.

Two Teams in Each League Favored

By GRANTLAND RICE

IT IS GENERALLY conceded in the two big leagues that Cleveland and New York will settle the A.L. pennant and the New York and Brooklyn will take over the N.L. flag.

Briefly, this means Yankees, Indians, Giants and Dodgers, leaving the other 12 teams to supply any upset or challenge that may take place—and probably will.

Grantland Rice

What teams from the two leagues may break into the spring and summer arguments, outside of the four mentioned?

Right now I would suggest Eddie Stanky's Cardinals in the Nationals plus the erratic Phillies.

From this fog-ridden lookout, I can't quite see the Braves, Reds, Cubs or Pirates. One of these latter four teams might erupt and play a lot of baseball—but I doubt it. The Cardinals might come on with a rush under Stanky's drive, Stan Musial's great ability and the promise of good pitching Sawyer should get his somnolent Phillies hustling again, if it can be done.

So you can see four good teams in the National League and four others that don't look too hot.

Stanky and his Cardinals will be one of the season's early features If they stay up around baseball's polite society they will continue to be a feature. It's the standing of the clubs that tells most of the story after the first few weeks. Baseball can pack most of its lore into two details—the standing of the clubs and the box score.

These two sections carry most of the answers. In the National League Sawyer's Phillies will have a rougher journey than the Cardinals, due largely to uncertain pitching.

The American League

The season's outlook for more widespread hilarity is brighter in the A.L.

This ever-winning league has the Indians and Yankees as the two chief targets. Both will be good. The Tigers with Art Houtteman back should move up again. No one can say now what the Red Sox will be minus Bobby Doerr and Ted Williams, two star ballplayers.

You don't fill gaps like this with straw men. The Red Sox must get more consistent pitching than they have drawn so far. Maurice McDermott should be due by now to prove his high place.

But one of the main turns in the American League should belong to the White Sox and Athletics. Both teams were much stronger last season than either had been in some time Both kept throwing the poisoned harpoon into various leaders. Both kept bowling over Yankees, Indians and Red Sox. They look even better this spring, or the spring that will soon meet us around the greener corner.

Bucky Harris and his Senators are unknown quantities, but you will soon see the dust kicked up by Hornsby and Veeck of the Browns.

No one knows just what sort of an act the Browns will put on this season, but it should be something worth looking at. Any team that has a smart, hustling owner, a smart, hustling manager and quite a number of young legs and young arms should be heard from often enough

So at this spot the American League race should carry more general interest than the National. Maybe it won't. Extremely odd things can happen in six months of baseball.

20 Year Race

Twenty years ago a kid left Newport, Kentucky, to try his luck in the saddle His name was Eddie Arcaro. Twenty years later he is still riding as hard and battling as furiously as he ever did against both age and youth. Riding again at Santa Anita, Arcaro has Bill Shoemaker, the 20-year-old Texan, competing on one side of the big run and Johnny Longden, the veteran, on another

The three have dominated Santa Anita's meeting all the way.

Up to a few days ago, Arcaro, Shoemaker and Longden were only a race apart.

But the Newport Flyer had one big edge. Of the 18 big stakes run so far Arcaro had won seven. He had beaten Next Move with Special Touch. He had whipped Hill Gail with Windy City II and he had won the rich Maturity with Intent.

"It's always a battle," Eddie said recently "It was a tough battle when I first came out 20 years ago. Through the years it got to e no easier—Lawrin, Whirlaway, Hoop Jr., Citation and other winners but big stakes are coming at you all the time. These are the ones you must win.

"Riding a horse in a race," Eddie continued, "is largely a matter of instinct. You can plan out a few things ahead, but not many. There are any number of times when you must make up your mind in a split-second—in a flash."

Arcaro is deadly in a big stake. He seems to bring all his magnificent concentration into complete focus on the job. In 1948 his mounts earned $1,082,585 in stakes and feature races alone. His target is usually $1,000,000 or thereabouts, which is more than enough to take good care of his wife, Ruth, and their two children.

HIGHER THAN IN 1945

is paying TAXES
277%
HIGHER THAN IN 1940

THERE ARE MANY FACTORS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE 81% INCREASE IN THE COMPLETE COST OF TELEPHONE SERVICE SINCE 1940

YOU perhaps have heard that employees wages are the main reason for the increases in your telephone bill. This is not true . . . for the additional money paid to our employees is only a part of the picture.

The money our employees now make is not out of line with the national cost of living average. Wages paid by Central Iowa are up 82% . . . BUT the taxes we pay are up 277%, and the taxes YOU pay on your telephone service are up 314%. In addition, the materials we use are up around 100%.

It's for these reasons that we say—don't blame your higher telephone bills on the salaries that we pay the folks working for us. We're proud of the work they do, and we know they deserve wages that will enable them to participate fully in the good things of life in their community.

EVERY COMMUNITY SERVED IS GETTING IMPROVED SERVICE

Each customer wants and expects a high quality of service from the telephone company that serves him and his community. To assure you of this type of service Central Iowa is investing tremendous amounts of money in plant modernization and expansion. During the past 10 years the company has invested nearly 3 million dollars in an effort to give you the best possible service, both now and in the future.

Hancock Co. Memorial Hospital Contract Let

LEGION DREAM COMES TO PASS

Cost Of Project To Be Nearly $500,000

The board of trustees let contracts for the Hancock County Memorial Hospital at Britt Thursday for a total of $399,628.

There were 15 bidders for the general contract which was awarded to James Thompson & Son of Ames for $246,600.

The contract for plumbing and heating went to Gadbury Plumbing & Heating, Fort Dodge for $111,885.

The electrical contract was awarded to the Algona Electric Co., of Algona for $33,703.

Elevator Costs $7,440

Contract for the elevator was let. to the R. & O. Elevator Co, Minneapolis, for $7,440.

The contract for the kitchen and X-ray equipment will not be let for a few days.

Hancock County voters in 1946 favored a $100,000 bond issue for the construction of this hospital, a project which was sponsored by the American Legion.

James and Ross Kent, farmers near Britt, gave $40,000 for the building on condition that $85,000 be raised in the community. This was done and the federal government allowed approximately $156,000, making a total of $464,000 that has been raised for the hospital.

More To Be Raised

It was expected another $50-000 will be raised within the next 20 days to fulfill all necessary arrangements

Members of the board of trustees include E. L. Buck, chairman; Oscar Johnson, Kanawha; Charles Merten, county engineer, Garner; Mrs. Lester Stille Klemme; P. J. Kirkpatrick, Crystal Laka; Rufus Welter, Corwith; and Herbert Porter, Britt.

The hospital will be built on Highway 18 facing the old athletic field. Charles Altfillish Decorah, is architect.

The contractor stated that preliminary work will start within the next 30 days.

IOWA SAFETY CONGRESS

You've heard of the man who, when his house was burning down, threw the family dishes out of the window, then carried a mattress outside and laid it gently on the ground.

Sounds silly, but normal, intelligent reactions are easily swept away in the sudden confusion of fire in the home.

A plan of action, quietly thought out, then forged into the mind with practice drills is wise preparation against dangerous panic in fire.

Sit down with your family and discuss a general plan. Make sure each member knows where to go and what to do in case of fire in the home.

Then drill that plan. Drill especially for the sake of the children. Drill for fire.

It's a state law in Iowa that all schools of two or more stories must conduct at least one fire exit drill each month. Make that law a rule in your home.

GARNER WOMAN CANDIDATE FOR CLERK'S OFFICE

I, Doris Young, am annoucing my candidacy for the office of Clerk of Court for Hancock Co.

I was born at Miller, Iowa August 19, 1914, the daughter of Albert and Nora Nonnweiler, went through the Miller Independent Schools and graduated from the Garner High School with the class of 1931, having completed the commercial course.

After my marriage to Homer Dale Young, we set up housekeeping in Garner and became parents of three daughters. Janice- a senior in high school, Beverly, a sophmore and Barbara in the third grade. After the death of my husband in World War II the children and I continued living in Garner, and became active in community affairs. We are members of the First Methodist Church and take an active part in its organizations.

I belong to the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliaries, have worked with the Girl Scouts for a number of years, both as a Troop Leader and helper. I belong to the National Chapter of "Gold Star Wives." Janice and Beverly belong to the Senior Girl Scouts and the Order of Rainbow for Girls. Barbara is a Brownie Scout.

Your support will be very much appreciated and if elected I assure you I will do my best to fill the office.

SILO BEST PLACE NOW FOR WET CORN

May Make Either Ear Or Shelled Corn Silage

It still isn't too late to turn soft corn into top-grade feed.

It might be too late to begin planning now for corn dryers to handle high moisture corn, but C. H. VanVlack, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College, says there are 2 ways still open to save soft corn.

The two methods are ear corn silage of shelled corn silage. But the specialist warns that fast approaching warm weather will soon rule out these methods.

Ear corn silage is made similar to regular silage. Run the ear corn through a regular ensilage cutter or ear corn chopper. Cut it fine and pack well to keep out the air.

Small Silo Best

Then add enough water to bring moisture content up to 50 percent—or even a little higher. This is done best by sprinkling while filling the silo, so the water will be applied evenly.

A small diameter silo is best, since it will be holding a more concentrated feed than regular corn silage, according to VanVlack. A bushel of ear corn silage takes about the same space as a bushel of regular ear corn.

A silo 8 feet by 8 feet is a practical size, says the engineer. It will hold a little over 150 bushels of ear corn silage. If planning to use temporary silos of the snow-fence type, reinforce them with No. 9 wire hoops. The double loops work best when placed every 10 inches.

Must Be Fed Fast

Feed off at least 3 inches of silage a day in warm weather—which is about 5 bushels of ear corn in a silo 8 feet in diameter, says the specialist. This is the only way to keep ahead of surface spoilage.

Shelled corn silage is made similiar to ear corn silage, but the specialist cautions against corn swelling. This swelling may cause high pressures that will burst a silo, but the wetter the corn being ensiled, the less this hazard becomes.

If using a temporary silo for shelled corn, reinforce it the same as you would for ear corn silage. A trench or pit silo is satisfactory for storing shelled corn silage.

4-H FUN NITE MARCH 29

The Hancock County 4-H Girls and Boys officers have been planning the annual 4-H Fun Nite which will be held at the Garner High School Gym on Saturday evening, March 29th.

The program will start at 7:45 with a movie. The remainder of the evening will be used for the entire 4-H family playing games.

Beside the 4-H girls and boys, the families and friends of our 4-H members are encouraged to attend and have fun too.

THE FARM OUTLOOK

By Paul Henderson, County Extension Director

Two uncertainties face farmers with corn to sell these days. The first is whether their corn will stay in condition when the warm weather comes; the second concerns what will happen to the corn market.

High moisture corn continues a problem. Moisture content of some corn is higher than it was last fall. One of these warm spring days some farmers are going to wake up and find they have cribs of rotten corn.

There is much more uncertainty about the future trend of the corn market. Francis A. Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist, says we know that there is less corn than a year ago—and more livestock. Yet there is no sure way of making price forecasts under present conditions.

Test Corn For Moisture

Farmers can remove much of this uncertainty by testing the moisture content of their corn. County PMA offices have probes available for loan to use in collecting samples for testing. Agricultural engineers say that corn testing over 25% won't dry out by natural means.

In years past, when the corn crop was small, the high price point usually came before the warm weather, Kutish points out. It was years after a large corn crop that prices usually did not reach their high point until hot weather.

Heavy marketings of wet corn have helped push down the corn market this winter. Kutish believes some price recovery is likely after this wet corn has been moved out of the way.

Big Canadian Wheat Supply

But offsetting this to some extent is the big supply of feed wheat and other small grains piled up in Canada. As soon as the ice melts, this grain will be moving over the great lakes to the United States, especially the eastern part which normally buys grain from the Corn Belt.

As the spring progress, the corn market will reflect changes in weather conditions. The farther we get into the summer, the more the market will be a "scenery market."

Kutish sees two choices for a corn marketing policy: If farmers favor an early scale, it may be made after the price has made a moderate recovery from the wet corn depressed price depths; or, the corn may be held until late summer if a farmer wants to gamble on any crop scare markets that might develop.

Farm Machinery Outlook

The farm machinery situation has changed in the last few months. Demand by farmers for new machinery has not been as great as the machinery industry anticipated. And the defense program has been stretched out, making more steel and other metals available for civilian use. The result: Farm machinery is not going to be as tight as forcast last summer — inventories in the industries hands and production on the way will be ample to meet 1952 farm needs.

All eighth grade pupils are expected to take this examination and all seventh grade students may take it but are not required to take it. No grades will be recorded in 7th grade tests but same will be worked out for the group in the usual statistical materials.

Says Deadline Near For Farm Worksheet

Hancock County PMA Chairman advised Hancock County farmers that the 1952 farm worksheet must be signed by April 1st in order to participate in the 1952 agricultural conservation program.

The only exemption is for those landlords and tenants acquiring an interest in a farm after March 1, 1952. These farmers may sign later but must do so within 30 days from the date of acquiring an interest in the farm.

Hancock Mutual Group to Meet

The Hancock Mutual Insurance Association held its 63rd annual meeting Tuesday at the I.O.O.F. hall in Garner, according to announcement made by Orville Maben, secretary of the association. Directors were elected and annual reports read.

Soon after the adjournment of the annual meeting, Secretary Maben left for Des Moines to attend the 200th annual anniversary observance of the beginning of mutual insurance in the U. S. The observance was held on the evening of March 25.

Jimmy Has Birthday

Jimmy, son of Mr. and Mrs John Clements was 8 years old Tuesday, March 25. In honor of the event his mother served a nice supper and had as guests Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Pavey and Carol Ann Pavey.

Engineer Hired

Ralph H. Wallace of Mason City has been appointed engineer to make a preliminary survey and report to the board of supervisors on the extension of outlet on Hancock Co. drainage district No. 151, petitioned for by Florence Eenhuis et al.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

Consider the man we will call H. V. Tone. His was the presence and poise of success, his the full-cut figure of business, his the vigor and assurance of the prime years. A prosperous citizen of a prosperous Iowa town, Tone's every quality seemed to beckon the good life. Hardly, you would say, was H. V. Tone the kind of man who would die in the mud.

But die in the mud he did.

For far beyond the knowledge of concerns of H. V. Tone, a dirt road wandered around the country to slide down a steep hill and stumble onto the main highway at the point of a curve.

One late March morning, a warm sun turned the dirt road to mud. From along its slope it began to "bleed" a plasma-like mixture of water and thin mud onto the highway curve.

H. V. Tone was miles away, sitting in an office, when this began to happen but, you might say, he had begun to die.

For shortly after lunch, Tone decided to solve a business problem by driving to a neighboring town. The lightness of spring and the power of his car drew Tone into excessive speed that seemed to match the spirit of the day and his own spirit.

And, when he approached a certain curve, the little dirt road was waiting for him, its light seepage spread treacherously on the highway.

Tone's car slid straight out of the curve and plowed into a muddy bank like a maddened animal trying to dig a burrow.

No, Tone was hardly the man you would expect to die in the mud,, but then, you must expect anything on the highway.

First Day Of Spring

Spring officially arrived at 9:14 a. m. Thursday, March 20th this year. It doesn't look very much like spring with snow drifts piled high here in North Iowa.

"I don't look TOO devastating, do I?"

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Lurid Tales

SOMETIMES a man goes out of his way to ruin his marriage and his life.

Evidently Elbert Klinger, of Spokane, is such a man. He has been married for 11 months to Sally, 22 years old, who says rather pathetically, "I always kept myself clean and pure in my body and in my mind, for my marriage, and I thought El did, too. But since we've been married he's shocked me and hurt me so that I'm seriously thinking of going back to my mother in Oakland, California.

"Elbert is steady, generous, he is the most good-natured man I ever knew, he is popular, and considered highly by his firm. He is 10 years older than I am, and I have always looked up to him as my stepfather's closest friend, but his boasting about the experiences he has had with women really makes me feel sick.

Dreads Nights

"I have come really to dread the nights, when he amuses himself with telling me stories about girls who have been in love with him; he says he has a letter from a high school girl of 16 that could have put him into jail if her parents had ever got hold of it. He talks of women in the camp in California where he was a training sergeant for three years, using terms for bad houses that I never heard before, and for the women in them, too. No matter how affectionate or how close to him I feel this mood of his freezes me completely, and I want to go away and not ever see him again.

"El finds this very funny. He calls me a Puritan and says he wants me to grow up. And all the time I know that if I ever had had a serious affair with a man, which I did not, before marriage, he would be the first to be horrified; he is jealous, and he never would let me hear the end of it. In six months I will have a child, but El has spoiled what should be the happy time of waiting for my baby by hints that if it is a boy he is to be initiated into the coarser side of life while still in his teens and taught to drink and to 'handle women.' I have cried myself sick over all this, but I don't let Elbert see my tears, and my asking him please to spare me these details of his past only seem to spur him on. I must add that I know and love his mother, and that nothing he ever did or she ever told me of him previously gave me a hint of this side of his life. Do advise me, I am so terribly unhappy!"

He's Lying

Well, to begin with, Sally, Elbert is making up a lot of this. A man can't go to the age of 30, winning the respect of his mother and his friends and business associates, and at the same time entering upon heartless and dishonorable relationships with all sorts of women.

That he wasn't completely inexperienced when he married you is probable Men don't have to turn to the unfortunates of the lowest type for favors nowadays, and if what one hears of college years is true, and I don't believe all of it by any means, purity is rather the exception than the rule. Living as I have for 20 years in a town famous for its co-educational college I would discount about 80 per cent of that generalization, but there certainly is left a margin of truth. Many college affairs are those of genuine affection, prompted by youth and propinquity and freedom, and in those cases one understands, even if one does not condone. The disruption that war inevitably brings to young lives is another reason for today's comparative laxity.

But any man who invents stories of tremendous conquests, who dwells fondly on their memories, and who tortures a young loving wife with disgusting details of these affairs, is really not a man, but an unreliable, vain, rather pitiful adolescent. Neither in manners, mind nor heart is he adult, and your one hope is that he will someday be as ashamed of himself as you are. Ask him a year from now if he would like his baby daughter to marry a man like her father.

Keep up a steady barricade of prayer for his better behavior, and implement it with laughter.

Meet his tales with obviously untrue accounts of your own adventures with movie stars, visiting oriental princes, New York millionaires. Say amusedly, "If you're going to be silly, El, with all this high-school stuff, so am I!"

Ask his friends innocently if they knew Elbert was such a lady-killer Did Bill know that perfectly beautiful married woman, right here in town, who said she was going to kill herself for Elbert?

Milan Mother Prize-Winning Cook at State and County Fairs

All little girls love to play with ribbons—and young Janice Lynn Gittings is no exception. These are pretty special ribbons—won by her mother, prize cook Mrs. Paul E. Gittings from Milan, Ill.

Last year alone Mrs. Gittings won 17 awards at the Mississippi Valley Fair, 8 at the Rock Island County Fair, 15 at the Cambridge Fair—and 9 at the State Fair! Like so many prize-winning cooks, Mrs. Gittings uses Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast. "It's wonderful," she says, "so fast rising—and so very easy to use."

All during Lent serve plenty of yeast-raised goodies—such a delicious way to brighten up your Lenten meals! They're wholesome and nourishing for your family, too. When you bake at home, use yeast. Use the best yeast you can buy—Fleischmann's Active Dry! It's always dependable—guaranteed fresher and faster rising or double your money back. For grand results every time, get Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast.

1951 Broke Records In National Parks

U. S. rangers have closed their books on the greatest travel year in the history of America's national parks.

From Maine to Alaska and Hawaii, more than 36,700,000 people—one in every four Americans—visited historic shrines and saw majestic scenery that they themselves own as part of the far-flung national park system. The figure broke the 1950 record by nearly four million.

Uncle Sam's public park domain—mountains and monuments, canyons and caves—embraces more land than the combined area of Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Delaware and half of New Jersey. Half of the total is in 28 National Parks; the remainder in 175 National Monuments, historical sites, battlefields, and memorials. National forests, ten times as big, are not included.

Yellowstone is the largest National Park A fantastic land of geysers, hot springs, mud volcanoes, waterfalls, mountains, and forests, it sprawls across more than two million acres of Wyoming, Montana, and Idaho

"Miracle Drug" say SURIN Users

Pains of Arthritis, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Lumbago, Bursitis* Relief Can Start In Minutes

There's no internal dosing with SURIN. Nothing to swallow and wait anxiously for relief. You simply apply SURIN right at the point of pain and blessed relief starts as penetration beneath the skin gets under way. Of course there's a reason for this wonder-working new external fast pain relief medicine.

It's methacholine, a recent chemical born of research in a great laboratory. It acts speedily to aid penetration of SURIN's pain-quelling ingredients. Methacholine also causes deeper, longer-lasting pain relief and increased speed-up of local blood supply.

Tested on chronic rheumatics in large university hospital it brought fast relief to 73% patients and in home-for-the-aged 77%. Totally different from old-fashioned rubs and liniments, modern SURIN brings faster relief, longer without burning or blistering; without unpleasant odor or grease. Simply smooth on SURIN at the point of pain and feel pain ease in minutes. Money-back at your drug store if SURIN doesn't relieve muscle pain faster and better than anything you've ever used. A generous jar costs $1.25. SURIN is not a cure for any of these conditions.*

Delicious Rolls

WHEN YOU BAKE rolls and serve them to the great delight of your family, you do much more than add an appetizing accompaniment to the menu.

You add to the cozy comfort of the kitchen with roll baking, and what is, perhaps, most important: you give the menfolk and children rich memories of wonderful fragrance and delicious eating they can never forget.

Modern methods take the guesswork out of yeast baking and guarantee results when directions are followed.

Hot Cross Buns
(Makes 24)

- ¾ cup milk
- ¾ cup sugar
- 1¼ teaspoons salt
- 6 tablespoons shortening
- ¾ cup warm, not hot water
- 2 packages or cakes yeast, active dry or compressed
- 3 eggs, beaten
- 6 cups sifted enriched flour
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 cup currants or chopped raisins

*If using compressed yeast, use lukewarm water.

Scald milk. Stir in sugar, salt and shortening. Measure water into mixing bowl. Sprinkle or crumble in yeast. Stir until dissolved. Add lukewarm milk mixture and eggs. Mix sifted flour with cinnamon and currants or raisins. Stir ½ of the flour mixture into the yeast mixture. Beat until smooth. Add and stir in remaining flour. Turn dough out on floured board. Knead 8 to 10 minutes or until dough is elastic and does not stick to the board. Place in a greased bowl and brush top with melted butter or substitute. Cover with a cloth. Let rise in a warm place until doubled in bulk for about one hour and 20 minutes. Punch down, pull sides into center, place on a lightly floured board. Divide dough in half. Form each half into a roll about 10 inches long Cut into 13 even pieces. Shape each piece into a small ball by tucking edges under the fingers. Place in a greased 9-inch round pan, 13 buns to each. Cut a cross in each bun with a sharp knife. Brush with melted butter. Cover with a warm cloth. Let rise in a warm place, free from a draft, until doubled in bulk. Bake in a hot (425°F.) oven for 20 minutes. Fill cross in top with confectioners' sugar frosting.

Here are some very light, though rich, rolls which are topped with almonds and sugar to give a crunchy topping. Thorough beating replaces kneading in this recipe:

Almond Puffs
(Makes 12 large)

- ½ cup lukewarm milk
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 package or cake yeast, active dry or compressed
- ¼ cup warm (not hot) water
- 1 egg
- ¼ cup soft shortening
- 2 cups sifted, enriched flour
- ⅔ cup almonds, blanched and chopped
- 3 tablespoons sugar

Scald milk, then stir in sugar and salt. Sprinkle or crumble yeast into water (use lukewarm water for compressed yeast). Stir until dissolved. Add lukewarm milk mixture, eggs and shortening. Add about one-half the flour and mix first with a spoon, then by hand. Add remaining flour, with mace and lemon rind, using amount necessary to handle easily, though keeping the dough as soft as possible. Knead until smooth and elastic, about 10 minutes. Place in a bowl, cover with a cloth and let rise until doubled in bulk. Punch down, thrusting fist into dough, pulling edges to center and turning completely over in bowl. Cover and let rise again until doubled in bulk, about 30 minutes. Then divide dough into pieces, cover and let rest to make for easy handling. Shape dough into balls; or ovals; or, roll ½" thick, cutting into 3" squares.

Let rise until light, though not quite doubled on greased baking sheet, then bake in a hot (400°F.) oven about 20 to 25 minutes until brown.

Apricot Filling

- 25 dried apricots
- ¼ cup sugar

Soak apricots in water to cover, cook until soft, then drain, press through sieve and add sugar, mixing well.

LYNN SAYS: Quick Snacks Help Tide the Appetite

Crisp weather does things to the appetite, and there are easy ways to take care of the problem without denting the food budget.

Keep a bowl or two of sandwich spreads in the refrigerator for the raiders: mix some peanut butter with grated carrot and mayonnaise. Another is a blend of cottage cheese and applesauce. Still another uses cream cheese with raisins, softened to spreading consistency with milk.

Toast by itself may not take the edges off the appetite but toast with applesauce, hot and spiced, sprinkled with crisp bacon bits will do the trick.

For that before-dinner nibbling, spread some crackers with butter blended with a bit of onion juice. Toast the crackers until lightly brown in the broiler.

Cottage cheese and chives mixed with soured cream gives a nice dip for crisp celery pieces and carrots, potato and corn chips for evening nibbling.

Playing Politics

SOMEONE who was wise composed a prayer which read like this. "O Lord, grant me the serenity to accept those things which I cannot change; the courage to change those things which I can, and the wisdom to know the difference."

Somehow or other it seems that the citizens committee for the Hoover Report, including its agricultural sub-committee, has failed to find the wisdom to know the difference.

Several months ago this column warned that the citizens committee for the Hoover Report, which started out as a bi-partisan effort to remodel and stream-line the executive branch of the government, was playing politics in its efforts to force through some of its recommendations. And during the past two or three weeks the committee, including its agricultural sub-committee, has become engaged in a knock-down drag-out fight along political lines on its recommendations for over-hauling the Department of Agriculture.

Now, Dr Robert L. Johnson, national chairman of the committee and president of Temple University, has announced disbanding of the committee as of May 31 "to avoid becoming involved in politics." Dr Johnson said that to date about 55 per cent of the recommendations of the commission, many of which have been endorsed by President Truman, have been enacted into law.

However, and much to the point, the agricultural sub-committee of the citizens committee, does not intend to disband along with the parent organization, and this is the group, under the guidance of Charles Dana Bennett, as special consultant, which has aroused the ire of the National Farmers Union and of Secretary Charles Brannan of the Department of Agriculture.

The National Farmers Union has devoted much of its last two weekly letters to a two-fisted and vitriolic attack upon Bennett, who, in a speech before the members of the committee at the Shoreham hotel, recently used some intemperate language. Bennett leveled much of his fire against the farmer committeemen in the counties of the nation who are the bulwark of the entire agricultural set-up, elected by the farmers themselves. The committees contain thousands of Republicans as well as Democrats, since they are selected on a non-partisan basis.

Brannan Letter

Secretary Brannan in a public letter sent to Dr. Johnson charged the agricultural committee with "the most flagrant examples of misinformation", some of which he charged was not only "misleading, but outright false." In fairness to the Hoover Committee, however, some advertising agency in preparing its copy had taken figures from the Hoover report of 1947 which of course as of today are false and misleading.

In his letter Secretary Brannan said: "The department is carrying on most of the functions in which it was engaged in 1940 plus many new functions such as the rural telephone program, the farm housing program and those arising out of the research and marketing act, the Point Four program and numerous others."

He pointed out that the department's budget has been reduced by about 25 per cent, from more than $1,600,000,000 in 1940 to $1,200,000,000 in 1952; that total number of employees, full time, have been reduced from 71,000 in 1940 to 57,000 today and number of part-time employees has been cut in half; that organizational structure has been cut from 18 agencies in 1940 to 10 today.

100,000 Committeemen

This reporter believes that the county farm committees who are elected to determine the farm program they prefer in their own counties are probably the closest group to the grass roots thinking possible to have in our democracy. It's true that in Vermont, for instance, a majority of a committee may be Republicans, while in Georgia they all might be Democrats, but by and large politics plays no part in the election of delegates to the county convention which selects the county committees. And these farmers actually decide the program in their own county. There are more than 100,000 of them.

Unwise Interference

And while this column is in sympathy with reduction of waste and extravagance, as is the objective of the Hoover Committee, for instance a one-stop farm office in every county—any interference with the local farm committees is an attempt to interfere with democracy at its best at the grassroots. It seems only logical to believe these folks know best the kind of a program they want in their own counties in many scattered sections of the country.

World Population Up In Postwar Period

Resurgence of births and declining mortality in large areas of the globe have resulted in a spurt in world population during the postwar period.

In the United States the annual excess of births over deaths has averaged better than 15 per 1,000 population, which is above the level immediately following World War I, and about twice the rate during the depression decade of the 1930's.

The trend has been similar in Canada and New Zealand.

In France, where virtually no population gains had been made for a century, and where as recently as 1940-1944 deaths exceeded births, the rate of natural increase has averaged better than 7 per 1,000 each year since 1946. In Ireland, which had been losing population for a century, the excess of births over deaths has been somewhat more than 8 per 1,000 during the past six years.

LOST AGAIN

For the second straight year, John Williams of Ollie was tied in a school board election—and lost out when the lots were drawn. Last week he was tied with Raymond Yoder, with Yoder winning the draw A year ago, Mr. Williams was involved in a three-way tie and he lost on the draw that time, too.

LIGHT BULBS

At Manning, the municipal light office is trading new bulbs for old ones free. Provided, of course, that the "old" ones are of the old-style, clear glass type with a pointed tip, which are now obsolete. A few of them are still in use, however—and they interfere with television reception.

TRIPLETS

For Mr. and Mrs. Julius Novak, of Spillville, 'twas a case of "it's a girl, it's a girl, it's a girl!" last week. They became the parents of triplets, all daughters, March 8. The mother, incidentally, is a twin.

UNITED

Two brothers were united at Swea City last week, after a separation of 30 years. Willie Blumberg of Germany, arrived in Iowa after two years of effort by his brother, Herb Papenfuhs of Swea City. They had been separated since 1922.

HUNTERS

Using a light airplane as a spotter, farmers of the Lone Rock, Bancroft, Whittemore and Swea City area have bagged 101 foxes and two wolves during the past three winter months.

Communications Have Important Battlefield Role

When the United States Army recently introduced a new "walkie-talkie" radio—one which is far superior to its World War II counterpart—it forged another link in its constant search for a better and reliable communications system.

Communications always have been a matter of prime interest and continuing study in the U S. Army because Control of small units in combat is one of the most difficult problems that faces the commander. Ten men without direction of concentration of force will succumb to five men acting as a controlled and directed team of force. Only through communications can control be achieved.

Besides two communications nets, wire and radio, an Army unit has other communications. It has messengers, liaison officers, forward artillery observers, visual signal systems, including infra-red devices, pyrotechnics, arm and hand signals, and ground panels to mark the front lines for aircraft.

Radio is preferred if security permits. However, the best radio in the front line company can be masked by a hill mass. All radio is subject to jamming. The telephone is reliable if enemy artillery has not broken the wire.

The composition of a wire team in a battalion varies from three to five men. One type of battalion switchboard weighs 81 pounds; another, 52 pounds. One provides 12 channels, the other six. An emergency switchboard used within the battalion weighs about 2¼ pounds and provides six channels. This small board is similar in shape and slightly larger than a cigarette carton.

As a result of assistance from commercial research laboratories, there has been developed for the Signal Corps a new, portable switchboard, the SB-22/PT, which weighs only 22 pounds and provides switching facilities for 12 lines. Furthermore, by applying a "building block" principle in design, it is possible to stack three boards one atop the other, modify certain circuits slightly, and get switching facilities for 46 lines. A 46-line board could take care of a regimental level.

In addition, a new lightweight field wire has been developed by the Army Signal Corps Engineering Laboratories, and is in use in Korea, which has less than half the bulk and weighs only one-third as much as standard World War II field wire and has an improved talking range. It uses no rubber. It is packed in an improved, light dispenser so only one man is required to lay it.

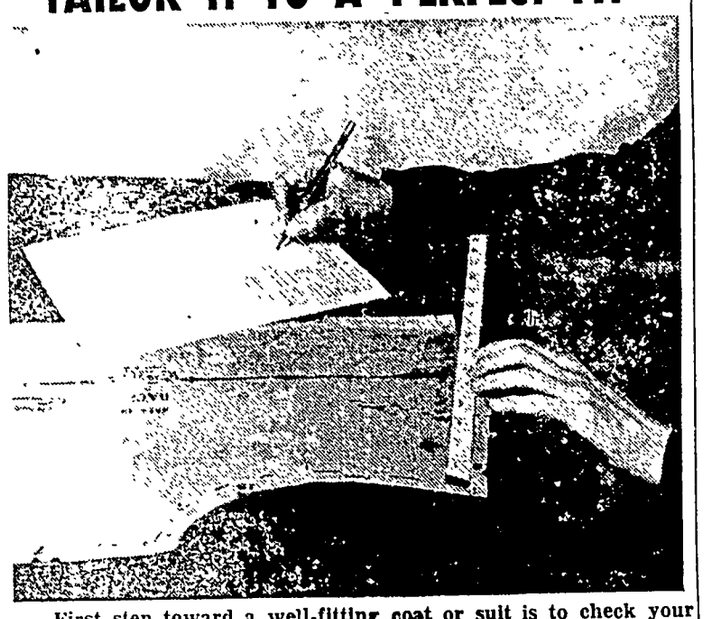
The first set of the new walkie-talkie radios came off the production line on March 8, 1951 of the Radio Corporation of America, which developed it in conjunction with the Signal Corps Engineering Laboratories. The set has about half the weight and bulk of the old walkie-talkie. There are three variations of the set, primarily for use by Armor, Artillery and Infantry.

Through the use of miniature parts, the new walkie-talkie weighs only 25 pounds. It is 16 inches high, nine inches wide, and three inches deep. When a 36-inch antenna is used, it has a normal range of three miles. When a 10-foot antenna is used, the range is five miles. It is a battery-operated receiver-transmitter in a single unit.

These sets will operate, under an Army Signal Corps concept of "integrated communications," with a new handie-talkie radio (developed by the Raytheon Manufacturing Company) soon to be delivered, and with an extensive new series of frontline vehicular sets (developed by the Bell Telephone Laboratories), soon to be delivered.

MAKING A SPRING COAT OR SUIT?

TAILOR IT TO A PERFECT FIT



First step toward a well-fitting coat or suit is to check your own measurements. Then make any alterations on the pattern pieces. An accurate job of pattern alteration, careful preparation of your fabric, accuracy in cutting and marking will help assure a good fit from the very beginning.

Turning out a professional-looking coat or suit is quite something It means you've gone beyond the techniques of everyday sewing and have mastered an enviable new skill-tailoring.

"Can I learn to tailor?" you ask The answer comes from Lucille Rea, Iowa State College extension clothing specialist.

Yes, she says if you like to sew and sew well. Yes, if you've had results sewing many different types of fabrics. Tailoring involves working with wool, rayon or one of the synthetics or blends and is different from sewing cotton.

Yes, if you are willing to follow to the letter techniques used by professional tailors

A good fabric for your first tailoring venture would be 100 percent wool It should be soft and pliable enough to be easily molded into shape, and firm so it doesn't ravel badly.

You'll want to make sure your fabric is straight with the grain so that the finished garment will hang well Pin the straightened ends and selvages together. If the material lies flat, the grain is right. If not, this will be taken care of when you shrink the wool

To shrink, fold it smoothly in a wet sheet and leave it for 4 to 12 hours, depending on the weight of the fabric. Then unfold and lay the wool flat to dry As it dries, smooth out any diagonal wrinkles.

Trial Garment

After you compare your own measurements with the pattern measurements and make needed alterations on the pattern pieces, you're ready to sew up a trial garment of inexpensive cotton and try it on.

Is this trial garment essential?

"Yes," says Miss Rea. From it you can tell if the style is becoming, if your alterations make it fit well, if sleeves and jacket are a good length. You can also check up on placement of the buttons and the pockets. All this will help you keep from making expensive mistakes on the wool

Handle your material as little as possible to keep from stretching it out of shape Here are suggestions to help you: Cut out your interfacing first and transfer pattern markings. Then cut out your garment, mark, and organize the pieces—still pinned to the pattern—in the order in which you'll work on them. Make your coat or suit by units. That means, for instance, doing all the work necessary on the right jacket front —staystitch, tailor baste in the interfacing, make darts and buttonholes, put on the pocket. Then put it away until you're ready to join it to the back If you have trouble understanding pattern directions, work out your problem on the pattern piece first. You'll find these steps will save you time as well.

Press As You Go

From the very first, you must press to attain smooth construction and shape the garment to fit the portion of the figure it will cover Be sure that you are familiar with pressing techniques A steam roll, tailor's ham, steam iron or equivalent, and a wool press cloth for pressing wool are extremely helpful.

Miss Rea's 24-page illustrated booklet "Here's How to Tailor" will help you immeasurably You can get it at your county extension office or by writing to the Bulletin Office, Iowa State College.

BURNED

Jolene Hardee, age four, of near Siam, was seriously burned when her clothing caught fire as she "helped" her mother with the evening meal. Jolene is finding her first four years rather rugged; last year she was run over by a tractor and suffered a broken hip.

HEATER

An exploding gas heater has spoiled a southern vacation for Sterling Vifquain, of Belle Plaine. As he started to light the gas heater, in a motor court near Austin, it exploded and burned his face, arms and hands. He'll be hospitalized about two weeks.

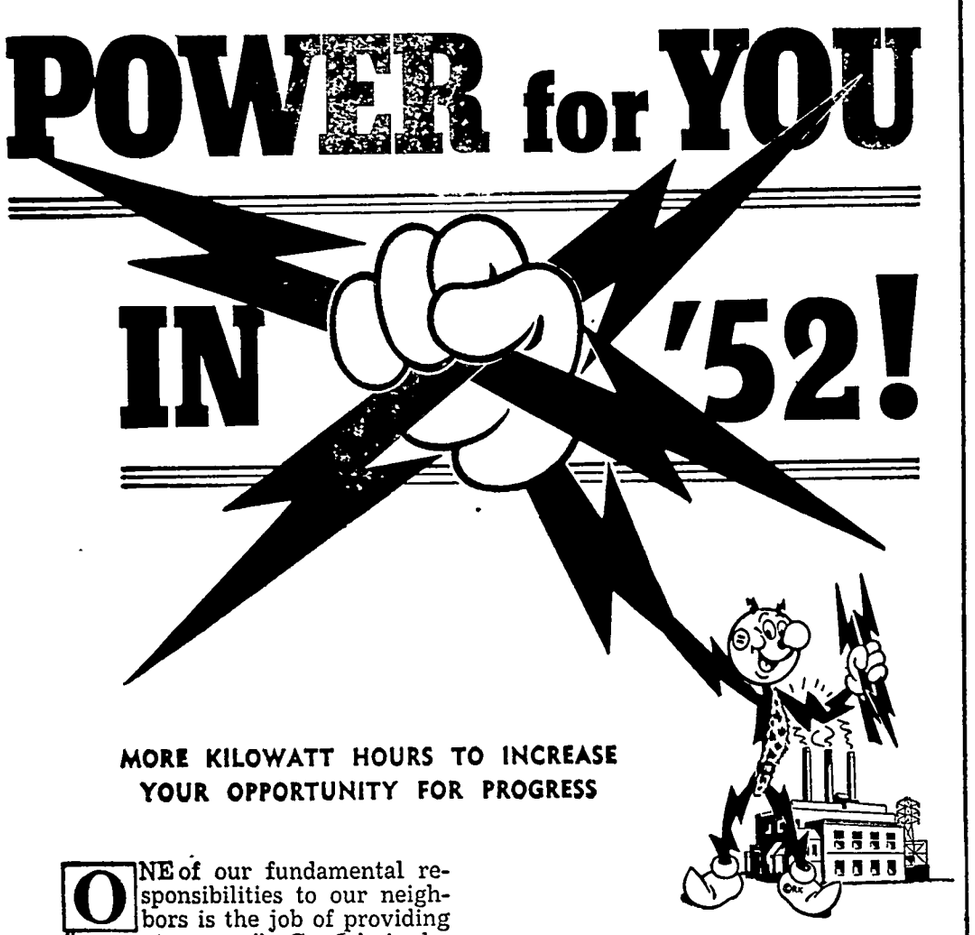
There's

POWER for YOU IN '52!



MORE KILOWATT HOURS TO INCREASE YOUR OPPORTUNITY FOR PROGRESS

ONE of our fundamental responsibilities to our neighbors is the job of providing "power to spare." Growth is determined to an ever-increasing degree by the availability of electric power. Everything from a new industry to a new home requires adequate power. Yes, the electric capacity available to a city paces expansion. Adequate power holds the promise not only of the convenience of modern electric living, but also encourages stepped-up business, production and employment.

Plenty of Power

During the new year, as in the past, your electric company has planned ahead to assure an adequate supply of electric power to serve the growing needs of the community. For homes, farms and factories there is "power to spare"...vital power to grow on...to use for convenience and for profit. During the next four years $25,000,000 will be invested to add 83,000 kilowatts of generating capacity to our system together with additional transmission and distribution facilities. This is powerful news, important to you and to the future of your community. We will safeguard our record with every measure at our command...electric power is never too little or too late to meet the demands of our customers.

TELEVISION DISCOVERS MAIN STREET

Technical Limitations Restrict TV Range

(This is the second of a series of three articles on the coming of a nationwide television service.)

The expansion of video into non-TV areas is based on the Federal Communications Commission's plan to open up a new section of the radio spectrum, known as the Ultra High Frequency Range, for commercial and educational television. This will permit 70 new channels for TV broadcasts, as compared to the 12 channels now in use in the limited Very High Frequency Range. By opening UHF and expanding VHF, the FCC will offer licenses for nearly 2,000 new stations, divided among every state in the union.

The FCC has indicated that it will put it up to private enterprise in the towns and cities concerned. If they want television they can apply for it, and, following final allocations expected soon, licenses will be granted to applicants found acceptable. On the basis of tentative allocations and provided each state fulfills its license quota under the expansion program, the nation will have this number of TV stations:

Alabama, 45; Arizona, 30; Arkansas, 38; California, 80; Colorado, 36; Connecticut, 14; Deleware, 4; District of Columbia, 6; Florida, 58; Georgia, 53; Idaho, 28; Illinois, 56; Indiana, 45; Iowa, 58; Kansas, 49; Kentucky, 32; Louisiana, 42; Maine, 29; Maryland, 12; Massachusetts, 23; Michigan, 65; Minnesota, 48; Mississippi, 39; Missouri, 53; Montana, 39; Nebraska, 34; Nevada, 22; and New Hampshire, 12

Also, New Jersey, 9; New Mexico, 35; New York, 55; North Carolina, 51; North Dakota, 33; Ohio, 57; Oklahoma, 54; Oregon, 32, Pennsylvania, 52; Rhode Island, 4, South Carolina, 27; South Dakota, 30; Tennessee, 61; Texas, 176, Utah, 19; Vermont, 10; Virginia, 37; Washington, 41; West Virginia, 23; Wisconsin, 44; and Wyoming, 27.

This expanded service contrasts dramatically with the present regional allocations.

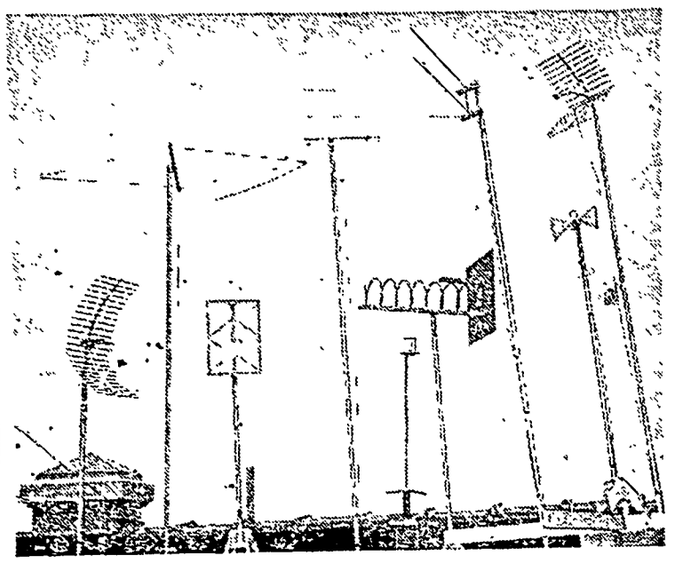
In many one-station cities like Albuquerque and Seattle, network programs have been unobtainable because relay facilities, either microwave or coaxial cable, do not reach them.

But the cables and the radio relay towers are today pushing steadily into new areas. In 1951, a chain of lofty microwave towers which relay video signals with split-second precision was completed from coast-to-coast. Coaxial cables are spreading through the south—from Kansas City to Wichita, to Dallas, San Antonio and Houston. Jackson, Miss., a southern terminal, is being tied to New Orleans, a northern branch is headed for Montreal; and cables are being laid from Los Angeles through Arizona, Texas and New Mexico to cover the southwest.

This vast expansion of video relay facilities means that scores of new television towns, with either UHF or VHF stations, will be able to tap into the terminals along the route and relay the major network programs through remote rural areas

Main Street's Role

It is difficult to forecast accurately today how quickly Main Street, U.S.A., will erect the nearly 2,000 new stations for which licenses might be available and how quickly extensive home coverage will be obtained There is the question of material shortages in a defense economy of local financing of new stations and of the speed with which the FCC processes license applications.



SKYLINE OF THE FUTURE—Here are the various types of antenna developed by RCA technicians to receive UHF television broadcasts. Some of them might soon become familiar landmarks on the rooftops of farms, ranches and city homes in every section of the United States. They bear such colorful names as "Bow Tie" and "YAgi" and "Double V" and "Corner Reflector." With the coming of a countrywide television service, the names of the new video antennas promise to become a part of the national lexicon.

Yet, there is a regional pattern established since 1946 when the National Broadcasting Company introduced regular commercial television in the United States This was the first era of expansion, in many ways the second era might rival it

For example, set sales in the present television regions have maintained a fairly uniform pace. In 1951, there were 27,412,700 families residing in TV areas—that is, areas where some type of video signal, however faint, could be picked up on home receivers. Of this total, 15,166,000 had purchased television receivers

Since 62,914,200 people reside in these areas, the ratio of TV set sales to individuals is about one to six. In terms of families it is a little better than one set for each two families.

And the pattern is fairly consistent between different size cities. New York, for example, has 4,152,100 families and they own 2,720,000 home receivers. Omaha, Neb., has 210,500 families and they own 104,000 TV sets.

Using the same yardstick, the scores of towns which look forward to their own transmitting stations can expect an audience of one out of every two families in their municipal and suburban regions. They can anticipate this audience within perhaps three or four years after their first video signal is broadcast.

The number of listeners, of course, is dependent on the number of stations erected. Recent history indicates that they will go up fast. In 1948, when the freeze on station construction was imposed by the FCC for fear of over-extending the VHF channels and thus creating interference between stations, scores of small-town business men, industrialists, radio station owners and newspaper publishers had applications for station licenses on file

A new technical phrase is being projected into the national vocabulary. It is "Ultra-High Frequency" and it is the operative phrase in a government plan to extend television beyond major population centers into the farms, ranches and small towns of America.

To the scientist, Ultra-High Frequency (UHF) means a section of the radio spectrum. Another name for the spectrum is radio air waves. The air waves, of course, belong to the people, and it is the job of a government agency to divide among various private and government services wireless channels in which to transmit information electronically.

The services to which the government entrusts the public's air waves include police radio, television (in the Very High Frequencies), FM broadcasts, civil radio, amateur radio, government wireless, maritime wireless, ship stations, coastal statioins, maritime navigation, general navigation, radar, air navigation, airport control, industrial, scientific and medical wireless devices.

Fixed Channels

Each of the services has fixed "channels" in the air waves and cannot intrude upon its sister services. With television, the number of channels used today is not sufficient to carry video signals to every part of the nation.

Since the inception of commercial TV, telecasts have been beamed over 12 channels in the relatively limited Very High Frequency section of the air waves, but with new stations mushrooming around the country, the Federal Communications Commission decided it had better call a halt before TV signals began bumping into each other. Its decision was prompted by the realization that two television signals transmitted over the same channel within range of one another will collide and thus "hash up" the home viewing- screen.

The one untapped section of the spectrum which promised plenty of room was UHF. This was the area in which scientists and engineers of the Radio Corporation of America began looking for new television channels.

"Up until RCA engineers began looking into it", according to O.B. Hanson, Vice President and Chief engineer of the National Broadcasting Company, "the UHF was the Antarctic of the air waves. Everybody knew where it was on the map of the radio spectrum, but nobody had much practical knowledge about it."

This plunge into the upper frequencies was doubly necessary because television is a great space grabber. A television picture requires much more "information" to be transmitted electronically than a radio broadcast. As a matter of fact, a TV station requires 600 times as much room in ether as a radio broadcast station; it uses a band width of 6,000,000 cycles (6 megacycles) compared to 10,000 cycles for standard radio broadcast.

Equipment Developed

Out of years of expensive research and field tests, equipment was developed which made UHF practical.

It was found that UHF station, properly situated and properly operated could furnish home viewers a picture that equalled in clarity and definition the standard VHF picture.

It was found that present home television sets could receive UHF telecasts through the addition of a simple "tuner" and that receivers could be built to receive both UHF and VHF telecasts.

It was found that the enlistment of 70 new UHF channels for television would permit an orderly expansion of VHF service without fear of station conflict.

These findings provided the basis of the FCC's plans to license nearly 2,000 new stations throughout America.

Increased Birth

Each morning the United States has an additional 7,000 persons to feed and clothe, a rate of increase that has been going on for several years. Per capita consumption of food is 13 per cent higher than the prewar average.

SHORT STORY

A Man's Duty

By Anna E. Wilson

UNCLE JONAS always held that it was a man's duty to look after his women folks, but that was before he got caught out in his dory in a storm and was brought home with a twisted leg.

3-Minute Fiction

He sat, now, on a discarded sawhorse in Timothy Donovan's backyard and whittled

Yet not later than this morning, his sister Abbie had said, "It does seem to me, Jonas, as if you could get something to do; ever since you lost that dory, you've done nothing but sit around and whittle. It don't seem right for a man your age to be a burden—not that I'm complaining," said Abbie righteously, "though it's hard on a woman my age keeping boarders, without," she finished plaintively, "cleaning up a mess of chips."

Jonas had promptly moved his whittling out of Abbie's kitchen and over into Timothy's backyard which he shared with a moth-eaten old goat, Nicodemus.

His gnarled hands handled the knife skillfully, and his fingers caressed the tiny craft his skill had produced. He rescued a piece of calico, purloined from Abbie's work basket and fashioned tiny sails to billow out from the miniature mast and spars, and set her asail in Donovan's pond, a full rigged fishing schooner.

He sat, now, on a discarded sawhorse in Timothy Donovan's backyard and whittled.

He had just finished and looked up to see Abbe bearing down on him full sail.

"Now, Jonas, there's no call for you to sit out here in the sun with that old goat. Folks'll be saying I drove you out of the house."

"Folks'll be right," said Jonas stoutly.

Abbie's face broke up, she was close to tears. "Now, Jonas, you don't need to take what a person says to heart."

"Thirty years," said Jonas Stubbornly, "I kept the house fed and respectable. Don't seem any call for you to go fretting now.

"I know, Jonas," said Abbie, wiping her eyes with her apron, "But it does seem—"

Nicodemus had finished chewing the label from a tomato can, he bleated, his vindictive little eyes swinging around in Abbie's direction. Abbie left in a hurry and Jonas patted the goat.

WHITTLING could be hard work, he thought, when you did it eight hours a day. He counted his little fleet carefully, they were all there; stout, water tight, in full sail. He looked up to see Abbie coming down the street with a man.

Abbie's voice was uncertain. "Mr. Golstein came all the way down from the city to see you, Jonas Mr. Golstein keeps a curio shop—" but Mr. Golstein was shaking hands with Jonas, showing all his teeth.

"Well, well, I see you've got them finished. Are they all there? He started counting them into his bag."

Jonas nodded, he was unaccountably tired, a man got that way working under strain; his shoulders ached, his fingers were blistered, and his bones cried out against the hardness of the sawhorse.

Mr. Goldstein finished packing the ships, took out his wallet. "$250," he said cheerfully counting it out. "And say, Jonas, that figure of the little goat is going over big. Can let you have an order for a hundred of them. Same price."

He turned to Abbie, "Lucky day for your brother and me," Miss Abbie, when he came into town to have his leg attended to and saw some carved figures in my window Tell you what, Miss Abbie, not many people's got so much foresight these days." He went off, chuckling.

"Now Abbie," said Jonas gently, "there's no call for you to be crying. It's a man's duty to look after his women folks. I didn't tell you before because Mr. Golstein wasn't sure. He wanted to see them first Seems that now it's getting colder, we could let the boarders go and I could sit in the kitchen. It's more companionable like—for you and me."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

SCRIPTURE: Luke 1.1-4; Acts 1:1-2, 16; 6-10, 27 27, 28.1-10; Colossians 4.14; II Timothy 4 11.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Luke 4:33-41

Doctor's Hobby

Lesson for March 30, 1952

DOCTOR Luke is a man to whom we are all indebted. Without him, we in the church would have lost some of our finest hymns, the "Magnificat" and the "Nunc Dimittis;" without him we might never have heard of the story of that first Christmas night when the shepherds watched and the angels sang. He was the only Gospel writer who remembered to tell us those matchless parables, the Lost Sheep and the Prodigal Son, and many another.

Dr Foreman

It is only from him that we know of Jesus' prayer at Calvary,—"Father, forgive them; they know not what they do." Furthermore, it is only Luke who conceived and wrote the book of Acts.

Some Hobbies Are Famous

THE interesting thing is that Dr. Luke was not a professional writer. He was a professional physician. All the writing he did was what we today might even call a hobby; that is, he got no money for it so far as we know, he just wrote because he loved to write.

Very likely he was a good doctor; he is called the "beloved physician," and we hope that enough people who loved him also paid their bills promptly so that he could make his living. But it was not the doctoring that endeared him to the church of Christ.

It was what he did in his spare time, it was his missionary work and his writing, it is the Gospel of Luke and the book of Acts that are his main claim to fame.

Luke is not the first man nor the last to accomplish more by a "side-line" than by his main job. We remember David in the Old Testament, whose rise to power began not with his sheep-herding, which no doubt he did to perfection, but with his music, which his father may well have thought a waste of time We remember Marcus Aurelius the emperor not for his military campaigns, which were masterly, but for the "meditations" he wrote in snatches of spare time on those campaigns. We remember the Apostle Paul not for the churches he founded (most of which folded) but for the dozen or so letters he managed to squeeze into his busy evenings.

Other Doctors

LUKE was not the last Christian doctor who has found in what, for some, might be a "side-line" his finest means of service and best source of happiness, Dr. Howard Kelly of Baltimore was a cancer specialist of no small fame; but he was even better known as a scientist who not only saw no conflict between science and religion, but who brought his skill and his science to the service of Christ.

There was another doctor, a surgeon in a midwestern city, not many years ago, who was ready to retire. He had enough to live on in comfort, and the life of a successful surgeon in a great city is a wearing one. But instead of retiring, he went out to China, and in a remote province he spent his "retiring" years at his own expense, hardly knowing a word of Chinese, but having the time of his life and rendering himself if possible more nearly indispensable out there than he had ever been back in the states.

Again there was the surgeon Alexis Carrel, who with another scientist first succeeded in keeping living tissue (a chicken's heart) alive for years beyond the time when it "should have" died,—a surgeon who also believed in the power of prayer and whose book "Man the Unknown" is valuable as combining the scientific and the Christian view of man.

Or there was Dr. I. J. Archer of Chicago and North Carolina, who operated two sanitariums more easily than some doctors can run one office, and yet who found his life's deepest satisfactions in the Sunday school class he taught for years.

Life Is More Than Making a Living

MANY others besides doctors have made the same discovery. What is a "hobby," after all? It can be only an elaborate twiddling of the thumbs, something to "kill time"—horrible thought! It can be something done merely to relieve nervous pressure. It can be something not really worth doing

But what Dr. Luke found, countless others, including some readers of these lines, have also found: that even when we have to spend most of our time making a living, we can dedicate our "spare" time, under God, to making life.

MOTHER WORRIES

There was once a young lady who went to work in a federal government office in Washington. She was proud of her job so she wrote her parents about it.

"I work," she wrote, "in the data analysis group of the aptitude test sub-unit of the division of occupational analysis and managing tables of the bureau of labor utilization of the War Manpower commission which is under the office of emergency management."

Mom wrote: "Come home!"

ASK ME LATER

A party of high-powered and over-dressed hunters from the city were pushing through swamp country when they came upon a small bare-foot boy with a sling shot.

"And what are you hunting for?" one of the party asked.

"I don't know," replied the boy "I ain't seen it yet."

War Party

Tommy had been playing with his sister in the garden, and their screams had attracted mother.

"What are you doing, children?" she asked.

"We're playing Indians, mummy and I'm scalping Betty," replied Tommy.

"You're doing what"

"Oh, I'm not really scalping her properly—just taking her hair off with the shears!"

TRICKS OF TRADE

Scene: An Employment bureau

A gentleman in the optical business was instructing his son in the technique of chiseling a fair and honest price out of a customer He said, "Son after you have fitted the glasses to the customer, and he asks, 'What is the charge?', you should say:

"The charge is ten dollars."

Then pause and watch for the flinch.

"If the customer does not flinch you say: "That's for the frames the lenses will be another ten dollars."

"Then you pause again—but this time only slightly—and again you watch for the flinch.

"If the customer doesn't flinch you say: 'Each'."

Source of Fire Report Puzzling to Forest Men

MISSOULA, Mont.—Forest Service officals were puzzled when they received a report of a forest fire in their district. The report came from Huntley, 400 miles across the state.

They made sure the fire was under control, then learned two Missoula radio amateurs had gone into the mountains to test portable radio equipment. They spotted the blaze, but couldn't contact the Forest Service. So they broadcast their report.

50-50 CHANCE

The teacher was testing the knowledge of the kindergarten class. Slapping a half dollar on the desk, she said sharply, "What is that?" Instantly, a voice from the back of the row said, "Tails."

Well Put

George Burns: Gracie loves nice things, and we have some lovely antiques in our home. A famous interior decorator came to the house for dinner once and he saw this highboy and said, "Gracie, where did you get that priceless old relic with the curved legs and the hand decorated drawers?" and Gracie said, "I met him in vaudeville."

WHAT'S NEW

The road service mechanic for a long-haul freight line found himself obliged to remain in a small hick town overnight because of a landslide which blocked the road just out of town. A heavy rain had caused all the trouble, and it was still coming down in torrents. Spying a dimly-lit restaurant, he walked in to take on a little food before retiring for the night. Turning to the waitress, he said, "This certainly looks like the flood."

"The what?" queried the waitress.

"The flood. You've read about the flood, and the ark landing on Mt. Ararat, surely?"

"Mister," she returned grimly, "I haven't seen a paper in three days."

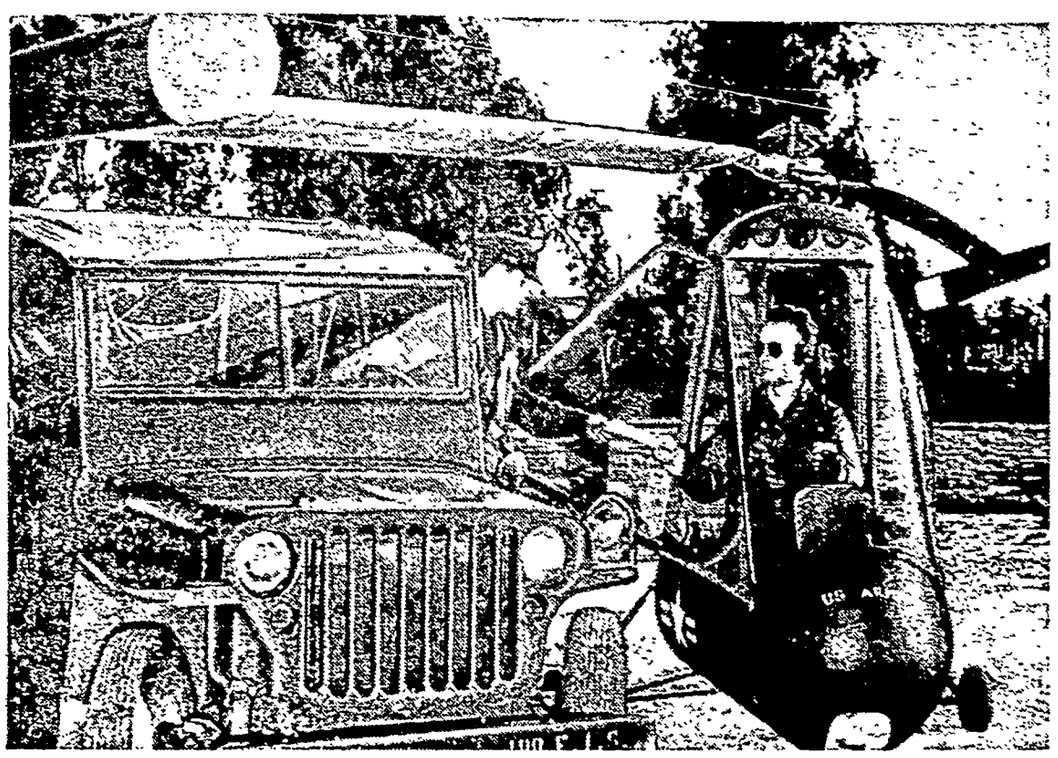
WILLIE 'THE ACTOR' HAS AUDIENCE . . . A sheepish grin is Willie "the Actor" Sutton's response to onlookers who were on hand at Butler street station in Brooklyn as Willie, surrounded by detectives made his appearance. He was booked and fingerprinted and returned to Queens City prison after appearing in Kings county court where he pleaded guilty to charges of owning and carrying guns. Despite the plea, slippery Willie will be returned to Queens where he faces trial for the holdup of a branch of the Manufacturers Trust Company in 1950. He will not be sentenced in Brooklyn on the gun charge until the holdup charge is disposed of in Queens.



ARMY UNVEILS PINT-SIZE HELICOPTER . . . In Washington, D.C., perched beside a jeep is the XH-26 helicopter announced by the United States army recently. It is designed for air observation as well as evacuation. It can be carried and dropped by a plane by parachute, unpacked and made ready for the air in 20 minutes by two men trained in its operation. It is designed basically as a one-man ship, but can carry two side by side or tandem in twin external litters. The 'copter is powered by two 16-pound pulse jet engines, one on each end of the rotor blades. Top speed is 80 m.p.h., and it can fly for about 90 minutes without refueling, covering a lot of territory.

WINS $159,500 SUIT . . . In San Francisco, Joseph Sullivan, 45, warehouseman who was badly crippled by a municipal railway bus in 1950 is congratulated by his family after winning a compromise settlement of $150,500. Sullivan sued the city for $300,000 after he was struck by a bus while crossing the street. His spinal cord was severed and he became paralyzed from the hips down. The settlement will cost the city $37,500 with Lloyd's of London paying the rest.

Three Managers Are in Big Stew

By GRANTLAND RICE

YOU MAY NOT have noticed but there is a bluebird sitting on a cedar post and a touch of flame in the early southern sky. Spring is almost here.

In the meanwhile there are three managers out in this section who are beginning to stew over three major problems. They are the only three managers in baseball who had much to say about the two pennant races last spring, summer and fall—especially down the stretch. Their names are Casey Stengel, Leo Durocher and Chuck Dressen — representing Yankees, Giants and Dodgers. The Yankees, Giants and Dodgers—especially the first two—took over the main battle for last year's two pennants.

Grantland Rice

How will it be for 1952? Casey Stengel has to replace Joe DiMaggio, his greatest ballplayer. He has to fill the hole left vacant by Jerry Coleman. He has to work out the best outfield combination from Woodling, Mantle, Bauer, Jensen and one or two others. And he has to get the able help again he received from Reynolds, Lopat and Raschi, his three star pitchers who are all veterans.

Casey isn't much of a worrier or else he is a fine actor. His busy brain is seething now, but he says his problems can wait until he reaches the playing field.

"We'll be all right," he says with a grin. "We'll either win or make somebody else hustle."

The next in turn was Leo Durocher. Leo keeps busy from hour to hour and from day to day. He is always restless.

"We have a few problems," Durocher says. "But not too many. The main two are filling Stanky's job at second and taking care of the territory left vacant by Willie Mays. Both are great ballplayers for any team. Stanky was a big factor last year. So was Willie Mays. We have Williams and maybe Hank Thompson for second. We've got to fill that big gap in center. Then we are set—with one of the best pitching staffs in baseball. I mean Maglie, Jansen, Hearn, Lanier and Koslo—plus a few others. I call that quite a staff. And you know what a big part of baseball, pitching is."

The Third Problem

This left Chuck Dressen of the Dodgers on our visiting list. The first problem Chuck has is to fill Don Newcombe's place in the box.

"That won't be any too simple," said Chuck.

The next problem will be to get more winning games out of his pitching staff—Branca, Erskine and Roe.

"Roe is a great pitcher, says Dressen. "I mean great. But he can't be worked too hard. So we have left Labine, Erskine, Branca, Van Cuyk, Banta, Loes, Wade, Alexander, Podbielan, Rutherford—to mention a few.

"I'm planning to send Clem Labine out to take Newcombe's place. I think he can do it. I hope so anyway."

Dressen has another problem. This is getting his pitchers into a winning mood. Year after year they are rated high up. But few of them ever win 18 games, even with a great ball club.

Just a fair pitcher should be a 20-game winner in Brooklyn with the fielding and batting support he gets. Dressen said nothing about this. But he knows the entire staff hasn't been any too good the past few years. They have a lot of things—but little control.

Outside of his pitching, Dressen has the best all around club in baseball. If he had Giant, Yankee or Indian pitching he would have a cakewalk. But he must get more consistent work from a highly inconsistent staff.

Anyway, here are the three main or major problems the three best teams in baseball last season face for the new spring now only a chip shot away.

The Big Experiment

Can the sow's ear ever produce a silk purse? Can the silver handle be fitted to the pewter spoon? Can the St. Louis Browns ever be lifted again to the first division, or be a pennant contender? This latter angle will be given its first chance this year.

Hornsby has already started work in a sunny valley near Los Angeles with his first training platoon. The squad is at El Centre where the desert sun is hot and there are no disturbing factors. He has Rivera, Roy Sievers, Mike Goliat and others who asked to be on hand.

Hornsby believes he will have a high-class outfield ready by late April. He is a great believer in hard work—in extra hard work. And he has another important quality. I've heard many well-known managers and ballplayers say you can't teach a man how to hit. Hornsby doesn't.

I recall the time in Florida they tried to make a hitter out of Sammy Baugh, the star passer. He was getting his shot at the Cardinals under Frank Frisch. Baugh was a great infielder with a fine arm, but he couldn't hit a lick. No one could teach the famous Texan how to swing a bat. But Hornsby has always been a natural teacher.

Blue Cross - Blue Shield Available To Residents

Now Hancock County residents who are under 65 years of age can apply for Blue Cross-Blue Shield membership at any time, through the Hancock County Health Improvement Association, Virgil A. Cook, president, said today. Benefits are available the first of the month following receipt of acceptable applications and payment in the Blue Cross office.

Blue Cross and Blue Shield are sponsored by our hospitals and doctors. Our County Health Improvement Association has for several years made it possible for residents of the county to have the hospital, medical and surgical care protection offered by these Plans. During the past year, our HIA has had Mrs Elsie Oxley, Corwith, as a special Blue Cross-Blue Shield rural representative in the county, Mr Cook said. Mrs. Oxley not only accepts applications for Blue Cross-Blue Shield and changes in coverage, but will be glad to answer any questions you may have on your protection. Information is also available from Beverly McCormick, secretary of the Hancock County HIA, at the Farm Bureau Office in Garner.

All Candidates Now Filed For Coming June Primary

TWO CONTESTS FOR HANCOCK COUNTY POSTS

Hancock County Republicans will have a contest in 2 county offices according to County Auditor Maynard Schoneman. Two candidates have filed for clerk of the district court and county coroner.

Winnifred M. Bradwell and Doris Young, both of Garner, will contest the clerk's post now held by Ruth Hughes Katter who did not seek re-election. For the coroner's job now held by Kenneth F. Boughton, Britt mortician, Joe Osman, also a funeral director at Britt is seeking the nomination as is the incumbent, Mr. Boughton.

The following candidates have filed for nomination on the Republican ticket and all of them except those previously mentioned are now holding those respective offices. They are:

Auditor, Maynard Schoneman; treasurer, Roy L. McMillin; recorder, Edith Sonquist; county attorney, G. W. Templeton; sheriff, L. M. Brower; clerk of the courts, Winifred M. Bradwell and Doris Young; coroner, Kenneth F. Boughton and Joe Osman, both of Britt; supervisors, term beginning Jan. 1, 1954, F. J. Schoun. Penn Eckels is the candidate for state representative

Hancock County Democrats did not file a ticket for the primary.

County Auditor Schoneman received the official state ballot from Secretary of State Synhorst Wednesday morning and instructions to printers are now in the process of being formulated by Auditor Schoneman. As soon as these are completed the primary election ballots will be printed.

BONUS CHECKS GIVEN TO SCHOOLS PLAYING IN GIRLS SECTIONALS

DES MOINES—Checks in the amount of nearly $6,000 are being mailed by the Iowa Girls' High School Athletic Union to the 614 Iowa schools that traveled to the 64 girls' sectional tournaments this year.

The money is being returned to the schools as extra bonus mileage expense checks, Rod Chisholm, executive secretary of the union, said Thursday. "This is the first time in the 26-year history of the union that we have been able to make such a gesture to participating schools and still maintain a working capital reserve," Chisholm said.

The extra income came as a result of a large increase in attendance at sectional tournaments his year, Chisholm reported. The bonus checks amounted to $5 for teams playing in one game, $10 for those playing two games, $15 for 3 games and $20 for 4 games.

SHOW HOW TO KEEP CUT FLOWERS FRESH

Cut flowers will last longer if as many leaves as possible have been removed.

Home Advisors at the University of California agricultural extension service point out that flowers lose moisture rapidly through the leaves after they have been picked.

They suggest that removal of the leaves will eliminate some of the surfaces where evaporation can take place.

Add other greens to replace the ones removed, the home advisers suggested.

Another method for slowing evaporation from leaves and cut flower stems is by keeping the storage temperature low and humid.

Sometimes cut flowers which have wilted can be revived by setting the container on a cool porch overnight or in the refrigerator with a temperature of 40 degrees.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

For a long time the town was aware of Roy's ability to hold onto a dollar as though it were part of his skin. But he was never thought to be particularly selfish until, one day in the drug store, Buck Hanson came up with the classic remark.

"Roy is so tight," Buck said the immortal quote in his voice, "Roy is so tight that he wouldn't give a nickle to see his grandmother pitch horse shoes in the state championship."

That crack was the beginning of the idea that he was a greedy man. Friends stopped him in the streets to ask about his grandmother's arm, to ask if she were in shape for the match.

"She's been dead for years," Roy would say with a blank look. He never understood the laughter that always provoked. Then, the remark got twisted in the telling. Some people heard that Roy had let his grandmother starve to death many years ago.

He was even accused for being a careful driver. Some people decided he drove carefully only because he didn't want the expense of smashed fenders.

Roy never learned what the talk was all about. He was killed one afternoon when he slowed down at a country intersection to give another car the right of way. The car following Roy smashed into him from behind at high speed. Roy's neck was broken in the backward snap of the impact.

So Roy, who died giving, was buried as a selfish man. One woman is supposed to have said: "Nobody should mourn him too much after what he did to his own grandmother."

How do we know who the selfish are until we see how much they are willing to give on the highways.

JUDSONIA, ARK.—Their homes among more than 2,000 Arkansas and Missouri homes destroyed or damaged by March tornadoes, these men, like thousands of storm victims, turn to the Red Cross for help. After emergency needs for food, clothing, medical care and shelter are met, Red Cross workers will stay on the job until rehabilitation needs of more than 1,600 families registered for help in these two states are determined. Based on need, Red Cross will assist in repairing and rebuilding homes and providing furniture. Of the nearly 500 persons hospitalized by tornado injuries, many will need Red Cross help with medical bills. All this Red Cross help, expected to run into millions, is a gift given by the people through the Red Cross fund campaign.

Obituary Of August Nuehring

AUGUST NUEHRING was born March 12 1864 at Grossfarling, Germany, the youngest of a family of eight children born to his parents, Frederick and Lucia Nuehring.

He was a brother to William Nuehring and to Minnie (Mrs. Fred) Knoke, who both lived in the Klemme community for many years; and he was a brother to Dietrich Nuehring who lived at Postville, Iowa. The other members of his family remained in Germany.

His boyhood days were spent in Germany where he completed his common school education.

He was baptized and confirmed, and became a member of the Lutheran Church at Grossfarling, Germany. Later he transferred his membership to the Liberty Methodist church.

In the spring of 1880, when August was 16 years of age, he migrated to America with other members of his family. They settled at Postville, Iowa, and two years later he came to Hancock County, and thus for 70 years he has been a resident of this community.

On April 10, 1895, at the age of 31, August Nuehring and Marie E. Bredlow were married. They became the parents of four children: three sons and one daughter. One son, Leslie preceeded the father in death.

August spent the productive years of his life as a day laborer and as a farm hand. They lived on an acreage and had a cow, a few pigs, a flock of chickens and a big garden, which gave them about everything one needed.

August Nuehring was a friendly man, always contented and happy and everyone he knew was his friend.

Nature must have approved of his way of living or she allowed him to live long—reaching the age of 88 years and 18 days. The end came early Sunday morning, March 30, 1952.

He leaves of his immediate family:

His wife Marie; one daughter, Gertrude (Mrs. Sam Hammon) Garner; two sons: Owen L. Nuehring of Garner route 1, and Arno Nuehring of Garner route 4; also 16 grandchildren and 24 great grandchildren and other more distant relatives and many friends.

TELEVISION DISCOVERS MAIN STREET

New Electronic Science Born in Cottage

(This is the last of a series of three articles on the coming of a nationwide television service.)

To the people who will receive this new ultra high frequency television service, various considerations will govern their selection of home equipment.

In some areas, under the FCC plan, only UHF channel will be received. Present set owners, who have perhaps been picking up a distant VHF signal, will be able to purchase a simple and inexpensive fixed channel tuner to go with their present sets.

For residents of areas where several UHF channels can be received, full range tuners have been designed

In many new television areas, the projected coverage will include both types of service. And combination UHF-VHF sets are likely to be the industry's answer. These sets will probably gravitate toward the major population centers since the allocation plan envisages both services in all but three of the country's 50 major market areas.

In addition to tuners and combination sets, the public will probably have an opportunity to purchase various types of antenna for UHF reception. In the course of their long experimentation, RCA engineers designed numerous effective receiving antenna of remarkable varied shape. One of the simplest is known as a "bow-tie" and looks just like an enlarged version of this male neckwear. Another is known as a "Double V", and consists of two sets of dipoles (metal rods cut to a critical length) attached to a pole in the form of two V's. There is a parabolic antenna, with metal bars attached to a curving semi-circular shaft, and there is an antenna with the colorful name of "Yagi."

These are the antenna wihch in a few years might dot the rooftops of farms and ranches and city residences When new stations begin to go up, the industry will undoubtedly standardize on a few of many experimental antenna models, giving full consideration to both performance and sightliness.

The industry has already made formidable gains in overcoming the problem of designing UHF station transmitters with sufficient power to provide required area coverage. The first test models were one kilowatt, but units of from 10-12 kilowatts are now being tested.

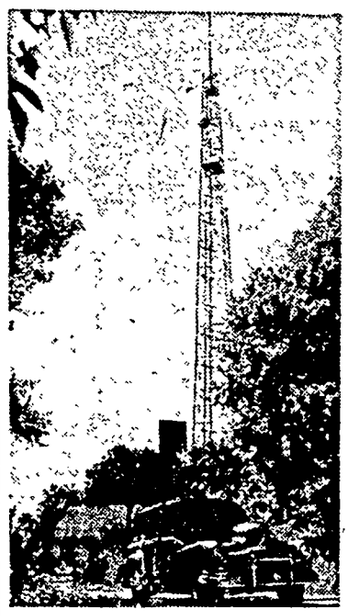
Ample Power

New gain antenna have also been developed, and the industry is looking toward UHF antenna that can radiate 200 kilowatts—more than ample power to meet nearly all conditions.

Of course, the UHF service has its limitations like every other service. UHF transmissions, like VHF, are dependent on line of sight between transmitting and receiving antennas. In addition, they are more directional and the location of transmitter sites is of prime importance. Mountains, hills and other physical impediments can block effective transmission.

In addition to promising television to presently vacant areas, UHF offers new hopes for thousands of set owners who live in "fringe" areas. These areas are on the outskirts of the effective telecast coverage from present VHF stations.

To obtain a home picture in these fringe areas, towering antennae are frequently required, and often the pictures are too faint and "noisy," and lack the contrast required for enjoyable home viewing



SUCCESS HILL—The lofty antenna of the Bridgeport UHF station towers over the white frame station house at the left. In the foreground is a station wagon equipped with UHF receiver and portable antenna. It has been used to test signal strength throughout the Bridgeport area. Station KC2XAK is the first and only UHF station in the country to operate on a regular daily basis. It is located on the crest of Success Hill on Bridgeport's outskirts.

New stations are the obvious answer to fringe viewing, but if they are VHF stations they might conflict with the signal, however faint, from the more distant VHF transmitters.

With UHF, however, new stations with new channels can go up in the very shadow of existing transmitters and a clear, bright picture can be enjoyed by everyone.

A small Cape Cod cottage which sits atop a wooded hill on the outskirts of Bridgeport, Conn., is the cradle of a new electronic science. For two years, field tests on the transmission of television signals in the upper regions of the air waves have centered around the cottage Out of these tests has come a new system of video transmission that will soon have a very real impact on the life of residents of Tazoo City, Miss., and Thief River Falls, Minn., and Wolf Point, Mont.

Center of Interest

Despite its lack of pretension, the cottage has been a prime attraction in recent months for government leaders, for scores of executives in the radio and television industry, for some of the nation's outstanding electronic scientists, engineers and technicians. Even the Connecticut State Police have been lured there for extra-curricular duties.

Since December 30, 1949, the little cottage on Success Hill has housed the first and only Ultra-High Frequency television station in the nation which operates on a regular daily basis. It has been the field headquarters for the television industry's march into the untapped UHF band.

The station was built by the Radio Corporation of America and the National Broadcasting Company as the culminating move in a long campaign to find sufficient space in the air waves for a national television service. A lofty 250-foot UHF transmitting tower was erected outside the cottage. The interior was stocked with television transmitting equipment. Inside, it looked much like any other station, but its special tubes and circuits were designed for UHF rather than VHF channels now standard for video transmissions.

Bridgeport was picked for the field tests because the undulations of its terrain make line-of-sight television transmission difficult. In addition, it lies in a "fringe" television area, picking up remote signals from New York and New Haven.

Under these extreme test conditions, the Bridgeport station, which was given the experimental designation of KC2XAK by the Federal Communications Commission, began picking up the video signals of Station WNBT, the National Broadcasting Company's New York outlet which beams off the Empire State antenna. These signals, in turn, were rebroadcast via UHF to Bridgeport area.

To pick up this broadcast, engineers of the RCA Victor Division designed and built 50 UHF experimental sets, and 50 tuners to permit present set owners to receive both UHF and VHF telecasts.

The test equipment, together with various experimental receiving antennas, was installed in local homes within a 25 mile radius of Success Hill. In about half the homes, there were no receivers and service men installed both UHF and VHF antennas. This permitted comparison of the pictures picked up direct from New York and New Haven with those beamed over the Bridgeport experimental unit.

There were hundreds of offers of voluntary cooperation from residents of Bridgeport and its suburbs. The homes selected for the tests were carefully spotted to obtain a full area study. Engineers made regular rounds of the test homes over a period of months to analyze the pictures and to compile reception ratings.

But even this was not enough for a full picture. A station wagon was equipped with precise measuring equipment and receivers, and a truck was fitted out with a collapsible antenna that could be quickly elevated.

Making Signal Patterns

Up and down parkways, highways, country roads and lanes, the unique electronic caravan rolled along with police cars fore and aft.

Nearly all of the television industry moved into Bridgeport on the invitation of RCA. Sixty-four manufacturers, in fact, descended on the industrial town to use the UHF signals. In hotel rooms, homes, stores and display rooms the technicians of the industry designed and set up equipment that would pick up the unwavering signal from Success Hill. They developed tuners to be attached to present sets; they perfected new antennas; they devised effective equipment for combined UHF-VHF reception.

Members of the Federal Communications Commission, headed by Wayne Coy, then chairman of the FCC, visited the workshop. RCA engineers and technicians maintained a steady flow of information into the Commission headquarters, and on the basis of this technical data the plan for a national service began to take shape. In August and September of 1951, Mr. Coy and more than a hundred engineers from TV stations throughout America attended demonstrations of the latest UHF equipment. They saw a clear, flickerless picture brought in by a variety of tuners.

At last UHF was ready Mr. Coy spoke of 3,000 television stations in America "soon," with two-thirds to three-quarters in the UHF band.

"I am sold on UHF," the FCC chairman declared, and the industry echoed his words.

Service to Mankind

Today, there are 2,400 AM and 680 FM radio stations in America. Daily broadcasts reach 95 per cent of the country. More than 105,000,000 radio sets have been sold. There are more than 43,000,000 radio equipped homes. It can be claimed, without exaggeration, that in a quarter-century radio has become as much a household utility as the electric light or the telephone.

All signs indicate that television will acquire a comparable status in the next decade. The industry, in typical private enterprise fashion, has gambled millions on the perfection of VHF and the development of UHF. It has paved the way for small-town television, and the speed with which the small towns capitalize on this opportunity is in part a local question.

Under FCC procedure, television station license applications will be accepted for a fixed period. It is then the responsibility of local people—businessmen, educators, newspaper publishers, bankers, labor and religious leaders—to see that local license applications are filed and that the opportunity does not go by default.

The government won't build the stations. The broadcast industry operates under the old American tradition of free enterprize. Industry can provide the equipment, the government can provide the license, but the people of America—must make the final decision on whether their towns will be linked to the world via television.

SHORT STORY

With All The Fixings

By Michael Tiff

AS USUAL, stepping out of the exclusive Bankers and Manufacturers Club building, I felt that I had a lot to say to the world in general and to my favorite shoeshine boy, Mickey McKensie, in particular. In fact, I was overjoyed to see him coming toward me through the crowded sidewalk, with his business stock and equipment housed in a crudely constructed box with a shoe rest. The feeling of satisfaction within me, born of recent pyramidic successes in the stock market, glowed with pleasant warmth; and I wanted presently to transmit that glow to Mickey himself.

3-Minute Fiction

"Hi, Mr. Crowley. Shine?"

"You bet, Mickey. How's your business?"

"Okay. Mr. Crowley. How's your business?"

"Okay, Mickey."

I watched him again with satisfaction. I approved of the way he worked, with his long sandy hair falling from one side to the other as his slight body swayed to his task.

Noticing Mickey's curious glances at the other members of the club walking into or out of the building in greater numbers than usual, I informed him, "Today is the anniversary—the hundredth—of the Bankers & Manufacturers' Club. Nice sunny day for it, too."

"Sure's an old club. I once belonged to a club, too. It was a hiking club. But I got plenty o' walking all day looking for customers, so I lit out of it."

"I'm doing pretty well right now, Mr. Crowley, with my own business."

I was suddenly interested in his personal life—and I was positive Mickey had one. "I suppose, after your day's work is done, you can't wait until you're in a movie theatre watching your favorite Western hero? Eh, Mickey?"

I expected, when he raised his rather large blue eyes, to see them aglow with sudden fire. Instead they were quite calm, perhaps skeptical. "The movies are oke, Mr. Crowley, but they're mostly for kids."

"TELL ME, Mickey, what do you like to do besides shining shoes?"

"Eat, Mr. Crowley. Just eat. My specialty's hot dogs and—fishcakes. But gimme hot dogs any time—with lots o' mustard and onions and saurkraut. 'Course I go for fishcakes too. But hot dogs is my specialty. When I get home mom's got potatoes and beef stew and that's okay with me. But I always sneak down to the hot dog stand on the corner with two or three nickels—sometimes as many as six—and get myself hot dogs with all the fixings."

"Guess I'm just about the hot-dog-catenest guy in the city. Gosh! Guess I'm always hungry for 'em. Mom says I got a barrel for a stomach, always going after eats the way I do. But mom's a pretty good sport anyway for letting me have some of the nickels I take in over the day."

I could tell, by the rapt expression on Mickey's gold-flecked face, that he was mentally immersed in those delicious frankfurters, with "all the fixings"—concocted by this genius Mike. That small tongue of his seemed to move faster as if it were curling about a portion of his favorite delight. I could almost taste with him that incomparable flavor, laden with the essence of onions, mustard and saurkraut. But Mickey was straightening up and packing his brush, his rags, his cans of polish back into the crude little box. His small grimy palm hovered toward me and with a burst of generosity, I placed on the little hardened palm not one nickel but three. I watched the freckles for the sign of joy. But a man happened to pass close by me at the moment, one of my fellow club members, and he placed a brotherly hand on my shoulder.

"Fred," he called me by my first name, of course, "don't you forget the dinner tonight. Hundredth anniversary of the club, you know And it's going to cost you just one hundred dollars for your plate, whether you come or not. Cheap at that."

One hundred dollars a plate! I saw Mickey pocket the three nickels I had given him and when I looked into his eyes, they stared back at me, very wide and very blue, and I had nothing to say.

Fellowship Supreme

Lesson for April 6, 1952

THE church of the twentieth century is taking a beating. We are living in one of the dark eras when the Christian church in large parts of the world is on the retreat. One-sixth of the earth's surface, that used to be called "Christian," is now dominated by anti-religious powers.

Dr. Foreman

There were once 8,000 missionaries in China where now there are 200, and the number is growing fewer still. An inquiring minister in Georgia recently asked a number of American church leaders whether they thought we can call the United States a "Christian" nation. Most of them said No, and most of them thought that America is at present slipping farther away from Christ.

• • •

What Did the Early Church Have That We Haven't?

NOW the question is: What did the early church have that we don't have? Why did they succeed where we have not been succeeding?

One quality which was strong in the early church, weak today, is fellowship. Let us first see what the New Testament idea of fellowship is not. It is not organization. It was not any one Big Man or Big Church or any pattern of organization that made the early church "click." Also, it was not simple nearness.

For many persons today, "belonging to the same church" with another person means no more than that on occasional Sundays they find themselves sitting within a few yards of each other. They do not know each other's names, perhaps, much less take any personal interest in each other's affairs.

Furthermore, the New Testament does not hold up subscription to a creed as the main feature of fellowship. All mathematics teachers believe in the truth of algebra and geometry, but that does not make a fellowship out of mathematics teachers. So you can have several hundred or several thousand people repeating the same Creed without ever being a fellowship or even knowing what the word means.

No Tinker-Toy Business

ONE thing that fellowship did mean, when it meant something, Jesus made very plain. It is like the life of a growing vine. You cannot think of the branches without the vine, nor of the vine without the branches.

Carrying on the same idea, Paul (I Cor. 12) speaks of the church as the "body" of Christ. Christian fellowship is first of all an intimate growing-in te the life of Christ, sharing the same life with him.

You can make a tinker-toy man with two arms or no arms, you can pull the legs and arms out and stick them in again as you like, because the tinker-toy man is not real, it is only blocks and sticks. But you cannot stick branches in and pull them out of a vine like that; much less pull legs and arms out of a living body.

If the church today is weak, it is because too many individual "members" are not members of Christ. They belong to the church, statistically speaking; but they do not belong to Christ.

Belonging to One Another

ANOTHER thing that fellowship means, grows out of this first thing. The New Testament idea—the New Testament fact—is that all Christians are parts of one another, just as all parts of a living thing belong to one another.

It is quite true that not every one in the church then understood this, or Jesus and Paul would not have had to speak and write as they did. But the church at large did understand it. Every church then was a kind of family, indeed often a much better family than that into which its members had first been born.

Although each Christian was himself, indeed a new self ("If any man is in Christ, he is a new creation," Paul said), yet in the church every one belonged to every one else, just as in a good family. The good of one was the happiness of all; the sorrow and trouble of one was the trouble of all; the temptation of one gave the others an opportunity to fight for his rescue.

The church, when it IS the church, is the fellowship supreme, the united life, the life of God shared by those who love him and one another.

Perhaps the best thing the Christian church today could do, instead of getting more "members" who are not members, would be to rediscover and re-practice New Testament fellowship. Such a church would begin to win victories again.

"So you wanna be an accomplice!"

"Take a bet on this skinner for me and I'll even be your personal bodyguard, spy and character witness, Joe."

"Get this. I'm through with the horses. When a bookie has to keep books, records and a personal diary open to the public, the police and government agents, I ain't even taking bets on cowboy ponies to show up in the westerns."

THE WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

BY...DREW PEARSON

Morris Nearly Quits

THE WHITE HOUSE has hushed it up, but clean-up man Newbold Morris came within a whisker the other day of packing his bags and going home. He was stopped at the last minute by a personal appeal from President Truman, himself.

The inside story is that Morris, depressed over the runaround he was getting, decided that his assignment was "impossible." He announced his decision to quit at a routine conference with Justice department officials.

"I'm going home," he declared simply. "This thing hasn't been thought through. For example, I'm supposed to report my investigations to the very man I'm supposed to be investigating."

Morris was referring, of course, to his boss—Attorney General McGrath.

Within a few minutes, however, word of Morris's surprise decision was flashed to the White House, and presidential aide Charlie Murphy was rushed to Morris's office.

Talking fast, Murphy urged the new trouble-shooter to talk it over with President Truman, and promptly hustled him to the White House. Within half an hour, Morris was in the oval room conferring earnestly with the President.

Truman begged Morris to stay on, promised him a free hand and guaranteed full White House support.

"You can have anything you want," the President offered.

Message to Moscow

School children across the nation are participating in the Messages-to-Moscow campaign. Many of the messages will soon be heard behind the iron curtain via the powerful radio beams of the Voice of America and will help offset Moscow's propaganda about American "warmongers."

Here, for example, is the kindly and straightforward message from a 19-year-old veteran of the Korean war—Purple Heart winner Garland Roberts, a junior at Pineville high school, West Virginia:

"My message is not a message of bitterness. Although I am only nineteen years old, I have fought in one of the most conflicting wars of the century—the Korean.

"Your nation is often accused of starting this war, yet I do not feel malice toward you. There must be many of you who have suffered more than I. Every American realizes that much is forced upon you.

"America and her people would like to see the Russian people free in a democratic nation with all the rights that we in America enjoy.

"I know that you, being my age, feel and act the same way as I; and that you would enjoy our democratic form of government.

"It is a great thing to be free and to live without knowing fear and unhappiness."

American Prisoners

While the public anxiously watches U.N. truce negotiations to free American prisoners in Korea, many Ex-G.I.s who were prisoners during the last war wonder if congress will ever get around to settling claims arising out of their imprisonment.

Though congressional hearts bleed profusely for G.I. prisoners of the Communists, some of the same congressmen are secretly trying to whittle down or completely eliminate the funds to compensate U.S. war prisoners for work they performed while prisoners of Italy, Germany or Japan. Though these payments won't cost the American taxpayers a single cent, congress is strangely reluctant to O.K. them.

The Geneva convention provided that a nation which captures enemy prisoners in wartime must pay these men for labor performed as prisoners. Accordingly, after World War II, we concluded agreements with the German, Italian and Japanese government, under which congress appropriated a total of $169,000,000 to pay enemy prisoners for work done for us.

However, believe it or not, congress is now considering turning this alien property back to German, Italian and Japanese nationals, rather than paying American P.O.W.s.

There are a total of 14 bills now before the house interstate and foreign commerce committee—several of them already passed by the senate—which would return the property to certain classes of former enemy nationals.

Worried McGrath

Old senate friends who have dropped in on Attorney General Howard McGrath recently are shocked at the change in him.

Usually genial and self-confident, McGrath now complains to visitors: "I'm being hounded. Nothing I say or do is right. Every time I make a statement, it's distorted. Even in my own state, the people don't get an accurate picture of what I'm trying to do."

A Derby Hopeful in Every Stable

By GRANTLAND RICE

EARLY DERBY BIRDS are now flitting or fluttering from limb to limb. They are covering a big part of the national landscape. Almost more than Uncle Bill Corum's active eyes can follow.

A few of them are busy around Santa Anita. This list includes two strong challengers from the Vanderbilt stable—Cousin and Whither—both high-grade candidates.

Grantland Rice

Mrs. Warren Wright, Ben and Jimmy Jones have a stout contender in Hill Gail. Buddy Hirsch is working desperately on two possible starters and so is dapper Cliff Mooers, who has good stock.

But there are other hot selections as far away as Florida and South Carolina. One of these is a Greentree horse labeled Tom Fool. Another is a well-liked possibility known as Primate Primate can be extremely dangerous. And down around Hialeah Jack Amiel, owner of the Kentucky Derby winner for 1951, is spilling quite a bunch of oratory about another Derby winner (maybe) known as Count Flame.

"I told practically everybody in hearing distance last spring that Count Turf would win the Derby," Amiel says. "Almost nobody believed me—but Count Turf won just the same. I am now telling everybody around that Count Flame, another son of Count Fleet, will win the 1952 Kentucky Derby. Nobody believes me. But Count Flame will either be there or quite close Any son of Count Fleet is dangerous. He was a great thoroughbred—up in the same class with Man o' War and Citation. Watch Count Fleet horses this year, wherever they run" Certainly John Hertz will give nobody an argument about this statement

At the moment out along the Pacific Coast Hill Gail and Whither—Calumet and Vanderbilt—have looked better than any of the others. But they haven't tangled up with a Primate or a Tom Fool. Or a Count Flame, as Jack Amiel might add. It would be quite a stunt, at that, to see Mr Amiel repeat There's no law against it.

Cheerful Gang

As a rule a trainer is about as optimistic as a football coach He can only scent disaster. The owner is usually the optimist—but rarely the trainer.

Amiel's trainer didn't think enough of Count Turf to make the Kentucky trip. Ben Jones has never been a loud cheerer for any of his horses. Before the 1949 Derby he told me that he wouldn't bet a quarter on Ponder at long odds.

But in spite of early floods and endless January gray days, the trainers are mostly in a jovial mood.

Bill Winfrey, head man of Al Vanderbilt's stable, confesses that most of his thoroughbreds are either sharp—or getting sharp.

"No complaint so far," Bill says. "We have some that can run."

Even the ever-careful Ben Jones and his son Jimmy admit that Hill Gail is better than they first thought and that he has a pretty fair chance of taking over the $100,000 Santa Anita Derby. "Hill Gail is our best bet — with A Gleam a definite possibility," Ben says. "Hill Gail wasn't at his best when he ran in the Futurity at Belmont. He had a bad leg, as we discovered later. Windy City II ran a great race to beat Hill Gail and A Gleam in the San Gabriel Stakes but Hill Gail's an improving horse and he may be quite useful before the season is over."

Hill Gail will take a shot at both Derbies—Santa Anita and Churchill Downs Hill Gail is another Bull Lea production and Ben Jones is dead sure that the old Bull has many winners left.

It was interesting to know that Hialeah's fast getaway means another big spring for Florida's extremely fine track.

Back to Jim Thorpe

In the last half century what athlete did England ever turn out even close to Jim Thorpe? Jim could win an Olympic decathlon and pentathlon. He could run and jump, vault and hurdle. Jim was a football star and a baseball big leaguer He could have handled the British Empire alone. So why does an English sports writer say U.S. athletes are sissies?

Since then a long, long list of double and triple stars in various sports, outside of Jim Thorpe, have appeared on the scene.

One of the greatest was Neil Snow of Michigan—1901 Snow was a great defensive end and offensive fullback He was brilliant at both jobs Stanford will recall him Snow was a 420 hitter on Michigan's baseball team. He was offered big-league jobs all over the map. Snow was a star track and field entry—shot put, high jump and several other events. He was one of Michigan's greatest stars and still sung there.

This country has been packed with athletes who were never specialists. I'll admit that modern football is developing the specialist with its double-platoon system. One big-time coach told me, "I've got two fine ball carriers who can tackle just as well. But they refuse to tackle, or play their share of defense.

American Farmer Big User of Electricity

A startling ten-year rise in farm electrification has made the American farmer one of the nation's biggest users of electric power.

The farmer is now receiving more than twice as much farm high-line service as in 1940. Moreover, the amount of electricity used by farmers has increased nearly five times, and the average use per farmer has more than doubled.

American farms are now using in excess of 15 billion kilowatt hours of electricity a year, while in 1940 they consumed only 3½ billion In addition, the number of farms serviced by electric power—about two million in 1940—has leaped to approximately five million. The average kilowatt hours of power used per farm, exclusive of irrigation projects in the West, has increased from about 1000 ten years ago to 2300 today.

The farmer is just beginning on the road toward complete rural electrification. Many new electric devices will be aiding the farmer in his struggle for higher output. Things like automatic poultry feeders, crop-drying equipment, automatic barn cleaners, silo unloaders, wagon unloaders, and feed handling equipment are all a part of the American farmer's future.

THE FARM OUTLOOK

By Paul Henderson,
County Extension Director

Prime beef steers continue scarce at the nation's livestock markets. And prices are firm to strong. But the story is different for cattle grading from low choice on down to commerical. Supplies of these grades are rising and the price is weakening, Francis A. Kutish extension farm economist at Iowa State College reports.

The wholesale market likewise reflects the storage of top grade beef steers and relative plenty of soft-corn cattle. Prime steer carcasses are selling slightly higher in New York today than they were at the first of the year. But commerical carcasses are off nearly $1.50 per hundred pounds.

Further price weakness on cattle grading commerical to low choice seems probable in the coming weeks. There is a lot of soft corn cattle in the country to come to market, Kutish believes. But prime cattle remain in a strong position.

Short Feeding

Meanwhile, farmers with the feed available should find a promising outlook for a profitable short-feeding program. Kutish expects that once the current influx of soft-corn cattle has run its course, the whole cattle market will stiffen. He believes that the present shortage of well-finished cattle is an indicator of slim supplies of corn-fed beef this summer. Recent placements of feeder cattle into the Corn Belt have been below last year, too.

There will be fewer hogs on the market this summer. Early farrowings in Iowa are down about 25% of a year ago. All this should add up to a strong cattle and hog market for the summer months in the opinion of Kutish.

Soybean Prospects

Two forces lie behind the bearish price outlook for soybeans: One is the ceiling on soybean meal which is preventing the price of soybean meal from reflecting the true market clearing price. The other is the weak soybean oil market.

Prices of edible vegetable oils have been declining for a number of months and now are at a level substantially below a year earlier. Total use of these oils is about the same as a year ago. But supplies are much greater. February 1 stocks this year were the largest for that date in many years. In response, prices have declined substantially — although until recently a very heavy export demand retarted the rate of decline, according to Kutish.

There are reports nearly every week of processors shutting down, rather than entering new contracts for sale of meal and oil at a loss. Most of the soybeans left are in farmer's hands. And farmers appear sitting tight with their beans.

Kutish believes that something will have to give pretty soon. Either ceilings on soybean meal will have to raised—or the price of soybean oil go up—or the price of soybeans go down.

Ell Tip-Toppers Hold Meeting

The Ell Tip-Toppers met at the home of Jane Renner on March 29. Pres. Delores Thieman called the meeting to order. 14 members answered roll call by telling of a safety hazard they had removed. Eva Thieman volunteered to insert the safety posters for April. We chose our demonstration teams, Daisy Schaefer and Delores Thieman will be on the Senior team and Gracka Gerardi and Doreen Lackore will be on the Junior team.

Sharon Blau gave a talk on "pictures of well balanced meals." LaVohn Josten gave a talk, "Place of vegetables in our diet." Eva Thieman and Gracka Gerardi gave a demonstration on "How to properly set a table," Luaine Weiland gave a talk, "How to use left overs to make interesting meals."

Daisy Schaefer gave a demonstration on Salads. We said the pledge and sang 4-H songs. The next meeting is at Luaine Weiland's on April 19. Lunch was served by the hostess and her mother.

Contract Let For Kanawha Road Paving

Ronald Kenyon and Co. of Des Moines were the successful bidders on 1.06 miles of type A concrete paving at Kanawha at a letting held at Ames recently, according to C. F Merten, Hancock County Engineer. The paving will begin at the west edge of the cemetery west of Kanawha and run east through the town of Kanawha, a distance of 1.06 miles. The contract price was $76,726.11 and work will get under way as soon as possible.

There were four bidders on the project with a high bid of $90,894.73 and the low bid above listed. The improvement is a farm-to-market project and Hancock County Supervisors are expected to concur with the State Highway Commission in the awarding of the contract to the low bidder.

Hired Man, or Machinery?

"I wouldn't have a hired man," Pete Miller told Fred Purdy the other day.

"Heck," said Fred, "a hired man's more help than all your extra farm machinery."

And so they argued on. Now, Pete and Fred are best of friends. But they have their differences about hired men versus machinery, as many farmers do. Of course, there are good points on both sides.

But, from where I sit, why not have BOTH hired man and good machinery? No use getting prejudiced in an argument, and closing our minds to the advantages of both.

It would be the same thing as Pete trying to stop Fred from having his coffee, three meals a day . . . or Fred stopping Pete from enjoying his temperate glass of beer at supper each evening. Each has the sensible right to figure things out for himself, whether in farm management or a favorite beverage . . . and neither one would stand it for a minute if the right were taken away.

The firm was granted the contract at an adjourned letting at the courthouse Monday.

FARMERS ASKED TO PLANT MORE CORN

Hancock County farmers are asked to take another look at their spring planting plans and increase their corn acreage wherever possible.

The suggestion comes from A. E. Rasmussn, chairman of the County PMA Committee & is based on the intentions to plant report issued a few days ago by the United States Department of Agriculture.

According to the chairman, feed production needs particular attention. The report indicates that for the nation as a whole farmer's feed crop planting intentions are about 9 million acres below goal. Production at normal yields would result in use of practially all feed grain reserves and possible reduction in livestock production.

Intended plantings of corn, the most important feed grain, are indicated for the nation at about 5 million acres below the goal of 89 million acres.

The 1952 corn acreage goal for Hancock County is 138,908. For Iowa it is 11,300,000 acres or 6% more than planted in 1951. The PMA chairman pointed out that the goal for this state can be met if each farmer will boost his corn planting on an average of six additional acres for every 100 put into corn last year.

Wednesday Evening Club

The Wednesday evening Club met at the home of Mrs Jack Etchen. High scores were won by Mrs. Orvel Bridges and second high by Mrs. M. L. Harson. A nice lunch was served.

Paralels Often In News In Both War and Peace

Like the 38th parallel, currently famous because the Communists chose to try to convert its 200-mile length across the Korean Peninsula into an iron curtain, many another surveyed segment of latitude and longitude has had its day in court.

A few careful looks at maps of the continents, however, and it soon becomes apparent that such lines have but rarely formed boundaries in the Old World. It is in the United States, Canada, and Australia almost exclusively that straight-line borders, predominantly east-west or north-south, appear.

In contrast to Europe and Asia, where most countries and divisions within countries are defined by the crooked lines of natural boundaries, straight-line borders are common north of the Rio Grande all the way to Alaska In fact, no state of the Union nor mainland province of Canada is outlined wholly by natural boundaries.

Outstanding is the 1,269-mile stretch of the 49th parallel from Lake of the Woods at the top of Minnesota west to the Strait of Georgia in British Columbia. For more than a century it has formed the western third of the ungarrisoned United States-Canada border, model of international amity. Point Roberts at its western end and Northwest Angle at its eastern end are tiny United States enclaves The existence of each as such is an interesting story in itself.

In 1818 a boundary treaty with Great Britain established the 49th parallel as the international fence from Lake of the Woods to the summit of the Rockies in western Montana. A year later, Spain, conveying Florida to the United States, gave up western land claims north of parallel 42. Thus was determined what still survives as the southern line of Oregon and Idaho.

Hibokhibok Explosion Worst In History of Mountain

The mounting death toll in the eruption of Hibokhibok mountain on Camiguin island near Mindanao threatens to brand the 5,620-foot peak as the Philippine Islands' most destructive volcano.

Hibokhibok has caused death and devastation in the past, but its previous explosions did not approach the latest one for violence and loss of life. It went through a five-year period of activity from 1871 to 1876, when most of the island's residents were evacuated

The volcano then lay quiet until September, 1948, when a new explosion again forced evacuation. More than two-thirds of the 50,000 inhabitants were moved to Mindanao, only six miles away, to escape the spouting steam, gas, lava and volcanic ash. Five persons were killed in the 1948 eruption. Almost exactly two years later the mountain erupted again, bringing death to 84 persons.

The latest explosion recalls the 1,400 killed in the disastrous 1911 eruption of Mt. Taal, on an island in little Lake Taal, 39 miles south of Manila.

The Philippines' most famous volcano is Mt. Mayon in southeastern Luzon, a symmetric cone nearly 8,000 feet high that has been violent more than 30 times since 1800.

Although Hibokhibok enjoyed long periods of quiet, and was even thought to be extinct after 1876, its name indicates violence in the past. Hibokhibok, in Malay, means "unrest."

Camiguin island is a tiny oval of land measuring 13½ by nine miles, with an area about four times that of Manhattan. Hibokhibok is the highest peak of the island's central mountain range.

Scientific Names

The scientific names of animals are formed in Latin and follow the two-name system introduced by the Swedish naturalist Linnaeus about 1758. The first name, which is capitalized, is that of the genus, the larger group, while the second, which is uncapitalized, is the species. Thus, the common dog is Canis familiaris. The wolf, however, is Canis lupus, that is, it belongs to the same genus but a different species. Similarly the genus Felis includes the house cat, Felis catus; the tiger, Felis tigris; the lion, Felis leo; the mountain lion, Felis cougar; etc. Zoologically man is called Homo sapiens. This is the only living species in the genus Homo, although some prehistoric men, now extinct, belonged to other species. For example Neanderthal man, who lived about 100,000 years ago, is called Homo neanderthalensis, named after the valley in Germany where his remains were first discovered.

Largest Forest Fire

There are reports in Russian literature of a huge forest fire in Russia in 1915, which covered some 24,700,000 acres of land (more than the whole state of Indiana) and caused a loss of over 200 billion feet of timber. If this is correct, it was greater than any fire on record in the United States. According to the U.S. Forest Service, the largest known to have occurred in this country was one in Maine and New Brunswick in October, 1825. This swept over three million acres and caused the loss of 160 human lives. Even more calamitous was the Peshtigo fire in Wisconsin in October, 1871. It covered 1,280,000 acres and wiped out several towns and settlements, with 1500 people killed

Hearing Postponed

The hearing on the final estimate of Lee I. Osborne on a cleanout of the main ditch and lateral No, 5 of Hancock County drainage District 13 which was scheduled for March 24 was postponed to 1:30 p. m. on April 14. The hearing was postponed because of the heavy snow which covered the ground making it impossible to check the work done on the project. The adjourned hearing will be held at the courthouse in Garner.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Wasted Youth

"IT'S BECAUSE my daughter's tragic story is typical of many others that I'm writing you," says a letter from Thelma Dellenbaugh of St. Paul. "We want to know how we managed so badly with our Marie Eileen.

"What I will call the wrongness of her life began when she was a child of 12. She then was accustomed to permanent waves and lipstick and she was the prettiest girl in school. Boys flocked about her and for two or three years she went steady with more than one At 14 the question of evening dates began, first in groups, for the movie and for sodas afterward — it sounded perfectly safe. By this time some of the boys had cars, and others, whom we knew, would occasionally borrow our car. Hours got later and later, and on Saturday and Sunday mornings I would look into her room to see Marie still sound asleep, pretty clothes tumbled on the floor, lips still red, hair in pin curlers. She would be tired all day, but fresh as a daisy to go out the next night.

They Tried Hard

"Oh, we tried! Charley and I tried to maintain rules; in bed by ten, school nights, and right after the dance or show other nights. But she always had excuses, and although she smoked she did not drink, and as I say, the other girls were going to the cabin week-end or off for the skiing, and what they did she did.

"None of these boys, of course, could suggest marriage, and at 17 they began to drop away. 'They go with the younger crowd,' she would say to me bitterly. She was tired out, nervous and pale, put on vitamins and a diet, and watched by the doctor. She cried easily and wanted to go to Boston and live with an older woman friend who was doing radio work there. For at least seven years life dragged for her. She had a good job and a dull steady admirer, but when they went to a movie Marie paid for her own ticket, and sometimes he borrowed money from her; there was no glamor to this affair.

"One day I asked her if in her young-girl love affairs she had ever gone too far and she answered indifferently that of course she had, that often when I had supposed her staying with a friend she had been having adventures in motor-camps with this boy and that, but that she hated the whole thing and only consented because the boys expected it.

Horrible Shock

"I won't tell you of the horrifying shock this was to me—I don't matter It was too late for change or reproaches and I didn't indulge in them. I just loved her, made her home as happy as I could, and shared with her the happiness of her brother's home and his little family. And at 29, she married, without much interest or any glow; her understanding with the good quiet man she married was that there were not to be children, and more than once she has deliberately, and I believe dangerously, avoided that possibility.

"What became of my girl's girlhood? The laughter, the girl friends, the beauty and bloom of her teens, the delight of an engagement, a wedding, the pride and flowering of young wifehood? All sacrificed to those few feverish years in which she did not know the danger of the edged tools with which she was playing, and destroyed her capacity for normal living as a woman. Where were we wrong, and what might have helped us?"

Well, Thelma, there are a few words that might have helped you, but you will have to look in the dictionary for them; they have gone out of use. Among them are such terms as duty, obedience, self-control, motherly advice and example, fatherly concern, a good home, quiet home hospitality, and rules laid down in affection and understanding while a little girl is still small enough to be impressed and controlled.

Girls,, as a matter of fact, like home restrictions when they are accompanied by plenty of home cooperation. They like to be the ones to say, "No, Daddy won't let us." They like to feel themselves precious, protected, secure.

Last year two fifteen-year olds were taken to the police court after a traffic accident in which a boy accompanying them was killed They came from presumably fine homes, but they were out on the highway at 2 in the morning so their mothers' agitated explanations fell rather flat.

"Miracle Drug" say SURIN Users

Pains of Arthritis, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Lumbago, Bursitis*: Relief Can Start In Minutes

There's no internal dosing with SURIN. Nothing to swallow and wait anxiously for relief. You simply apply SURIN right at the point of pain and blessed relief starts as penetration beneath the skin gets under way. Of course there's a reason for this wonder-working new external fast pain relief medicine.

It's methacholine, a recent chemical horn of research in a great laboratory. It acts speedily to aid penetration of SURIN's pain-quelling ingredients. Methacholine also causes deeper, longer-lasting pain relief and increased speed-up of local blood supply.

Tested on chronic rheumatics in large university hospital it brought fast relief to 73% patients and in home-for-the-aged 77%. Totally different from old-fashioned rubs and liniments, modern SURIN brings faster relief; longer without burning or blistering; without unpleasant odor or grease. Simply smooth on SURIN at the point of pain and feel pain ease in minutes. Money-back at your drug store if SURIN doesn't relieve muscle pain faster and better than anything you've ever used. A generous jar costs $1.25. *SURIN is not a cure for any of these conditions.

Tasty Cheese Makes Appetizing Snacks
(See Recipes Below)

Tasty Snacks

THERE ARE MANY occasions for snacks in every home, especially when the family is social. Perhaps you have people dropping in before dinner, and like to serve something in the living room whether they stay for dinner or not.

Then, too, there are evening get-togethers when a bit of snacking is in order. Perhaps you bring the evening to a close with a tasty snack, something not too much, but just enough to fill you, once the conversation or games have fanned the appetite.

Both men and women appreciate a snack which has some zest to it. If it's before dinner, a salty or tangy type of tidbit is indicated. After dinner and dessert, the same type of snack is in order since the sweet tooth has already been nourished with dessert.

Tangy meat spreads, tasty breads, salty crackers and various cheeses fill the snack role to perfection. Here are many suggestions from which to choose.

These tiered sandwiches may be made in advance and chilled. The base is a round loaf of pumpernickel bread and makes an attractive sandwich piece to set on a platter.

Tiered Sandwiches
(Makes 24 wedges)

- 3 ounces chive cheese
- 3 ounces relish cheese
- 1 6-ounce round loaf pumpernickel bread
- 3 ounces deviled ham
- 2 tablespoons catsup
- 2 ounces gruyere cheese
- 2 ounces very sharp cheese

Let cheese stand at room temperature until soft enough to spread. Remove bottom crust from pumpernickel. Cut three ½-inch thick slices crosswise. Spread one slice with chive cheese; cover with second slice of bread, spread with relish cheese. Cover with third slice of bread. Mix deviled ham and catsup; spread third slice. Cut gruyere and very sharp cheese portions in triangles and arrange on top layer of bread, alternately, with the pointed ends toward the center Chill thoroughly. Cut in wedges, following outline of cheese slices.

Rye bread can be made into tasty sandwiches with relish cheese and olive-pimiento cheese spreads. Wrapped in waxed paper, they'll keep in the refrigerator until serving time:

Cheese Rye Wedges
(Makes 44)

- 1 loaf salty rye bread, about 2½ inches in diameter
- 1 5-ounce jar relish cheese spread
- 1 5-ounce jar olive pimiento cheese spread

Slice rye bread into 66 slices about ⅛-inch thick. Set aside 11 slices. Spread remaining slices with cheese spreads, using about 1 teaspoon for each slice. Alternating the cheese spread, stack five slices together, topping each stack with one of the 11 unspread slices. Wrap stacks in waxed paper and chill thoroughly. Just before serving, cut each stack into four wedges.

Keep Snacks Interesting

Celery stalks can be filled with this mixture: mashed avocado seasoned with lemon juice, salt and onion juice.

Perhaps you like as a snack just a thin slice of bread with well-flavored butter. Ground shrimp mixed with an equal quantity of butter and a seasoning of lemon juice is delicious; ground ham mixed with half as much butter and some sieved egg yolk is appetizing.

Garlic Cheese Dip

- 1 6-ounce package garlic cheese
- ⅔ cup soured cream

Let cheese soften at room temperature, then beat until light and fluffy. Blend in soured cream and then chill until ready to serve.

Blue Cheese Spread

- ⅓ cup blue cheese
- ¼ cup cream cheese
- 2 tablespoons mayonnaise
- ¾ to 1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce
- Onion juice
- Lemon juice

Soften cheese and blend together with mayonnaise. Season with worcestershire sauce, onion and lemon juice to taste.

Deviled Ham Dip

- 4 tablespoons deviled ham
- 4 tablespoons horseradish
- 1 teaspoon grated onion
- 2 tablespoons minced chives
- 1 cup heavy cream, whipped

Blend deviled ham with horseradish, onion and chives. Fold in whipped cream and chill before serving.

Dried Beef Dip

- 6 ounces cream cheese
- 1 wedge blue cheese (about 1 ounce
- ½ cup dried beef, finely cut
- ½ small onion, grated
- 1 tablespoon horseradish
- 1 tablespoon mayonnaise

Let cheese soften at room temperature. Blend together both kinds, and then mix in other ingredients. Serve with crackers or potato chips.

Avocado Dip

- 4 strips bacon
- 2 avocadoes
- 1 tablespoon grated onion
- 1 tablespoon lime juice
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- ¼ cup mayonnaise

Dice bacon, fry until crisp, then drain. Peel avocadoes, mash fine and add lime juice and seasonings. Soften with mayonnaise and add bacon bits. This may be used for dipping or for a spread on crisp crackers.

• • •

When you want a hot appetizer, these little meat balls are tasty and easy to serve as well as to eat:

Spicy Meat Balls
(Makes 24)

- ½ pound ground beef
- 1 egg
- ¼ cup dry bread crumbs
- 1½ teaspoons minced onion
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon black pepper
- ¼ teaspoon prepared horseradish
- ⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
- Dash of tabasco sauce
- Grated American or Italian Style cheese

Combine all ingredients except cheese, blending well. Shape into tiny balls. Saute in hot fat until all sides are lightly browned, which will take about 4 minutes. Roll each ball in grated cheese. Insert toothpick and serve hot.

For a spicy snack to serve before dinner, try some thin slices of salmon spread with cream cheese, then wrap around 2-inch sticks of celery.

You'll like these hot tidbits to serve before a meal: spread strips of uncooked bacon with peanut butter; roll tightly, fasten with a toothpick and broil until bacon is crisp.

Like to stick tasty tidbits into a grapefruit for snacks? Wrap rolled anchovies in a half slice of bacon and broil until bacon is crisp. Or, wrap shrimp in bacon and broil.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

WALTER SHEAD, WNU Correspondent

Struggle for Peace

IN a dramatic international broadcast from the deck of the Coast Guard cutter Courier, President Harry S. Truman told the people of the world, and particularly those behind the iron curtain, of this nation's work to bring lasting peace to the world. It was a message over the heads of governments, beamed directly to the peoples of all nations.

The President's message recalls to mind his enunciation of the "Truman Doctrine" and a column this reporter wrote in April, 1947, just about five years ago. The same column is good today. Here it is:

"The impact of President Truman's new doctrine of American destiny—his new policy of embracing the principle of freedom as opposed to forces of disruption in the world—continues to have a sobering effect upon this nation's capital as the magnitude, the awesome aspects, and the grave import and implications of his words are studied and digested.

"As a matter of fact, President Truman's message did not contain or advance any new American doctrine, because such statements as America's interest in freedom-loving peoples of the world, our support of the world democracies, has been advocated and applauded for years. What the President's message did do, however, was to accompany these laudable words with a policy to be translated into action.

"Some high in government circles are aware of exactly what is entailed by support of the action. They accept it—Senator Vandenburg (since deceased) Senator Lodge, Senator Morse, Senator Aiken—all agreed that the President's action and his policy must be supported and carried out . . . a policy which places this nation in the breathtaking position of assuming its rightful place as a world power and the champion of all the down-trodden peoples of the earth, starting with a 400 million dollar loan to Greece and Turkey.

"This tremendous responsibility, the aftermath of war, strikes at the very security of every man, woman and child in America. It is in fact, a new call to arms, for as a result of this definite American policy these developments are likely to happen:

"The people of the nation in every home town in the land must be as united, as single of purpose, as we were in fighting a victorious war; the people must be ready to back up and accept compulsory military training; they must be willing to spend, not only the $400 million, but in all likelihood many more billions of dollars in the next few years; they must be willing to forego some of the luxuries of a hard-earned peace, for sharing dollars means sharing goods. It may mean a return to some government controls; it means there will be no tax reduction this year or probably next; it means that American ships and American men may be sent to seats of trouble throughout the world; it means a risk of war; it means that we oppose the spread of communism, and also of fascism or other isms which threaten 'attempts at subjugation by armed minorities or by outside pressures'; it means unqualified support of the four freedoms and the principles of the charter of the United Nations; it means continued full production of agriculture and industry; it means a strike in any large industry would be against the national interest; it is a must for management and labor to settle their differences; it means that government will remain in the market as a large buyer of food and commodities for defense and export; it means that prices likely will remain high; it means a continued bipartisan foreign policy is a must; it means this new Truman Doctrine will go down in history—much like the Monroe Doctrine, but expanded to world-wide proportions. It surely will mean more sweat and tears, but it very well may mean blood too.

No Halfway Mark

"So this tremendous new concept of the responsibility of this nation as a result of the last war must be either accepted wholly or rejected wholly by the American people; there can be no halfway mark. We must either take on the responsibility fully and with all our power and resources, or we must shut up shop in Europe, in China and elsewhere, close our doors and let Russia do what she will with the rest of the world. Those are the alternatives."

The Record

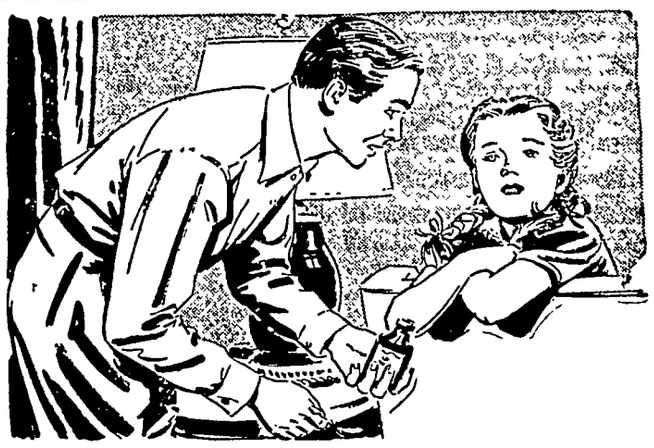
How have we as a nation met the tests during the past five years? Are we united and full of purpose to meet our responsibilities, or are we shattered by distrusts, by suspicions and lack of faith in our government? We have just turned down U.M.T. and we are chafing at controls. Have we permitted political mountebanks to divide us in order to conquer, or are we marching with closed ranks to obtain the high purpose of a dedicated nation?

NARROW ESCAPE . . . An hour before this picture was taken, a mortar shell burst a few feet from this soldier. One piece of shrapnel nicked his ear. With a hot canteen cup of coffee in his hand to steady his nerves, he sat down in the medical aid station to think it over.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Should You Tell Child What's Good?

By Lawrence Gould



Should you tell a child, "This is good for you"?

Answer: Not unless you have been more successful than most parents in keeping your child from feeling that what is good for him and what he likes are the opposite of each other. If there is a new dish you want to add to his diet, do not "oversell" it, because this will make him suspicious, but don't say it is "good for him," either. The best way will be to let him see that you eat and enjoy it, for seeing you enjoy something will dispose him favorably toward it more than anything you can say. This applies, of course, not only to food but to anything you want a child to cultivate a taste for. Don't just tell him—show him!

Does realism exclude faith?

Answer: By no means. There are aspects of reality which are unpleasant, especially from a childish standpoint, but it is no more "realistic" to expect the worst than to hope for the best. If there is something you want to accomplish, you will be wise to recognize the obstacles that stand in your way, but it is not as a rule unrealistic to believe that you can find how to surmount them, and "faith" of this kind will both release your energies and inspire you to go on trying. The fellow who "doesn't know when he is licked" may be just stubborn, but quite often the reality is that, in spite of appearance, he is not licked at all.

Do your friends try to "standardize" you?

Answer: Yes, say Dr. Leon Festinger and John Thibault, University of Michigan psychologists. In any small, face-to-face group there is a "pressure toward uniformity," with the bulk of members tending to "gang up on" the individuals whose opinions are most different from the average. The stronger the feeling of group solidarity (as in a fraternity) the more insistent will be the demand that everyone be pretty much like everyone else. One of the main reasons for belonging to a group is to protect yourself from the sense of dangerous isolation created by doing your own thinking, so that you tend to feel safest in a group whose members are "like-minded."

KEEPING HEALTHY

Heart Patients Form Defense Units

By Dr. James W. Barton

AS MOST OF US think of any form of heart disease as pracically a death sentence, it will come as a surprise to learn that the United States is forming a task force made up of patients with heart disease, to be organized by the U.S. office of defense mobilization under the medical direction of the American heart association. It is estimated that the group will number one million and a half.

In a news release from the American heart association, Dr. Theodore G. Clump, chairman of the task force of the handicapped, states that, to meet the nation's production goals, it will become vitally necessary to bring into defense work many with various forms of heart disease. The above organization of effort is operated under the work classification unit. This new development is restoring handicapped workers to productive employment.

Heart associations and other groups in several cities throughout the country have developed these units within the past year as part o a cardiovascular (heart and blood vessels) clinic or community rehabilitation center and plans are under way for the establishment of similar units in other areas.

A work classification unit is concerned with finding out the work capacity of its patients, based on medical diagnosis, and matching these abilities to types of job activities for which they are best suited by their physical condition.

After all, the country needs these handicapped individuals and it is certainly true that the handicapped want to do useful work. Nothing is more important than the maximum use of our human resources. It is a well-known fact that persons with heart impairments can make an important contribution toward meeting these man power needs if their work abilities are carefully estimated

The American heart association has prepared a guide for the cardiac-in-industry commission.

THE FARM OUTLOOK

By Paul Henderson, County Extension Director

Hancock farmers who are wondering what the trend in business will be over the coming months will be interested in a memorandum just released by the Federal Reserve Board. This study concluded that if our government and the banks follow the right debt management credit and tax policies, the defence program can be met without further inflation.

The Board's study pointed out that prices of basic commodities now are one-fifth below the peak levels of a year ago, but still are about one-sixth above pre-Korea figures. Instead of the inflation some were predicting, we have had nearly a year of fairly stable conditions at a high level of output.

Over the next few months, the Federal Reserve Board forsees little change in general business activity. Business inventories are high--manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, all have large stocks of goods and materials on hand. Capacity to produce is greater than ever.

On the other hand, Federal spending for security is continuing to expand. And businessmen are planning to continue their present peak outlays for new factories and factory equipment.

Consumers Hold Key

Key to the outlook for the next few months is held by consumers. And here the Federal Reserve considers some shift upward in the rate of consumer spending more likely than a shift downward.

Looking farther ahead, over the next year or more, the Feral Reserve Board believes that international tension will continue a powerful influence in the economic situation--even though settlement of the Korean conflict could lead to further uncertainty in sensitive markets. In any event, large increases in outlays over present spending for national securities still are in prospect.

Lamb Market Improves

The fed lamb market may have passed the low point for the season, Francis A. Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist believes. Receipts are showing signs of falling off soon. And the wholesale dressed lamb market in the East has stiffened considerably.

There are fewer wethers in Texas, because of the dry weather there. And the spring lamb crop is both smaller and later. Prices of old-crop fed lambs probably will strengthen over the next 60 days.

AWARD DRAINAGE DITCH CONTRACT

Earl Stille, Garner drainage contractor, was the successful bidder on the construction of Hancock County drainage district No. 157 at a letting at the courthouse Wednesday, Stille was low of two bidders and the successful bid was $4,046.

Work on the project which is a new drainage district located at Goodell, will get underway by May 1 and must be completed by Aug. 1, 1952. C. F. Merten was appointed construction engineer on the project and William Boehnke, Charles Goll and Engineer Merten all of Garner were named by Hancock County supervisors to classify lands and assess benefits in the watershed of the newly established district.

Republican Convention Adopts Program Written By Farmers

GOP ADOPTS FARM PLANK

DES MOINES—THE Iowa Republican convention Friday adopted a 14-point plank including the farm plank of the Iowa Republican Farm Council. The platform committee report drew no opposition on the floor.

The farm plank is expected to be submitted for the consideration of the party's national convention.

No changes were made in the council suggestions, as previously announced. These proposed an ever-normal granary, local control of farm programs established by a bi-partisan board and a permanent system of standby agricultural price supports for distress periods.

The plank on foreign policy said: "We cannot retreat to our own shores and abandon other peace loving nations."

The resolutions did not mention the Taft-Hartley act by name but said as to labor:

"We favor the present labor-management relations act, subject to changes which experience may indicate necessary."

Another plank recommended that the proposed national presidential preference primary be favorably considered by the legislatures of the various states.

On the matter of controls the platform said " we deplore the continuation of so-called emergencies for the sole purpose of retaining controls over our economy by the executive branch of our government."

A plank on graft and corruption said the Republican party "resolves and pledges to return to his country, honest and decent moral government and restore the public confidence in our national government by selecting leaders of high personal integrity."

Sportsmen Plan Eagle Lake Improvement Project

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

How patient he was. He sat in the car, his head leaning forward on the steering wheel, and waited without moving. He made no comment when red flares blazed in the night 200 yards up the highway.

He didn't look up when two highway patrol cars pulled in on either side of the highway and sent their flashing red lights up and down the road.

He didn't call out when shadowy groups of men along the bank with flashlights, and, when someone, a woman, kept asking "who is it? who is it?" he volunteered no answer.

And still he did not move when a photographer came and stood on the bank of the road and took pictures though the flash of the bulbs gleamed on the bald spot on the top of his head. He had learned such patience that he was beyond vanity and how quickly he had learned it.

Less than half an hour before the lights and the flares clustered around him, he had been driving comfortably through the night, the radio tuned to music, the engine tuned quietly to 65 miles an hour.

In the distant that a black, unlighted car loomed in front of him, he learned that he had been driving too fast for his headlights.

A few careening, rolling seconds later, his car stopped upright and he leaned his head on the steering wheel and learned the ultimate patience of death.

So he waited and from all of him that could be seen in the flashes of light from the highway, he seemed to be only a patient man who had learned something that needed to be considered deeply and without interruption.

WIND AND SUNSHINE PAST WEEK HELPED DRY FIELDS

Although the temperature the past week was a bit on the cool side, most of the days were filled with sunshine and plenty of wind which was a big help in drying out fields, so now it begins to look like that farmers can get their seeding done in good time.

The local farmers elevator has had a crew working night and day cleaning and treating seed the past week.

Streets in town have improved greatly with the drying weather and working with the grader.

SOME SEEDING DONE PAST WEEK IN THIS COMMUNITY

With sunshine and wind, the fields dried out the past week and a few farmers did some seeding the last of the week and many more by now have completed their seeding while more will be seeded this wek end as fields dry out.

Busy Bees Meet

The Liberty Busy Bees held their monthly meeting March 15 at the home of Eunice Hueneman. We decided to have a Sr. and Jr. demonstration team. The senior team consists of Bethel Haberkamp and Eunice Hueneman, the junior team of Pat Legge and JoAnn Greiman. A demonstration "How to Fix Barbecued Burgers" was given by Eunice Hueneman. Mary Alice Baggs gave a talk "How to Fix Leftovers." A lunch was served by the hostess.

EAGLE LAKE MANAGEMENT AND DEVELOPMENT PLANS

Britt Sportsmen Club To Sponsor Management and Development Project At Eagle Lake

The Britt Club under the leadership of Elmer Anderson has called a meeting of all sportsmens groups in Hancock Co., the Twin Lakes Conservation Club, the Hancock County Chapter of the Izaak Walton League of America, and the Britt Sportsmens Club, as well as the general public alike. The purpose of the meeting is for the presentation of the detailed plans for the management and proposed development in the lake area.

Mr. B. I. Severson, of Ruthven, the Area Game Supervisor will present the management plans and will show slides of similar areas now under management.

Glen Yates, Assistant Superintendent of Federal Aid, will outline the proposed development project of the lake, made possible by the Pittman-Robertson Act. This is a Federal excise tax on guns and ammunition. These funds are prorated back to the states in proportion to the number of hunting licenses sold by the state, and in proportion to the amount of revenue sent in by that particular state.

There are several of these areas being developed in this vicinity. In Winnebago county the Rice Lake area, Harmon Lake and Myre Slough. In Hancock county the Ventura Marsh, with the East Twin Lake area under development at the present time.

The meeting will be held at the Community Hall at Britt on Friday April 11, at 8:00 p. m

The public is invited to attend.

WILL WE HAVE A SOFT BALL TEAM AGAIN THIS SEASON?

A lot of soft ball fans are wondering if Klemme will field another good soft ball team again this summer.

Now is a good time to plan ahead and there should be a meeting of the prospective players, fans and the Civic Club and all pull together to provide this fine summer sport.

Last year's team had a very successful season in winning the majority of their games and finishing the season with a balance in the treasury.

Vegetable Casserole Is Hearty Main Dish

Here's a vegetable casserole to serve up with a crisp salad of greens, hot muffins and a fruit dessert for an economical and hearty meal. It comes from the recipe box of Jewel Graham, Iowa State College nutritionist.

Combine 1 cup canned or cooked drained vegetables in a bowl with 1 cup cracker or bread crumbs, 1½ cups milk, 4 tablespoons melted butter of margarine, 2 egg yolks, 1 teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Saute 1 minced green pepper and 1 tablespoon minced onion in a small amount of fat and add to vegetable mixture.

Beat 2 egg whites until they hold a peak and fold into the vegetable mixture. Pour into a greased baking dish and lay 4 slices of bacon across the top. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in a pre-heated 350-degree F. oven for 40 minutes or until set in the center.

Corn, lima beans, peas, green beans, asparagus, carrots, tomatoes, or mixtures of these, are good vegetables to use in this recipe.

WHAT ABOUT SWINE INFLUENZA?

Q: How serious a problem is swine flu?

A: It doesn't actually kill many swine but it takes a tremendous financial toll each year. Affected pigs go off feed, losing up to 15 pounds. Also, swine flu victims are easier prey to cholera, enteritis and similar diseases.

Q: How does it act?

A: Hogs run a temperature, have a deep cough, tend to pile up, lose appetite, and become weak.

Q: What causes swine flu?

A: Both a germ and a virus, highly contagious. Sudden changes of weather, poorly-ventilated or draughty quarters, and cold rainy spells seem to make hogs more susceptible.

Q: If a flu outbreak starts, what should be done?

A: Have the trouble diagnosed immediately, so proper nursing and other treatment can be started. Move well pigs away from the sick ones.

Q: What about prevention?

A: Keep swine away from old straw stacks, where flu infection is often picked up. Be sure hogs have good shelter, with good bedding, proper light and ventilation. If new hogs are bought, isolate them for a week before allowing them to mix with the home herd.

NOTE: Due to space limitations, general questions cannot be handled by this column.

Railroads Carry Major Load Of UN's Effort in Korea

On the railroad that went to war in Korea, foxholes are the whistle stops and the fighting front is a freight yard.

Several dozen new diesel-electric locomotives nave been shipped to Korea recently, the U.S. Army Transportation Corps has disclosed. Unheralded in dispatches, they will be weapons nonetheless as crucial as the groaning trainloads of tanks, guns, supplies, and troops hauled north through the battered Korean countryside.

In the dark days of the Pusan foothold, an entire division was picked up and moved by train, 100 miles in less than 24 hours, to meet a Communist spearhead. Many another time rail transportation has spelled the difference between success and failure of United Nations operations. Railways have been used tactically to an extent not seen since the American Civil War. They have also carried 95 per cent of the U.N. supply load in some areas.

Japanese military engineers, in the years before World War II, built one of the Far East's finest rail networks in Korea. In many ways it was better than Japan's own narrow-gauge system. Track and equipment in Korea are standard gauge, built to match the Manchurian railways.

Roadbeds are well graded and well ballasted. Cuts and tunnels are reinforced with concrete and steel. Two and sometimes three bridges were built at vital river crossings on the 590-mile double track main line from Pusan north to Sinuiju on the Manchurian border Japan built a railroad to meet military needs Today the rails are doing just that, but not for the Japanese

Prior to the opening of hostilities in 1950 there were about 3,500 miles of standard-gauge lines and some 400 miles of narrow-gauge branches throughout Korea. But the Iron Curtain across the 38th parallel had already chopped the system in two. In South Korea, an area about the size of the state of Indiana, there were 2,730 miles of track, requiring 239 tunnels and 1,724 bridges.

Americans Are Now Taking Better Care of Their Teeth

Americans are now receiving almost twice as much dental care and at a proportionately lower cost than they did 15 years ago, The Journal of the American Dental Association has reported.

The report was based on an estimate of the U.S. Department of Commerce that nearly a billion dollars was expended for dental care in 1950 as compared with $320 million in 1935.

The increase in dental care was attributed to a growing demand for dental service and a population growth of 23 million in the past 15 years.

"The dental profession has not only been able to keep up with the growth in population but in 15 years actually has almost doubled the amount of dental care being provided per capita," The Journal said.

Even though services have increased nearly 100 per cent, Americans in 1950 spent less of their total income for dental care than they did in 1935.

The Journal pointed out that costs of dental care increased 56.8 per cent in the 15-year period while the cost of living rose 72 per cent. In 1935, payments to dentists amounted to 0.54 per cent of all consumer expenditures against 0.51 per cent in 1950.

The Journal estimated that more than 60 million persons received dental treatment in 1950 and that the average dental bill per patient was $16.50.

Name Trouble

An honest man, with no desire to cause trouble, was one named Burke, who was so entered, at his birth, on the Vital Statistics records When he entered school, the teacher wrote Burk in the school records and class rolls. On getting his first job, his employers copied his name as Birk in their personnel records. On the list of registered voters, an election clerk wrote his name as Birke. Along came his marriage, and our Burke was shown as Berke on the Vital Statistics records. He applied for electricity, and the public utility records now listed him as Berk. By this time, Burke was in quite a predicament as he was forced to use several of his aliases to avoid confusion. Then he became careless When he bought on credit, another clerk used Bork on his charge account. He borrowed money and carelessly signed Bourk on the note. The public records listed Buerck when he bought a house. Another job, and his Social Security record gave his name as Berck When taken to a hospital, the nurse posted his name as Borck. Only when Burke died, did his real name Burke, correctly appear on the Vital Statistics records again.

Generous Soldiers

Generosity of American troops overseas is shown again in a report from Chaplain Burr Millican, now on duty in the Far East. The men of Chaplain Millican's Army Ordnance battalion recently contributed $945.10 to pay for the passage of a Japanese student, Misako Hirabe, to the Wayland Baptist College, in Plainview, Texas, and for her return after she has completed her studies. The men also raised $62 to enable the Japanese girl to purchase personal items needed for the trip

Visiting around Iowa

by Joe Marsh

End Of The World

Folks around Fort Dodge, back in 1910, saw one of the strangest gatherings every held in Iowa.

Gypsies from all over America parked their wagons there on a high hill to await the end of the world. Someone had predicted that the end would come on May 4, 1910 . . . when the world passed through the gases of Hailey's Comet.

I've often wondered why people will follow blindly when some "prophet" or agitator comes up with an idea like that . . . instead of thinking things out for themselves. In a lesser degree, we've occasionally had the same problem with a fanatical "leader" right here in our town. Such folks don't think . . . they just jump to conclusions. Their only hope for a following is to get others to go along without thinking, either. Usually their appeal is to some form of prejudice or intolerance.

Luckily, they don't get far. Because Iowa people like to think things out for themselves. And when people use their heads, there isn't much room for fanaticism.

Here Are Reasons Why You Should Have—

A PET FOR YOUR CHILD

There's nothing quite like a soft, warm handful of baby chicks, kitten or puppy to awaken a child's love of animals. And along with the many other things he learns a wholesome understanding of how that small bit of life came about.

Pets and animals, big and small, take their place alongside books, toys, parents and school in teaching children many a worth-while lesson.

So next time you consider adding a kitten, dog or pony to the family circle, think a bit about what this step can mean to your youngsters. Chances are the inconveniencs that go hand in hand with keeping a pet won't loom so large.

Sharing the fun of a kitten's antics or a puppy's foolishness with your child is good for both of you, say child development specialists at Iowa State College. But be sure to show him right away how to love and handle an animal so that he won't hurt it, they say. He's apt to squeeze the chick with all his might or eagerly pick up the cat by her tail because he just doesn't know any better.

His Responsibility

Giving a child responsibility for care of a pet will build up his self-reliance and dependability. If he's very young he'll need reminders and a helping hand now and then, but he should be made to realize that if he's going to have a pup or a pony all his own, he must take good care of it.

Sometimes when things go wrong and a little boy or girl feels that no one understands, a dog or friendly bit of a hamster can supply lots of sympathy.

Give him a chance, and your child will discover that winning the slow trust of a wild kitten born and weaned under the barn can be a thrilling, rewarding adventure. He'll fill up with pride and tenderness when he bottle-feeds an orphan lamb till it stands firmly on its own small feet.

If the lamb dies, or the kitten is run over by a car-what then? Tragic as this is to a child, it helps him to accept early in life the inevitability of death. It will be easier for him if you share his sorrow, and explain to him the best you can why it had to happen.

Be Honest

Perhaps a pet or farm animal must be killed, given away or sold. If so, tell your youngster why it must be done, gently and sympathetically. Be honest with him about it, and he'll come to ask and expect your honest opinion on other matters later on.

"No, we just can't keep him," you say reluctantly when Billie trails home with a stray dog. Can't you, really?

If not, say no firmly and explain your reasons. It will be hard for him to accept, heartbreaking to turn away his new friend, but it will help him learn to overcome disappointment.

You may need to hold a child back from being too sensitive about animals. A love of animals is fine, but help him realize they aren't people and that nature has a way of taking them from us rather frequently.

Encourage your child to get to know the farm animals and he will eagerly anticipate each new calf or lamb or crop of baby chicks. He'll need your help in understanding them, in learning how to handle them and how to be careful around them. And,whether you live on a farm or in town, don't underestimate the value a pet can have in teaching your youngster a great deal about life.

Indirect Injuries Stated Top Problem in A-Bombing

Civil defense preparations should take into consideration the fact that from one-half to three-fourths of the casualties surviving an atomic bomb explosion will have incurred injuries other than those caused by the bomb itself.

This recommendation was made in a report by Dr. Fiorindo A. Simeone, Cleveland surgeon, to the Council on National Emergency Medical Service of the American Medical Association. These injuries, Dr. Simeone pointed out, are likely to be multiple and may be associated with burns and with the effects of nuclear radiation.

He pointed out that there will be a great number of indirect injuries. The collapse of buildings and shelters, flying debris, and especially flying glass will cause a large number of so-called mechanical wounds.

"Otherwise," he added, "there is nothing in the treatment of these wounds which sets them apart from those encountered daily in surgical practice.

"Any plan for the management of casualties in the event of an atomic bomb attack, however, must be conditioned by the fact that wounds will occur in overwhelming numbers. In addition, there will be widespread destruction of physical facilities.

"It is early after an atomic bomb attack that panic and confusion may exist. It is during that time that previously made plans for the management of mass casualties will be most effective."

Dr. Simeone said that the majority of casualties can be made quite comfortable by first-aid treatment and will not require narcotics for the relief of pain. Fear, anxiety and mental anguish are commonly mistaken for pain, he added.

From the experience of the Texas City, Texas, exp' sion several years ago, where 800 of approximately 4,000 casualties were injured severely enough to require hospitalization, it might be expected that one out of five of the casualties from an atomic attack would require treatment for wound shock, he said.

Music, News and Sports Follow US Armed Forces

Wherever they go, a part of the United States follows its soldiers via the air waves and the Armed Forces Radio Service.

In its job of making Americans feel "at home away from home," AFRS brings entertainment, education and information to thousands of soldiers stationed overseas

What began nine years ago as a small Army project has grown into an immense world-wide operation, with all three services participating AFRS provides the best in entertainment and complete news coverage to troops in Europe, the Far East, Africa, Alaska, the Canal Zone, ships at sea and military hospitals everywhere including the United States

Program production is the main function of the AFRS studios in Hollywood and New York Using top-talent artists in original productions and favorite shows provided by the major American radio networks, the studios send out a steady stream of news, music, comedy, drama and sports to widely scattered stations which range in size from a tiny four-watter in Mid-Pacific to two 100,000-watt stations in Germany The stations are operated by the service in that command and supplement AFRS schedules with local production.

The network shows are "de-commercialized" and recorded for overseas shipment, as are most of the standard AFRS programs. But special events, big sports attractions and news are sent directly over the global shortwave network, so that a soldier in Korea will know almost as quickly as a civilian in Chicago the latest world happenings.

Silken Canopy

America's clothing moths—dangerous only in their caterpillar or babyhood stage—belong largely to two families that emigrated from Europe with the nation's early settlers. The webbing clothes moth or Tineola biselliella is, when adult, red-headed and creamy in body color The case-bearing clothes moth or Tinea pellionella is a duller cream color with dark spots on its front wings. As caterpillars the two have different personalities as well. The webbing larva spins silk wherever it goes, lives in silk-lined tunnels eaten through clothing or bedding and feeds under a silken canopy. Its relative, the case-bearer, is a more practical sort. The latter builds its own house, which it carries everywhere and frequently enlarges. The house is often one of many colors since it is built of the threads upon which the worm is feeding. Both species are prolific as is shown in the estimate that the family developing from the eggs of one female moth can eat 92 pounds of wool a year!

Kilroy in Korea

Kilroy--the mysterious and mischievous World War II gadabout—is in Korea too. The famous name is serving as the call-sign for one of the Army's overseas radio broadcasting stations It is one of four mobile (operated from a field truck) outlets serving Army troops of several nations. The other mobile stations are Troubador and Gypsy and Vagabond, operated just behind the front lines for combat personnel, and a permanent station in Pusan.

MULTIFLORA ROSE AVAILABLE UNTIL MAY 1

Abundant supplies of year-old multiflora rose are available to landowners from th state forest nursery at Ames. Eighteen-inch stock may be secured through county extension directors, Co. soil district farm planners, and state conservation officers, at $17 per thousand. Plants secured from the forest nursery may not be purchased for landscaping of ornamental purposes, but are available for erosion control, wildlife plantings and living fences.

Multiflora rose is proving especially popular for living fences. It reaches a maximum growth in 6 to 8 years, of 8 feet high and 8 feet wide. It does not spread or sap the soil and will act as a livestock fence in from three to six years. The fence requires no trimming or pruning. It has proved excellent for wildlife cover. Nursery officials suggest orders be placed immediately.

List March Temperature As Subnormal

March went into the weather records with below normal temperatures. However temperatures in 1952 averaged six degrees warmer than for the same period in 1951. The average for March 1952, was 26.80 as compared with 20.66 in 1951.

The average high for the month was 34.55 and the minimum average was 19.06. The low for the month was a minus 1 recorded on both March 4 and 5 and the high temperature of 62 was recorded on March 30.

According to Earl Henschen, local weather observer at the Court House in Garner, a total of 3.24 inches of precipitation was recorded during the month of March as compared with 5.9 inches for the same period in 1951. The heaviest amount was recorded in the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. on March 18, when 1.02 inches fell. A snowfall of 17.88 inches during the month compared with 30.25 last year.

Twelve days in March were listed as fair, six partly cloudy and 13 as cloudy by Henschen. The heavy snow cover the latter part of Mar. was ideal for pastures and meadows and with favorable weather both pastures and meadows should get off to a good start this spring.

Obituary Of Carl Hansen

CARL HANSEN, age 83, died at his home in Klemme, early Monday morning, April 7, 1952.

He was a native of Denmark, born December 16, 1868.

He was baptized in the Lutheran Church at Odense, Denmark, and in due time became a member of this church by confirmation.

He attended the village school, and after completing his common school education, worked as a farm hand on various dairy farms.

In March, 1900, at the age of 32, he came to America, found work as a farm hand near Hampton, Iowa, and in December of the same year, Carl Hansen and Mary Steffensen were married. They had been friends in Denmark, both having spent their childhood years at Odense.

They lived at Hampton for a few years, and for a time Mary continued working as a nurse for Doctor Powers. Later Carl took up railroading and they lived at Coulter, then Thornton and then Clarion. In 1914 they moved on a farm which they operated as tenants for 12 years. Then they returned to the town of Thornton, where Carl Hansen operated a shoe repair shop for a number of years. In 1947, Carl and Mary Hansen moved to Klemme in retirement.

The wife Mary died in July of 1950.

For fifty golden years, Carl and Mary Hansen maintained a modest, well kept home, where friends were welcome and where seven children were born, five of whom survive.

And now, Carl Hansen, having spent a restless night, suddenly became quiet, murmured a childhood prayer, and lapsed into eternal sleep.

He reached the age of 83 years, 3 months and 22 days, and leaves to mourn his passing, five children:

One daughter, Oda of Klemme, Iowa
Four sons: Oage of Thornton, Iowa
Ole of Chillicothe, Mo.
Harry of Rockwell, Iowa
Alvin of LaCross, Wis.
and eight grand children.

NEW DOLL

Five year Dianne Hobson, of Hampton, has a brand new doll. It was brought back from France as a gift of the Paris Women's Club. Dianne was selected to recieve the gift as being representative of the children of American fighting men. Her father was in World War II, and has been recalled to active duty.

'TWAS A SHORT SPRING!

After enjoying a week of nice balmy spring weather in North Iowa, the weather man pulled a fast one and as the Times goes to press a rain has turned into snow, the ground is white and it looks like a blizzard is in the making. Highways are slippery and visibility is bad.

Phooey!

MAKE IT MILK—HOT OR COLD

When teenage youngsters carry school lunches, there are two rules to remember. One is to plan a sandwich that will be a near meal in itself, housing a main course and a hint of salad between its covers. The other is to provide as "they" would say "something to wash it with." But that second item can be definitely part of the meal, for a thermos of cold milk on warm days is a delight in itself. On cold days, a hot milk beverage adds a comforting note, and either way, milk adds needed nourishment.

Vegetables, such as raw carrots, small whole firm tomatoes, celery stalks, may be wrapped in waxed paper to keep their crispy freshness. Apples, bananas, oranges, pears, and peaches come in their own protecting coats. Hard-cooked eggs are liked, so too are deviled eggs. Cheese goes big either in a sandwich or as a nibble. Cup cakes, cookies, unfrosted loaf cakes are all good for the touch of the sweet young palates demand.

HOW TO CLEAN WASHABLE, NON-WASHABLE WALLPAPER

Every once in a while along comes one of those big cleaning jobs, such as making the walls look bright and new again. According to home management and home furnishings specialists at Iowa State College, the best cleaner to use on non-washable wallpaper is a commercial doughtype one.

First go over the wall with a long-handled wall brush of the dusting attachment of your cleaner. Using a cloth over a broom is apt to leave streaks that won't come off, specialists worn.

Next, knead a ball of the dough type cleaner until it's just about body temperature. Use long even strokes to clean the paper, just touching it lightly. Keep your strokes going in the same direction and continually work the soiled area of the cleaner into the center of the ball. When the dough is completely soiled, you're ready for a new ball of cleaner.

About washable wallpaper—even though it is said to be washable, you want to be very careful. First dust it, then test the paper's washability on a small area that won't show. Use a thick suds made from a mild soap or detergent and a minimum of lukewarm water. Applywith a sponge, wiping, not rubbing. Rinse with a second sponge wrung out of clear, lukewarm water. If this works well on a small area, you can plan to tackle the whole wall.

Spots or badly soiled areas come first. Use a sponge, brush or cloth for water-soluble stains; carbontetrachloride for greasy spots. Then you're ready to go over the whole wall with dough-type cleaner, followed by the soap-and-water washing you have already pretested.

Early Spring Is Time To Seed New Lawn

April is the best spring month to plant your new lawn.

A. E. Cott, extension horticulturist at Iowa State College, reports that early spring is the best time to get your lawn seeded, before the spring rains come.

The first step, he says, is to prepare a good seedbed. After the area has been leveled with at least 8 to 10 inches of topsoil, mix in some 10-20-10 fertilizer at a rate of 15 pounds per 1,000 square feet.

Next, sow a high- quality seed mixture evenly. A good mixture for most Iowa lawns is 3 lbs. of Kentucky bluegrass and 1 lb. of redtop. Sow at the rate of 4 lbs. for every 1,000 square feet.

If your lawn is in a moist, shady area, add a lb. of chewing fescue to the mixture.

After the lawn comes up, Cott recommends following a good fertilizer program to keep a good turf. One good schedule is 4 lbs. of ammonium sulfate or other type of nitrogen fertilizer every 1,000 square feet applied April 1 and June 1; 6 to 8 lbs. of a 10-6-4 about September 1, and 1 cubic yd. top dressing of composted soil or fine black peat in November.

One of the 2,4-D weed-killing compounds will aid in combatting weeds after the lawn has become established in the summer.

Life Insurance Ownership More than Double 1941 Total

Life insurance owned by American families in the nation's more than 600 life insurance companies increased to a record $253,200,000,000 in 1951, the Institute of Life Insurance reports.

This is $131,000,000,000 more than was owned at the end of 1941; $101,000,000,000 more than at the end of 1945.

"Life insurance ownership has expanded more rapidly than population, both as to aggregate amount owned and number of owners," Holgar J. Johnson, Institute president, commented. "This has been true not only over the past ten years, but over the entire first half of this century. The nation's policyholders now number 86,000,000, they own 209,500,000 policies and the average insurance per policyholder has reached $2,900. Such figures combine to make a huge aggregate of life insurance outstanding.

"The many social services of life insurance, in evidence from the outset of the business over a century ago, will be amplified materially in the years ahead through this widening ownership."

Another record figure attained in the past year is the $4,000,000,000 of payments to American families by their life insurance companies.

These payments brought to $30,000,000,000 the aggregate paid out to policyholders or beneficiaries in the past decade. The 1951 total is 58 percent greater than the 1941 figure, a rise of $1,475,000,000.

Death benefit payments increased to $1,725,000,000, some $135,000,000 more than the year before and $715,000,000 more than in 1941. The large total was chiefly a reflection of the wider ownership. The death rate among policyholders remained at a very low level during 1951.

New, Safer Method of Blood Transfusion Is Reported

A new and safer method of giving blood transfusions to elderly patients and to other persons with heart diseases and associated disorders has been described in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The procedure consists of giving sedimented red blood cells with the patient in a sitting position, instead of whole blood with the patient in a horizontal position.

The frequency of complicating conditions in transfusions led to the development of the technique, according to Drs. Victor Ginsberg, Nathan R. Frank and Richard S. Guber, of the blood bank and department of medicine of the Kings County Hospital, Brooklyn, N.Y.

"In situations requiring transfusion of large amounts of blood, a practical difficulty is frequently imposed by associated disorders which restrict the ability of the heart to accommodate an increased blood volume," the doctors said.

Under the new procedure, red blood cells are allowed to settle in bottles in a refrigerator for approximately 48 hours. The plasma is then siphoned off with the aid of an empty vacuum bottle, leaving only the necessary red blood cells which are used in the transfusion. The sedimented blood is administered with the use of gravity at an elevation of four feet by means of an 18- or 17-gauge needle.

The important advantages of this method include the reduction of the volume of fluid administered by practically one-half, the elimination of three-quarters of the sodium content of the blood, and the averting of the air vesicles and tissues of the lung becoming filled with serous fluid, according to the report.

Accelerated Mining

The heavily increased requirements for nickel and copper during World War II were met by International Nickel by calling upon its underground mines and by greatly accelerating ore production from its Frood-Stobie open pits where production was started in 1939. Daily ore production from the pits was increased from the 6,000 tons-per-day, originally planned, to 20,000 tons-per-day during the war years. As a consequence of the heavy war drain upon the open pits and of their large post-war output, it is anticipated that by 1953 the only surface nickel deposits owned by International Nickel in Canada will have been exhausted. Through expansion of its underground mining capacity it is the objective of the Company to replace the pits with the equivalent underground capacity to preserve its current rate of production of nickel.

The Last Must be Tough

The swelling of the wooden last on which a shoe is made may cause the width of a shoe to be, for instance, a 9-C instead of a 9-B. Consequently, it is of the greatest importance to shoe manufacturers to prevent such variation when high humidity prevails. New moisture-repellent coatings have now been developed which make it possible to overcome this trouble. These coatings also protect the lasts against the rugged treatment they receive in the factories. From the time a shoe last enters the factory it is exposed to a succession of punishments that few wood products experience. It's pounded in heavy machines, nails are driven into it, steamed leather is wrapped around it, the toe end is exposed to a chemical called "box toe softener" and it is heated in a drying oven.

Mobilized Infantry To Go Over or Through Terrain

The Army is conquering an ancient military foe—terrain.

The new tracked vehicles, now being produced for the Army's Ordnance Corps, are the latest weapons in a continuing fight to overcome the effect of ground obstacles on military mobility and manueverability.

Just as aircraft are employed as a means of "hopping over" difficult terrain, the newly-developed additions to the Army's motorized ground fleet offer infantry a chance to "push through" on any type of battlefield.

These new "trucks with tracks" are an armored personnel carrier—to enable foot troops to ride into combat along with tank units—and a versatile, amphibious vehicle—designed to move through mud, water, marshes and snow with the ease of dry land operation.

The steel-plated, full-tracked personnel carrier will operate in any terrain suitable for tanks. It will put infantry troops in the forward elements of an armored spearhead, with speed and safety comparable to that of the tank crews.

Protection from small arms fire and flying shell fragments plus a sustained speed of 35 miles an hour is claimed for the infantry-carrying vehicle by the Army Ordnance Corps. It is armed with a .50-caliber machine gun.

The 20-ton carrier, in addition to its primary mission of transporting a 12-man squad of soldiers into battle, can be used as a cargo or litter carrier, a prime mover for towed artillery, or a command-post car.

Although smaller in size, the amphibious vehicle is capable of doing even bigger things toward the conquest of difficult terrain. Popularly known as the "Otter," this all-purpose, all-terrain equipment already has proved itself capable of making its cleated tracks take hold in nearly every type of ground.

Remains of Old Sharks Found In Ecuador Province

Fossil remains of two kinds of long-snouted sharks, which swam in New World seas as much as 100,000,000 years ago, have recently been added to the Smithsonian Institution collections. Hitherto, bones of both of these ancient creatures were known only from the rocks of France and North Africa. They represent entirely extinct lines. Perhaps roughly like present-day sawfishes, they were predatory sea creatures at the close of the Mosozoic era when the great dinosaurs were declining and when mammals were making their bid for supremacy on land.

What apparently were the spines of one of these extinct fishes were obtained by Geological Survey explorers Joseph H. Sinclair and Theron Wasson in the Oriente Province of Ecuador. These spines are approximately 2 inches long. Another kind, represented by teeth of its "saw," came to the Smithsonian from the Georgia Kaolin Company and was found, together with fossil remains of other ancient fishes and part of the shell of a long-extinct turtle, in Twiggs County, Ga.

The fossils are significant in showing the wide distribution of these fishlike creatures. The remains are so fragmentary that little can be done toward reconstructing a picture of these old sea carnivores. Presumably, however, they did not differ materially from living members of the shark group.

The oldest remains of sharks have been found in rocks deposited during Devonian times 350,000,000 years ago. The present-day species retain many of the oldest structural characters and indeed represent an ancient line of descent.

World Movies

Most nations—the United States, Belgium, and Cuba are among the few exceptions—impose varying restrictions on the importation of commercial movies. Many are traceable to the postwar devaluation of foreign currencies and the dollar shortage. Others are the result of government attempts to foster or fortify domestic film industries. In Argentina, Spain, and Italy, for example, laws are in force which require the showing of domestic films during a certain portion of each theater's week. Other devices used to subsidize local film production are high taxes and censorship fees on foreign screenings. In spite of restrictions, the demand for American films—among the most lavish and technically superior in the world—continues to grow, keeping pace with a global increase in theater facilities. Today, an estimated 99,600 motion picture theaters are in operation in more than 120 countries—providing about one seat for every 44 persons on earth.

Natural Gas

Natural gas consists of about 90 per cent of methane, also known as "marsh gas," since it is formed by decaying vegetation in marshes. The additional 10 per cent is ethane, hydrogen and other gases. Natural gas is not as poisonous as the manufactured gases, which generally contain carbon monoxide, but the hazards from fire and explosion are just as great and it should not be handled carelessly Since natural gas has practically no smell, a small amount of some odorous substance is usually added to it, in order to make it easier to smell when there are leaks.
